Ants and Men.
Inge's Marriage Idea.
Hormones and Youth.
War, Says Briand.

—By ARTHUR BRISBANE—

ON THE ITALIAN island of Stromboli yesterday there occurred, simultaneously, a severe earthquake and a deadly eruption of the Stromboli volcano.

The earthquake destroyed some small houses. Burning rocks thrown high into the air by the volcano fell upon little villages, clustered around the base of the volcano.

For thousands of years Stromboli has been a deadly menace, and for thousands of years people have rebuilt their houses, and continued to dwell at the volcano's foot.

And we wonder that ants rebuild when our feet crush their nests in the garden path.

DEAN INGE, ruler of St. Paul's Cathedral in London, startles other clergymen with the suggestion that marriages might well be tried for periods shorter than "life." The dean would allow "limited marriage contracts," and would have the government recognize them. Only "till death us do part" marriages would receive the blessing of the church.

The Rev. Dr. Mellish, of Brooklyn, replies that Rome tried two kinds of marriage centuries ago, short marriages for unimportant people, lifelong marriages for more important people, but it didn't work.

DEAN INGE'S suggestion can be proved unwise without dragging in the church, or "spirit."

Marriage is an institution of discipline, devised to make men better, gradually. The process is slow, but it is real.

Besides, the last years of married life ought to be the best, and usually are, in spite of divorce records.

To have, in old age, one friend interested in your troubles, and your symptoms, is precious above all other possessions.

SCIENTISTS GATHERED in Cincinnati are told that new methods of rejuvenation, better than the Voronoff "gland grafting," have been discovered. Compounds made of mysterious "hormones" will do the work, some "hormones" being taken from glands that could never be transplanted.

The old may be made to live a little longer, but science will never discover anything better than friendly death, which removes men worn out, and makes room for new energy.

THE LEARNED Voronoff, who, by the use of monkey glands, extends the lives of old men, says "All Americans are dead at 50." He does not mean that they actually die, but that they are worn out at 50, and might as well be dead.

There is no doubt that men in America wear out early. Their eyes grow dim, hair white, step slow and knees stiff, too early.

But they GET THINGS DONE, which is more important than remaining young.

BRIAND, FRENCH foreign minister, warns Europe that, unless it establishes a "United States of Europe" WAR IS CERTAIN.

Representing the most powerful nation in the League of Nations, he no longer believes that League able to keep the world out of war. It is just as well that we kept out of the League. And if we could keep out or get out of the League Court, that would be an improvement.

WHILE BRIAND says war is certain without a "United States of Europe," France has been holding elaborate army maneuvers on the Franco-German frontier.

Fifty thousand picked troops marched, and 300 airplanes roared within sight and hearing of the Germans, which did not please them, or look peaceful to them.

BY WAY OF confirming Briand's statement about the probability of war, Italy enters on a 10 years' project to build a "formidable army, ready to cope with whatever emergency."

It is no secret that France is the emergency that Mussolini and Italy have in mind.

MARCONI BELIEVES that radio waves will travel off millions of miles through space.

If the sun can send rays of light through 93,000,000 miles of space, there is no reason why radio waves shouldn't go as far in the other direction

This ought to mean that we shall talk to the other planets soon, if they have any inhabitants able to talk

PRESIDENT BUTLER, of Columbia University, says that if the Republican party in New York doesn't go wet, as the Democratic party has done, New York state will go Democratic by 500,000. On the other hand, if the Republican party does turn wet, it will beat Gov Roosevelt and the Democrats

Prohibitionists say that Dr Butler reminds them of an evil spirit leading the Republican party up on to a high mountain, and offering it everything in sight to turn wet.

Park Killing Story Doubted, Detectives Arrest Pair; Woman's Cries Revealed

Mrs. Bertha Hymovitz, of 3422 Milwaukee street, was arrested today by Homicide Lieut. Frank Ferris in connection with the slaying of her husband, Meyer Hymovitz.

Also in the custody of detectives is Nathan Tombofsky, 22, the woman's brother. He was arrested last night by detectives who have announced they discredit the story of Mrs. Hymovitz in which she said her husband was shot by an unidentified Negro who accosted her in Reservoir Park, Herron Hill, on the night of September 2.

WOMAN CRYING

Investigating detectives say they learned from neighbors living in the vicinity of the park, that the woman had been heard crying a half hour before the shooting occurred, and the homicide squad is now working on the theory that Hymovitz struck his wife during a quarrel, and that the shooting was done in defense of Mrs. Hymovitz.

It was learned following the killing that the parents of the woman had strongly objected to their daughter's marriage to Hymovitz. Unemployed, Hymovitz was forced to leave the Tombofsky home, and meetings in the park at night followed.

DIES IN HOSPITAL

They were holding such a meeting on the night Hymovitz was fatally shot. The wife says she sent her husband away to learn if lights were burning in her home, and while he was gone a Negro sat down beside her. Upon her husband's return, according to Mrs. Hymovitz, the Negro shot him. The bullet entered his body below the heart and his death resulted three days later in the hospital.

Police discredit this story. They say there are flaws in her description of the Negro. Detectives declare they are positive that Hymovitz and his wife were engaged in an argument on that night.

'HILL' LEADERS WAR GROWS

Joseph Engelsberg has indicated he will stand pat on the list of nominees he recommended to the Redistricting Commission for election as board officers in the reduced number of voting districts in the Third Ward.

Alderman John J. Verona, who disputes Engelsberg's claim to the Republican ward chairmanship, had recommended candidates for the same election board places and yesterday substituted some of his original nominees.

RACKET CHARGES

Engelsberg and Verona had made counter charges of each other's candidates, in which the prospective election board officers

Notables Arrive For Lipton Yacht Race Tomorrow

NEWPORT, R. I., Sept. 12.—Two internationally famous yachts—Sir Thomas Lipton's Shamrock V, her green hull sleek and shimmering, and Harold S. Vanderbilt's Enterprise, her tall mast erect against the sky—smung idly at their moorings today, groomed and ready for the America's cup series, which start tomorrow morning, in a race that will be witnessed by many thousands of spectators.

As the hour for the start of the race neared, Newport Harbor, Brenton's cove and the waters adjacent to Block Island were dotted with craft of all descriptions.

CRAFT OF ALL TYPES

Steam and motor yachts, schooners, ketches, yawls, sloops and cutters and even warships had arrived with crowds of people eager to view the spectacle. There were craft from Marblehead and Maine, from Philadelphia and New York and from Long Island Sound and Massachusetts.

Scores of the wealthiest persons in America had come in their private yachts.

Among them were George F. Baker, Mrs. Moses Taylor and Vice Commander W. W. Aldrich, of the New York Yacht Club; Edward W. Clark, of Philadelphia; Mr. and Mrs. H. Manville, Jr., and Oliver Gould Jennings.

MORGAN EXPECTED

Mr. and Mrs. Junius S. Morgan and their guests are expected today aboard J. P. Morgan's yacht Corsair.

And by train and automobile thousands of other persons were pouring into Newport to view the race from the embankments and cliffs along the course. For visitors unable to board spectator craft, a huge grandstand, four miles long, perched high upon the cliffs between Price's Neck and Pirates Cave, has been set aside for parked automobiles. Private homes and the hotels of Newport are packed to capacity.

Betting on the race is light with the odds favoring Enterprise to successfully defend America's yacht supremacy. The series represents Thomas Lipton's latest hope for achievement of his more than three-decade ambition to take the cup back to the British Isles. Sir Thomas, who has been indisposed of late, will view the race from the deck of the Erin.

Allen Due to Leave Hospital in Month

BALTIMORE, Sept. 12.—(AP.)—Senator Henry J. Allen, of Kansas, recovering after a major operation Wednesday at Johns Hopkins Hospital, should be able to leave in a month if his progress continues satisfactory, it was said at the hospital today. He passed a satisfactory night.

GERMAN LINK WITH REDS FEARED

Held Preliminary to War With Poland; Move to Set Up Dictatorship Asol Seen

By OTTO D. TOLISCHUS.
International News Service.

BERLIN, Sept. 12.—Growing alarm is sounded in German Democratic circles over the alleged dark plans of certain German generals.

In their extremist form, it is charged, these plans aim at nothing less than establishment of a military dictatorship and an alliance with the Red army of Russia, for reconquest of the Polish corridor and the smashing of the Young plan, with other corrections of the Versailles treaty to follow.

Such plans are vehemently denied and ridiculed by the German Ministry of National Defense and by the generals involved. But they hang like a threatening thundercloud over the German nation, are whispered in ever-new versions from mouth to mouth and break out even in the most responsible party newspapers, in open or veiled forms.

HINDENBURG INVOLVED

The men mainly mentioned in connection with such plans are President von Hindenburg, Maj. Oscar von Hindenburg, the President's son and supposedly the connecting link between the President and the generals; Gen. Curt von Schleicher, head of the ministerial office in the ministry of National Defense and the strongest man in the army; and Gen. Curt von Hammerstein, head of

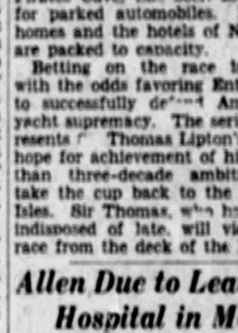
Coolidge Praises U. S. Record in Diplomacy

SARANAC INN, N. Y., Sept. 12.

To the Editor of the Sun-Telegraph:

From the time when President Washington negotiated the Jay Treaty with England up to the present hour, almost every important agreement ratified with a foreign power has been accompanied in this country by bitter criticism of our own government and wholesale assaults upon the other contracting country. Yet in the light of history, it would be hard to find such an agreement that has not been fairly justified by results. After the bad temper of the period has been dissipated by time and reason, the mutual advantages have been apparent. Our diplomacy has not been inferior. Our statesmen have been able to be just to ourselves and fair to others.



Calvin Coolidge.

Rancor of such nature not only does not pay, but it is not right. We want to live on friendly terms with all the world. Instead of catering to the instinct of the barbarian who considered every stranger an enemy, we shall make more progress if we follow the dictates of religious enlightenment which teaches that all men are brothers. The breadth of our civilization is measured in no small part by the attitude of our people toward foreign people.

CALVIN COOLIDGE.

BUS-CAB CRASH INJURES FIVE

Five persons were injured today when a Green taxicab and a bus of the Pittsburgh Motor Coach Company collided at North Euclid avenue and Margaretta street.

Miss Anna M. Diehl, 46, an employe of the Stanton Heights Golf Club, passenger in the cab, suffered a fractured left arm, head lacerations and shock. She was removed to the West Penn Hospital. Coach passengers, reported suffering from bruises and shock, were Mary Dickenson, 5634 Stanton avenue; W. J. Dempsey, 1456 North Highland avenue; Mrs. J. D. Stevenson and her daughter, Emma, of 1400 North Highland avenue. All went home after the accident.

William Weismes, 27, of 151 Kendall avenue, Bellevue, driver of the cab, and F. P. Scheboth, in charge of the coach, were arrested on reckless driving charges. The vehicles were slightly damaged.

Coolidges Attend Insurance Session

SARANAC INN, N. Y., Sept. 12.—(INS.)—Former President Calvin Coolidge and Mrs. Coolidge were here today from their Massachusetts home. The former president will attend the annual convention of a life insurance company of which he is a director.

Town Hall Hearing Set Tuesday

Another meeting for consideration of a site for the proposed Town Hall will be held Tuesday at 2 p. m., Chairman Joseph G. Armstrong, of the county commissioners, announced today. The plan to be followed is selecttion of a site by process of elimination, Armstrong indicated.

MAYOR CONFERS ON CITY WORK

His first meeting was with Dr. C. B. Maits, of the Department of Health. Director of Public Safety James M. Clark, Director of Public Works Edward G. Lang and the others will be called to his office within the next day or so.

CONFIDENTIAL TALK

The Mayor said:

"I want to have a confidential talk with all of the members of my cabinet. If any news should develop, I'll be glad to make it public. Dr. Maits and I talked over the routine business of his department."

Eventually, the Mayor said, he plans to meet with Lang and the members of Council to discuss the

Mother's Plea Saves Son Held for Theft

William J. Brown, 19, of 2726 Merwin avenue, Sheraden, accused of taking $60 from his mother, Mrs. Mary Brown, was turned over to welfare workers by Magistrate Thomas D. Jones, in Morals Court today, when she pleaded that the youth be given another chance.

The mother said:

"He's a good boy when he works, but he's been out of work for a long time now and he has a girl."

WALSH ADMITS THEFT GUILT

Attorney Winfield S. Walsh, who sought to retrieve his fortunes by plunging in Florida real estate and the stock market, pleaded guilty in Criminal Court today to embezzling $36,605.91 from the Thrift Building and Loan Association and $18,278.94 from the Dormont Building and Loan Association, for which he was counsel.

Judge George V. Moore withheld sentence for three weeks at the request of the state banking department and counsel for the Thrift association, who said they desired to make a further investigation.

ADMITS CHARGES

Attorney W. H. Coleman, who represented Walsh, told the court:

"Walsh admits the charges against him. His trouble comes from the unfortunate crash in Florida real estate. He sought to save his investments there and poured money in. As a last desperate attempt to save himself he played the stock market."

In explaining his anxiety to stage a financial comeback Walsh said:

"It wasn't my own money invested in Florida, but $500,000 of my neighbors and friends. If I am given leniency, I promise to devote the rest of my life to make restitution."

CHARACTER WITNESSES

Among numerous character witnesses were Assistant United States Attorney Raymond D. Evans, Attorneys George E. Alter and William Kidney and representatives of several Methodist organizations with which Walsh long had been identified.

2 NORTH SIDE MEN ROBBED AT PLANT

Bandits Threaten Woman as She Screams Warning; Seize Money and Escape

Three well-dressed young bandits armed with a single revolver snatched the $7,900 payroll of the W. N. Sauer Company, plumbing, heating and ventilating contractors, from two employes in front of the company's office, 816 Chestnut street, at 11 o'clock today.

Gun and loot in hand, one of the bandits, dashing from the scene, ran headlong into Mrs. Mary Thompson, of 1014 Goehring street, who witnessed the robbery. She screamed, and the bandit thrust a gun in her face and threatened to shoot. The woman, defying the gunman's threat, continued the scream and spread an alarm.

STAGED AT PLANT

The holdup was staged as George Moelter, 21, a clerk, of 54 Angle street, Etna, and E. W. Hanson, 59, a heating inspector of 919 Eldora place, stopped their auto in front of the company's building. Hanson was driving the car, and Moelter, seated beside him, was carrying a package containing $9,000 they had secured at the National Bank of America, East Ohio street.

As the car stopped the three bandits appeared. One robber nonchalantly reached into the machine and turned off the ignition. One of his accomplices pointed a gun and ordered Moelter to put up his hands and turn over the money. Moelter said the package was snatched from him before he had an opportunity to comply with the bandit's demand.

The thieves then ran to their waiting automobile, parked with motor running, in Phineas street, around the corner. Mrs. Thompson said she witnessed the robbery, but thought it was an automobile accident.

LICENSE YS-461

G. W. Taylor, of Avalon, attracted by Mrs. Thompson's screams, chased the highwaymen in his automobile. He lost the speeding car at North avenue and East street, but reported it was a Buick sedan, license YS-461. The car is being sought by squads of police who believe the robbers were headed toward the north boroughs.

North Side Patrolmen Andrew Judas and Thomas Vuletich, giving chase to the men in a commandeered automobile, reported they picked up the trail of the bandit car at North avenue and Arabian way. They followed them to Bellevue where they lost the trail.

W. N. Sauer said the money was insured. He announced he would pay his employes by check in the future.

A description of the thieves was given as follows: They were all aged between 25 and 30, medium height and build. All three were foreigners. Two wore dark suits and one a light gray suit. One man in dark suit wore a mustache.

Sproul Cleared Of Fraud Charge

PHILADELPHIA, Sept. 12.—(AP.)—Federal Judge Kirkpatrick today absolved the late William C. Sproul, former governor of Pennsylvania, and Newton P. Jackson, promoters of the South Penn Collieries Company, of charges of fraud and negligence in the promotion of the company, and dismissed a bill in equity filed by Robert H. Buchanan, receiver of the company.

Gossips Again Link Wales With Swedish Princess

LONDON, Sept. 12.—(INS.)—Gossips were busy again today trying to choose a mate for the Prince of Wales, Britain's perennial bachelor.

His name and that of Princess Ingrid of Sweden, linked by gossip several times in the past, again were paired today with arrival of the princess for a visit in England.

The Crown Prince and Crown Princess of Sweden are coming to London later, to join Princess Ingrid for the fall season.

Meanwhile the Prince of Wales, blithely unmindful of the presence in London of the Swedish Princess, is vacationing at Le Touquet, France, playing golf.

PLANK WINS WHEELER PRAISE

Montana Senator, Recognized As 'Dry,' Indorses View Of New York Governor

WASHINGTON, Sept. 12.—The frank declaration of Gov. Roosevelt, of New York, for repeal of the Eighteenth Amendment today brought a wave of speculation over its potential effects on the presidential race of 1932.

Today's reaction was the announcement of Senator Burton K. Wheeler (Dem., Montana) that he fully indorses Roosevelt's stand and believes the matter of prohibition should be returned to the various states. Wheeler has been recognized as a prohibitionist.

SEES DRY LAW "FAILURE"

His statement follows:

"I voted for prohibition in Montana because I felt the old saloon was a curse to the American people, and I wanted to do away with it. In the old days the breweries in many instances owned the fixtures, the building, and the license, and in many instances controlled local politics.

"I am no more in favor of the saloon, no more in favor of the sale of liquor today than I was before, but under prohibition you have, in many cities, more dives and speakeasies where they are openly selling rotten whisky than you had in the old days. Today, in many communities, the bootlegger is becoming a greater political power and has more influence than the old-time saloon keeper as evidenced by the fact that he is able to reach many of our higher officials. He is generally a much lower type of citizen. He has had a frightful corrupting influence upon our social, moral and political life.

"In view of the fact that this administration and the previous administrations have apparently been helpless in stamping out the evil I am reluctantly forced to the opinion that national prohibition is a failure and that each state should be left to regulate the liquor traffic as a majority of its citizens deem advisable."

The political master minds agreed that Roosevelt had made his announcement solely for its effect on the New York electorate in the coming gubernatorial campaign, but there was an equally generous feeling it would bob up again in 1932.

DEMOCRATS STARTLED

The Democrats were startled. Many had looked on Roosevelt as a "sure bet" for the 1932 nomination.

Some of this group feared his anti-dry stand would alienate all Southern support and cost him the nomination.

SMITH, RASKOB PRAISE

NEW YORK, Sept. 12.—(AP.)—Former Gov. Alfred E. Smith today said of Gov. Franklin D. Roosevelt's pronouncement on prohibition:

"It was exactly what was to be expected from him after the deep and careful consideration which he gave the entire subject. It is a straightforward presentation of his conclusions."

John J. Raskob, chairman of the Democratic National Committee, sent a telegram to Gov. Roosevelt in which he said in part:

"Hearty congratulations! on your clear statement regarding prohibition. You have struck a ... which I feel will place ... nocratic party solidly ... he program to restore ... see and temperate liv... ... ur country."

Scolded Boy Cries Steadily 47 Hours

WORCESTER, Mass., Sept. 12.—(INS.)—After crying steadily for 47 hours, Joseph Ruseckus, 13, stopped sobbing at City Hospital today. He started crying when reprimanded by his school teacher while attempting to recite a lesson. During some of the hours of crying he was in a coma.

MAYOR CONFERS ON CITY WORK

rail and river terminal projects, the subway and other matters.

He declared:

"I haven't the slightest idea when that will be. Give me a little time."

CITY FINANCES

The most important problem facing him is the state of the city's finances as measured against the improvements being demanded and the constant insistence upon lower taxes. The Mayor continued:

"I wish we had a billion or two, but I think a lot of good work was done this summer."

He specified the extension of the Boulevard of the Allies, the new East Street Bridge and the Irvine avenue widening.

The first start toward a subway, the Mayor said, would be an agreement with the Pittsburgh Railways Company. A subway in Cincinnati, he went on, was not used for three years after its completion.

The Mayor added:

"I want to talk all of these improvements over with Director Lang."

SILENT ON McARDLE

The Mayor said he had not seen Director of Public Safety Clark and would not comment on the vacancy in the inspectorship of the South Side police district caused by the forced resignation of John J. McArdle.

The ward chairmen and other hunters of jobs and favors seemed inclined to respect the Mayor's request for 48 hours peace. Few appeared at his office today.

CITY TO HONOR CONSTITUTION

Mayor Kline today issued a proclamation setting aside the week of September 14 for observance of the signing of the Constitution, the 143rd anniversary of which falls on September 17. He suggests that appropriate sermons be preached in the churches and fitting music and patriotic exhibitions be provided in various institutions.

Schools and colleges, he assumes, will hold patriotic exercides befitting the anniversary day.

Peruvian Claims Columbus Landed Before 1492

HAMBURG, Germany, Sept. 12.—(AP.)—Prof. Luis Ulloa, director of the Peruvian National Library at Lima, in an address at the Americanists Congress last night said newly discovered documents show that Christopher Columbus visited America once before 1492, the accredited historical date of discovery.

The professor said that Columbus accompanied Danish Corsairs on a voyage which took them from Ireland to Greenland, Labrador, Newfoundland and the American continent.

Columbus, he declared, was not Genoese, but a Catalonian Corsair. He challenged documents heretofore produced, such as the alleged will of Columbus, as falsifications.

CURRAN WARNS REPUBLICANS

WASHINGTON, Sept. 12.—Henry H. Curran, president of the Association Against the Prohibition Amendment, declares that the defeats of dry Republicans in Michigan and Washington are direct warnings for Republican leaders to wake up and get at the real opinion of their followers. He added:

"If they don't do it pretty soon, the Democrats will do it for them on election day."

He recommended that the heads of the Republican National Committee sit down together and try to realize what is happening among Republicans when three such stalwart districts as the Sixth and Seventh Michigan and the First Washington throw out a dry and replace him in the primaries. He went on:

"Up in Vermont—the only state besides Utah which went for Mr. Taft in 1912—the rock-ribbed Republican Congressional district west of the Green Mountains gives Mr. Brennan, the anti-dry Republican candidate for the nomination, 10,000 votes while his opponent, Gov. Weeks, the most popular man in Vermont since he handled flood relief, receives only 3,000 more to secure the nomination."

Eloping Rich Wife Leaves Dude Rancher

LOS ANGELES, Sept. 12.—(INS.)—Mrs. Catherine Thorne Gillespie, who eloped with George (Big Boy) Gillespie, Arizona "dude rancher," a year and a half ago, today was en route to the Chicago home of her multi-millionaire father, Robert J. Thorne, one-time president of Montgomery Ward.

Her husband, now a miniature golf course proprietor, said she was going merely for a visit.

Hurt As He Starts Plane's Propeller

Hit by the propeller of an airplane he was starting today at Bettis Field, Mello Dausa, 21, of Export, suffered a severe injury to his right hand.

Envoy M'Nider Breaks Law Appearing in Army Garb

WASHINGTON, Sept. 12.—(INS.)—Col. Hanford MacNider, new United States minister to Canada, violated tradition and technically violated the law when he presented his letters of credence to Premier Bennett recently, attired in his Army dress uniform, but it was considered unlikely today that the State Department would do anything about it.

MacNider, past national commander of the American Legion and a former Assistant Secretary of War, chose to dress in his regimentals rather than appear in the traditional dress of an American.

The department admitted that technically MacNider had violated the law, which placed a ban on any sort of uniform for American diplomatic representatives.

Officials said, however, that MacNider had asked permission to wear his regimentals, and that it had been granted under a law enacted in 1867 permitting Civil War veterans to wear their uniforms in the diplomatic service abroad. The department put its own construction on the law to meet MacNider's request, it appeared. Officials construed the law to mean that Congress intended veterans of all wars to appear in their military uniforms as diplomats.

$75,000 BONDS IN CRATER'S VAULTS

Securities Found as Police Hunt Missing N. Y. Judge In Adirondacks Lodge

NEW YORK, Sept. 12.—The New York World says that an examination of the safe deposit box of Joseph Force Crater, missing Supreme Court justice, has resulted in the discovery of securities worth $75,000.

At the time of Justice Crater's disappearance on August 6, he had virtually depleted his two bank accounts by withdrawing $5,500, and this was generally believed the extent of his wealth.

Discovery of the securities was made by friends, who pointed out that Justice Crater, had he wanted to do so, could have realized many times the sum he took with him.

SEARCH PRESSED

Meanwhile, police pressed their search for the missing justice in at least three places in the Adirondacks.

The most promising club came from the manager of a public hunting lodge at Racquette Lake, who said two men, one of whom he was "positive" was the missing justice, had stopped at his lodge August 30 and part of August 31. Two detectives are trailing these two men.

GRAND JURY CASE

Various rumors circulated in connection with the mysterious disappearance of Crater, together with countless reports of why he disappeared and where he went, will be placed before the county grand jury Monday, it was announced today by District Attorney Thomas C. T. Crain.

Crain's announcement followed the refusal of Chief City Magistrate Joseph E. Corrigan to conduct a "John Doe" inquiry. Corrigan held he was without power to do so.

In his investigation of income tax fraud in connection with the alleged purchase by George F. Ewald of his office of magistrate, United States Attorney Tuttle said he has discovered that Martin J. Healy, Tammany leader, who received $10,000 from Mrs. Ewald about the time of her husband's appointment, was paid more than $22,000 in nine years by the American Book Company to promote the sale of its text books in the public schools.

Woods Run police raided a confectionery store of Tony Pagelo, 1028 Beaver avenue, today, and confiscated six gallons of moonshine and coloring extract, they reported. Pagelo was arrested on a charge of keeping a disorderly house.

Eight Killed as Car Runs Wild in Odessa

ODESSA, Sept. 12.—(AP.)—Eight passengers were killed and 50 injured when a derailed street car ran away down a hill and crashed into the entrance to a railway bridge. Officials blamed defective brakes.

GIRL FOILS SHOE STORE HOLDUP

The frightened cry of Dorothy Simon, 18-year-old clerk, foiled a holdup of the Sonia Shoe store, 402 Smithfield street, this morning.

As Miss Simon opened the store for business she was closely followed by two young men. They ordered her to keep quiet and enter a rear room.

Sight of a revolver in the hands of one of the intruders so unnerved the girl she screamed. The would-be robbers fled out the front door with Miss Simon following and shouting for help.

The fleeing pair disappeared in the Federal Building as pedestrians, attracted by the girl's cries, arrived at the scene, too late to take up the chase.

Miss Simon, who resides at 738 Lorenz avenue, told city detectives there was no money in the cash register at the time.

G. O. P. IGNORES RUM IN OHIO

COLUMBUS, O., Sept. 12.—(AP.)—Without the semblance of a fight over the prohibition question, the Republican state platform convention today adopted the platform submitted by its resolutions committee. The platform did not mention specifically the liquor question, but called for "enforcement of all laws."

Several prominent Republicans threatened to take the prohibition question to the floor of the convention when the resolutions committee refused to incorporate any mention of it in the platform. However, when the committee presented its report to the convention, no one offered a protest and the platform was adopted without a roll call.

The plank dealing with prohibition follows closely the plank of the Kansas City national platform. It follows:

"We heartily indorse the declaration relative to law observance and law enforcement contained in the Republican national platform. We believe in the sincere observance and conscientious enforcement of the provisions of our state and federal constitutions and of all the laws pursuant thereto."

Boy Escapes Trial For Killing Chum

LOS ANGELES, Cal., Sept. 12.—(INS.)—Because California law declares a child incapable of murder, police said today they will file no charges against Roy Kent, 13, who held the revolver which sent a fatal bullet through the heart of Bruno de Maria, 14.

Authorities were inclined to believe Roy's story that the shooting was accidental, discounting the statement of Bruno's sister, Anna de Maria, 16, that the boys had quarreled over a school badge.

Weather Conditions

Relative low pressure is now dominating over the weather over much of the greater portion of the country. As a result there is much cloudy weather and considerable rainfall. The principal rain area extends from the Ohio River southward over West Virginia, Kentucky, Tennessee, and southward to the Gulf. There was a rise in temperature nearly everywhere from the Plains eastward, and little change since yesterday over the Northwest.

River Conditions

The rivers continue stationary. Stage at Franklin is 2.10 or a foot below zero. Lock No. 7, 6.5; Pittsburgh, 9.5; Dam No. 4, 9.1; Dam No. 5, 7.5; Dam No. 9, 4.6; and Dam No. 12, 4.6. The dams are up.

PINCHOT DUE FOR PARLEY HERE

All Members of Ticket but Shannon Expected for Conference Tomorrow

Gifford Pinchot, nominee for governor, and all but one of his running mates on the state Republican ticket are expected to confer here tomorrow on campaign plans with State Treasurer Edward Martin, Republican state chairman. The absentee will be Gen. E. C. Shannon, nominee for lieutenant governor, who has another engagement.

Pinchot is scheduled to speak at noon tomorrow in Meadville, and is expected in Pittsburgh to broadcast over KDKA at 6 p. m. He will be honor guest of the Ross Township Board of Trade at a dinner in the "Pines," celebrating the opening of a section of Perry Highway.

DAVIS TO ATTEND

Others expected at the conference with Martin are Secretary of Labor James J. Davis, nominee for United States Senator; Judge George W. Maxey, nominee for justice of the Supreme Court; Judges James B. Drew and W. B. Linn, nominees for judges of the Superior Court, and Philip H. Dewey, nominee for secretary of internal affairs.

Davis is scheduled to speak at a bean soup picnic in Selinsgrove about noon and will fly here for the conference with his campaign associates. Pinchot will remain in this district until Monday night for meetings with supporters and for radio broadcasts.

Chairman Martin has denied reports that the conference here was called to dissuade Pinchot from his attacks on the "Philadelphia gang," as the former governor describes disgruntled leaders of the Philadelphia Republican organization who are reported ready to support the Democratic nominee for governor, John M. Hemphill.

ASKS BIG MAJORITY

WARREN, Pa., Sept. 12.—(AP.)—Legislative war clouds already are gathering over Pennsylvania, Gifford Pinchot, said today in an address here as he appealed for a vote that would elect him by a big majority. He declared:

"If you give me a vote that merely will allow me to squeeze through, I shall have to go before the next legislature with my hands tied."

Before coming here, Pinchot had visited Bradford, Johnsonburg, Ridgeway, Emporium and Kane. At Bradford he denounced a "whispering" campaign intimating that if he were elected "business would suffer."

WOMAN PLACES BELL AT KILLING

UNIONTOWN, Sept. 12.—A climax to the prosecution's case against A. W. (Tony) Bell, on trial for the killing of Constable John E. Donohoe, came today when Mrs. Mannah Cooley Reid, a surprise witness, testified she saw Bell on the murder scene at approximately the time of the killing, and heard shots fired. Bell, she said, was in one car with an unidentified companion, while in another machine, similar to that in which Donohoe's body was found, were two other strangers. In this latter car, Mrs. Reid testified, there was an object in the rear seat, under a white cover.

The witness said she knew Bell, and was positive as to his identity.

Mrs. Reid was driving toward Masontown the morning of the killing. She testified that at 2:08 a. m. the car she said contained Bell passed her machine. Soon after the second car, containing the white-covered object, also passed. She continued:

"We thought it was a camping party. As we continued toward Masontown he heard eight shots. A short time later we passed the sedan in the ditch, but we did not stop."

FRANCE, ITALY REACH TRUCE

GENEVA, Sept. 12.—(AP.)—Settlement of Franco-Italian naval tonnage difficulties, at least by a long naval holiday, was predicted by persons in authority at the League of Nations assembly today.

It was said today that the absence of the Italian Foreign Minister Grandi, who took his departure suddenly Wednesday, had something to do with bartering over the Tunis and Tripolitan questions that have been engaging attention here.

It was understood on good authority that some sort of definite offer had been made by either France or Italy and that a definite reply could be expected shortly.

That a long naval holiday may be the accepted solution was the opinion put forth by persons in close touch with both delegations in the League assembly.

NYE TO RESUME ILLINOIS QUIZ

WASHINGTON, Sept. 12.—(AP.)—Chairman Nye of the Senate campaign funds investigating committee said today hearings would be resumed by the full committee on the Illinois primary in Chicago next Monday and would continue all week.

The committee expects to conclude its Illinois inquiry then. It will hold hearings in Nebraska and Colorado the week starting September 22.

Nye said he was not concerned about having been shadowed by agents for Representative Ruth Hanna McCormick, Republican senatorial nominee in Illinois. Whether the inquiry into that activity would be continued was undetermined, he added, most of the witnesses next week having been called to testify on primary matters.

The chairman denied any committee agents had made unauthorized investigations.

G. O. P. to Dedicate Harding Memorial

COLUMBUS, O., Sept. 12.—(AP.)—A special committee of the Republican party will be appointed to arrange a suitable date for dedication of the Harding memorial tomb in Marion, under the terms of a resolution adopted by the state platform convention here today.

Leaders said efforts would be made to have President Hoover make the dedicatory address.

Prehistoric Horse Fossil Coming Here From Greece

Fossils from prehistoric Greece, including one of an ancestor of the modern horse, will find their way to Carnegie Museum in the near future, Dr. Andre Avinoff said today.

Back from a tour of more than 100 European museums, he announced that he had arranged for the exchange of American specimens, prehistoric and modern, between a number of the world famous museums of Europe and America. Dr. Avinoff said:

"I hope my trip will lead to a clearing house where specimens wanted by European institutions may be exchanged for those that we need. The British Museum will send us fossils of pre-historic Greece; Cambridge, materials of ancient Egypt; Brussels, fossils and birds of Belgium and her colonies, and Paris, Amsterdam, Dresden, Berlin, Munich and Vienna, other specimens.

"I marveled at the Industrial Museum of Munich, with its 340 halls dedicated to invention and development of industry. Dr. Oscar Miller, its director, anticipated me in hoping that Pittsburgh may some day have one similar to it."

Dr. Avinoff announced that 500 or more members of the American Association of Museums would gather in Pittsburgh next May for their annual convention.

ANDREE RELIC HUNTERS FIND FILM RECORD OF FLIGHT

World May Yet Have Picture Of Ill-Fated Balloon Trip; Feel 'Spell' of Island

By KNUT STUBBENDORFF,
Universal Service.

(From the special Hearst-Scandinavian newspaper expedition which, on Thursday, reached White Island, death place of Salomon Auguste Andree and his two comrades, searching for further Andree relics.)

ABOARD S.S. ISBJOERN, Sept. 12.—In the diary of Nils Strindberg, found on White Island by the Hearst-Dagensnyheter expedition, and parts of which were deciphered and published by Universal Service to tell the first authentic story of the tragic Andree polar flight, will be found the complete chronicle of that fantastic balloon journey of 1897.

This appears borne out today by further study of the Strindberg book, which was found at the same time this searching party dug from the ice of Vitoen (White Island) a skull believed to be that of Salomon Auguste Andree, and a body thought that of the third member of that expedition, Knut Frankel.

FIND FILM ROLL

A still more dramatic tale, however, may be unfolded by a roll of exposed films, which we are bringing back aboard the Isbjoern. These were found in a black bag at Andree's last camp, and if they are still able to react to chemical solution, the world may yet have the picture record of that ill-fated flight.

Strindberg's work with the chronicle is laeonic, but brave, manly, sympathetic and jovial. He kept a record, part of which has been published, despite the hardships of the north. Further exacting work, however, will be necessary before more of the diary is read.

My cabin looks almost like an Andree museum. Here are to be seen not only the official "brief case" of the Andree expedition, and the documents, but a telescope, chronometer, a broken watch, a surgical case, eye-glasses, pocketknife, and curiously enough, a golden fruit knife and the roll of films.

RELICS IN HOLD

The Isbjoern is making good speed southward and should reach Tromsoe by Monday. All the objects found at the Andree camp on Vitoen have been placed in cases and sacks and taken into the vessel's hold, where they have been firmly lashed in order that they are not damaged by the rolling of the ship. It would not have been advisable to place them on deck because of high seas breaking over the ship.

Our experience on Vitoen, the eerie north island with the secret of Andree's fate, has not relaxed its tense grip on us. It still stirs the fantasy of all of us who participated in the search for further Andree relics while polar bears choked out a growling threat of death on the nearby cliffs.

As previously mentioned we found the head and the upper part of Frankel's body during the second day's exploration of White Island. From all indications he had gone to his eternal sleep 33 years ago lying between his two comrades, of whom one at least, who lay toward the east, had had a sleeping bag. Another supposition is that Frankel possibly lay sick under a pile of clothes to protect him from the cold, and that he died while his comrades were out hunting.

DIG OUT BOOK

After we had ascertained which way his face had been turned and after his arm had been dug out, we drove a spike into the ground to get his body out. We dug carefully into the frozen earth and ice—dug under his body to loosen it. After the first bending of the spike downward I discovered a lump similar to a mass of paper. I stopped work and dug out this mass, discovering it contained a well preserved almanac. The rest of the lump of paper was frozen together. It was a rough, large sized book, wrapped in oil cloth. The book was folded together in the center and wrung into a spiral form that had partly filled with earth.

We could do nothing with the brown book at first, but took the whole frozen block of paper aboard the Isbjoern and let it lie on the deck for two days. Later the ice completely thawed and what amounted to a porridge of paper remained. But in one day more the pages could be separated. Today the drying process began, and I discovered that the book was a meteorological journal of the Andree expedition, the first entry of which was July 14, 1897. The last entry was dated October 2, 1897.

BALLOONIST SET FOR SKY HOP

AUGSBURG, Germany, Sept. 12.—(INS.)—Prof. Auguste Piccard, encouraged by brightening weather prospects, announced today he would probably start his balloon ascent to an attempted height of 50,000 feet early tomorrow. He said:

"If tonight's weather report is favorable, I will ascend at 6 a. m. tomorrow (midnight New York time)."

Previously, the scientist declared he would postpone his attempt for some days because of inclement weather. The professor added:

"I hope to reach an altitude of nearly 10 miles above the earth's surface, the farthest point from the earth ever reached by a human, but, in order to obtain the greatest possible scientific data, I must wait until the weather is favorable for my balloon flight."

His wife and two children have come here to be with him until he disappears in the sky. Madame Piccard said:

"I haven't the least concern about my husband, nor have my children. He doesn't consider that going 10 miles above the earth's surface will be dangerous, and he has made so many flights he should know."

WEATHER BALKS PARIS FLIGHT

ROOSEVELT FIELD, N. Y., Sept. 12.—(INS.)—Unfavorable weather today delayed the proposed non-stop hop from New York to Paris of Roy W. Ammel, of Chicago, former Army aviator. He hopes to start Saturday or early next week, in an effort to lower the time of Col. Lindbergh for the Atlantic crossing. Ammel commented:

"I have a much faster plane than Lindbergh and expect to cut five hours off his time if the weather is good over the Grand Banks. If I have sufficient gas left when I reach Paris, I will fly on to Berlin."

The airport was licensed one year ago today. The name of Col. Charles A. Lindbergh appeared as the first on the airport register, Lindbergh was the first pilot to land at the field. The register was believed to be undamaged in the office safe.

Sweden Picks Group To Aid Andree Heirs

(Copyright, 1930, Universal Service, Inc.)

STOCKHOLM, Sept. 12.—The special legal commission to make an advisory report regarding the various legal questions arising out of the discovery of the last camp of the Andree balloon expedition was appointed today by the Swedish government, after consultation with the Norwegian government.

The commission will deal with the vexatious problem regarding the rights of the heirs of the three members of the ill-fated Andree expedition to the Andrée finds, particularly the diaries.

Crowd Finds Lion Occupying Seat, Stampedes

PORT ROYAL, Pa., Sept. 12.—(AP.)—A circus lion escaped from its cage during a fireworks celebration last night at the Port Royal fair, and for 20 minutes sat in the unlighted grandstand unnoticed.

Then the shout of a small boy to "look at the dog," revealed the animal to the crowd, and the several thousand people rushed for the exits. Several women fainted in the crush. A few persons who remained in the stands fled in confusion when the animal roared.

While state troopers with drawn revolvers formed a circle around the lion, circus attendants lassoed the animal and dragged it back to its cage.

The fireworks exhibition and a circus performance which was to have followed were called off.

OLD MACHINE DELAYS FORD

PARIS, Sept. 12.—(AP.)—Henry Ford's passion for mechanics caused him to reach Paris several hours late on his automobile trip from Cherbourg.

The motor journey consumed practically the entire day. Just before reaching Rouen Ford was informed that a threshing machine 100 years old was still at work on an ancient farm in Normandy, 25 miles away.

The automobile wizard immediately decided he must inspect the machine. He postponed luncheon, proceeded to the village and examined the old mower for nearly two hours, appearing intensely interested.

He lunched at Rouen. He denied himself to all newspapermen.

SANTO DOMINGO 'DIGGING OUT'

SANTO DOMINGO, Sept. 12.—(INS.)—Dominican Republic authorities, led by President Trujillo, laid plans today for solution of the pressing financial problems confronting the government in the wake of the hurricane which, 10 days ago, nearly wiped out the city.

With a $20,000,000 property loss confronting them and 30,000 without home or sustenance, the survey committee recommended to the President that an emergency loan of $3,000,000 be sought at once in the United States, with larger loan flotations to follow later for reconstruction purposes.

Another problem, puzzling to solve, was the care of the homeless. Many have been forced to remain in the open, despite tropical downpours.

The care of the injured, under direction of the Red Cross, progresses with unfaltering speed. Most have been transferred to hospitals, thus centralizing the worst cases.

The Red Cross reports 16,000 are being fed from special camp kitchens, with food shipments providing ample rations for all. With clearing of the major streets, transportation of supplies was greatly facilitated.

IRIGOYEN UNDER ARREST ON SHIP

BUENOS AIRES, Argentina, Sept. 12.—(AP.)—Sanchez Sorondo, minister of the interior, told Press that former President Irigoyen is under arrest on board the cruiser Belgrano and has not been permitted to leave Argentine jurisdiction.

The interior minister, interviewed by the correspondent, denied reports that Irigoyen would be transferred to a steamer from the Belgrano or landed at Montevideo. The minister said the cruiser is still in Argentine waters, about two hours from La Plata awaiting orders.

Wave of Elephant Stealing in Ceylon

COLOMBO, Ceylon, Sept. 12.—(AP.)—Elephant stealing is on the increase in Ceylon. The animals are in great demand on the farm and in the forest, where they are used for dragging timber down the hills.

Of late many have been stolen and one owner appeared in the Matale court urging that more severe sentences be imposed upon mahouts who made a practice of running away with the elephants in their trust.

Nominee Slays Woman, Shoots Self

MUSKOGEE, Okla., Sept. 12.—(AP.)—Dave Chandler, court clerk of Delaware County and Democratic nominee to the State Legislature, shot and killed Mrs. Dicie Stafford, former actress and wife of a Tahlequah musician, and perhaps fatally wounded himself late last night. He told officers it was a "suicide pact."

The shooting occurred in Chandler's motor car in a wooded spot north of Tahlequah.

Slayer of Woman Executed in Texas

HUNTSVILLE, Tex., Sept. 12.—(AP.)—Jesse Lee Washington, Negro, was executed at the state penitentiary her at 12:13 a. m., today for th murder of a white woman, Luz Arcos, Mexican, sentenced to die in the electric chair early today, was granted a week's stay by Gov. Dan Moody.

VOLCANO PERIL CONTINUES

MESSINA, Italy, Sept. 12.—(AP.)—The people of Messina, Stramboli and Lipari today turned anxious eyes toward the Stramboli volcano which, strangely silent after its latest eruption, had kept thousands awake and on the alert throughout the night.

The nearly 3,000 residents of Stramboli island slept last night in the open, under tents provided by government ships hurriedly sent to them after yesterday's eruption and violent earthquake shock.

Two torpedoboats came back from Stromboli shortly before midnight, bringing one badly injured person, reporting four dead at Ginostra, one woman missing and nine residents injured.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 12.—(AP.)—Her assistance declined by Italian authorities, the United States cruiser Chester radioed the Navy today she was leaving the region of the Messina, Italy, earthquake and volcanic eruption and proceeding to Constantinople. The Chester, one of the Navy's newest 10,000-ton cruisers, is making its first cruise in the Mediterranean.

QUIZ 2 IN DEATH OF DIVORCEE

PHILADELPHIA, Sept. 12.—(AP.)—A Philadelphia man was in custody for questioning today in connection with the slaying of Mrs. Ruth Radler, while Montgomery County authorities were examining her sister, Mrs. Olga Dean. The man is John Kenny, 28, who was taken to the office of District Attorney Francis X. Renninger in Norristown, where he confronted Mrs. Dean. Authorities made it clear he was not under arrest.

Mrs. Radler, 27, registered nurse and divorcee, was shot or stabbed to death. She was found dying early Tuesday on a road near Ambler. She and Mrs. Dean had rooms in the same apartment house in this city.

U. S. Radio Board Dodges Rule In Dry Dispute

WASHINGTON, Sept. 12.—(AP.)—The Radio Commission, whatever else it may be called upon to decide, does not feel obligated to pass upon whether wet or dry speakers shall be barred from the air by individual stations.

Commissioner Lafount in discussing the reported refusal of a Rochester, N. Y., station to permit the broadcasting of anti-dry speeches by former Senator James Wadsworth, of New York, and several others, said such decisions were entirely in the hands of the broadcaster.

"The radio law provides for equality of broadcasting privileges by opposing political candidates—not equality for causes," he said. "What goes out is clearly up to the broadcaster."

SHALER SCHOOL STRIKE ENDS

The Shaler Township school strike was virtually ended, today while the holdout of pupils in the Laurel Gardens district, Ross Township was reported unchanged.

Ninety pupils of the Braun School agreed to attend the Glenshaw School temporarily, while the school board builds a partition in the Braun School that will provide two additional classrooms. When these are ready it is the intention to transfer the pupils back to the Braun building, it was said. An addition to the Glenshaw School also is contemplated.

STUDY IN RAIN

Despite showery weather, 12 striking pupils of the Obey school, Crafton Heights, were given their daily lessons on the steps of the school building by a volunteer teacher, this morning. Parents of the children protest against sending them to the Schaeffer school, a mile away, to which they were transferred by the school board.

County Superintendent of Schools C. E. Dickey, today said he would not recommend a new school building for the Laurel Gardens district. A cinder path is being provided by the Ross Township School Board, he said, that would shorten the distance the children must walk to the Perrysville school. Parents have backed pupils in their refusal to trek through the woods, and the strike was still on today.

LUNCH-HOUR STRIKE

HAZLETON, Pa., Sept. 12.—(AP.)—Following a day of demonstration by the students of the senior high school here, who went out on "strike" in protest to the schedule of hours in effect at the school for this term, school authorities announced that they stood firm in their decision that the schedule must be given a thorough trial before any action would be taken. The pupils are striking over limiting of lunch period to 25 minutes.

POLICE ROUT PUPILS

WATERTOWN, Mass., Sept. 12.—(AP.)—Five hundred striking high school students, 150 of whom were girls, staged a demonstration today before the Junior High School which ended only with the intervention of police. The student group "walked out" yesterday as a protest against the action of the school committee in adding an hour to the day's program.

PITTSBURGH OFF COSTE TOUR

Left Out as French Fliers Prepare to Start Monday; Philadelphia Last Stop

Pittsburgh will not be included in the itinerary of the good-will tour to be made by Dieudonne Coste and Maurice Bellonte, it was learned today. The French fliers expect to travel over 100 cities in 30 states.

NEW YORK, Sept. 12.—The threat of Mayor Mackey of Philadelphia, that his city will not give Capt. Dieudonne Coste and Lieut. Maurice Bellonte an official welcome if they place Philadelphia last on their good-will tour of the United States, is not taken seriously, Rene Racover, manager of the two aviators, declared here today as he rushed plans for the tour, which will start Monday with the trans-Atlantic plane hopping from New York to Boston.

The program announced by the 45 aviation and industrial leaders, forming the committee sponsoring the tour, calls for visits to 31 cities where stops will be made. In addition, scores of other cities will be circled by the Paris to New York plane as the tour is completed.

DUE THERE OCTOBER 10

Philadelphia, last on the itinerary, will be visited October 10. It was intimated by Racover that if the Philadelphia mayor declined to welcome the Frenchmen officially they would do as the executive said—look around by themselves. At the same time, it was learned no slight of Philadelphia was intended by the committee, whose spokesman said:

"It was only natural, because of its location to the start of the tour, that the Pennsylvania city be visited last."

Their itinerary will take the fliers up New England to Boston, thence westward across the northern part of the country to Seattle, down the Pacific Coast and eastward over a southern route, then up the Atlantic Coast back to New York. The flight will require 25 days.

ROUTE, AS SELECTED

The stopping places indicated are Boston, Cleveland, Indianapolis, Detroit, Chicago, Milwaukee, Minneapolis, Omaha, Denver, Salt Lake City, Boise, Seattle, Portland, Ore.; San Francisco, Los Angeles, Phoenix, El Paso, San Antonio, Oklahoma City, Kansas City, St. Louis, Memphis, New Orleans, Pensacola, Atlanta, Winston-Salem, Richmond, Baltimore and Philadelphia.

Charles Hayden, chairman of the committee sponsoring the flight, said the itinerary chosen was not as extensive as that of Col. Charles A. Lindbergh in 1927, because of the limited time at the disposal of the French fliers and because it would entail too great a strain upon them.

USE OLD PROPELLER

The decision to begin the flight Monday was reached when it was found the propeller of their monoplane could be made serviceable. After discovery of a crack in it, the fliers had ordered a new one shipped from France.

Maj. George Whitten, as tour manager, will fly a Department of Commerce plane as escort to Coste's ship.

SLEUTHS CLOSE DOG TRACK

An unexpected visit of county detectives to the Bridgeville dog track last night ended the fun for 2,000 followers of the greyhounds.

The detectives, carrying instructions from District Attorney Andrew T. Park, told John J. Eagan, manager, to close the contribution windows. Eagan obeyed and there were no races. The Kennel Club refunded price of admission.

A certain mystery attended the action, since the windows were closed Monday and Tuesday night, allowed to open Wednesday, and then closed again last night.

District Attorney Park several months ago said he would not bother dog racing unless specific complaints attended them. Later he suppressed gambling at Guyasuta and dog racing there ceased.

It was reported that Bridgeville business men and many other Bridgeville residents favored the Kennel Club's operation.

No Banditry for Her, Says 'Little Jesse James'

LOS ANGELES, Sept. 12.—(AP.)—The family claim to major banditry honors must rest on the record achieved by Jesse James as far as his granddaughter is concerned, she testified in her $55,000 breach of contract suit against a film company here.

Eager enough to help enact episodes of her grandfather's life on the screen, Miss Jesse Estalle James testified she balked at emulating him in actual life. She testified:

"They suggested I stick up a cop for publicity. They wanted me to get arrested for speeding, resist the officer and draw a gun on him so they could broadcast the story Jesse James' granddaughter stuck up a policeman."

Miss James testified she refused because she had never been arrested and didn't crave the experience, even for the sake of publicity.

Miss James brought the suit against Paramount-Famous-Lasky Corporation and the estate of Fred C. Thomas, actor, complaining another had been given a part in the film "Jesse James," which had been promised to her.

'Baby Golf' Links Builders Warned of Restrictions

A rush of applications for indoor miniatures golf links building permits today brought warnings from the State and City Bureaus of Inspection.

While the state fire and panic act does not apply to Pittsburgh, city restrictions on dance halls and public entertainments places require special precautions.

A. P. Huckestein, supervising inspector for the state bureau here, declares more than 30 applications were made during the last week. Of 17 visitors to his office yesterday, 16 sought permits for indoor links. Three, however, were unable to meet the provisions with their sites.

Laurence O'Toole, chief clerk in the city inspection bureau, emphasizes that the city dance hall law for second floor links will require certain exit qualifications, also fire extinguishers.

COUPLE FOUND SLAIN IN HOME

SAN FRANCISCO, Sept. 12 (AP.)—The bodies of R. L. Castle, 25, Denver salesman, and a Visalia woman believed to be his 22-year-old wife were found in their apartment here. Each was shot through the temple. A pistol lay beside Castle's body.

Mrs. Castle's pet dog stood whimpering beside the woman's body.

Police said Castle apparently had shot his wife and killed himself.

The tragedy was discovered when an unidentified man was seen climbing down the fire escape which passed the Castle's apartment.

Intercepted by the manager, he said he was a friend of Castle's and when they did not answer the telephone he investigated. The man departed.

A few minutes later a man's voice over the telephone told the manager he thought someone had been killed in the apartment and an investigation was started.

WIFE 20 YEARS, GETS DIVORCE

After 20 years of married life Etta L. Mason of Hawthorne road, Millvale, has divorced John R. Mason, Millvale confectioner.

In an opinion handed down today, Judge Ralph W. Marshall agreed Mrs. Mason had suffered indignities and that her husband put her in fear of bodily harm, impaired her health by his bragging and accusations and uttered threats in the presence of their two children and friends.

Mason answered his wife's charges in a counter-suit last January in which he alleged she and their children, accompanied by the family chauffeur, went on an automobile trip to Texas and while in that state his wife and the driver shared a room at a tourist hotel.

PIN IN THROAT, BABY SAVED

PHILADELPHIA, Sept. 12—(AP.)—A race with death for the life of a three-week-old Wilkes-Barre infant apparently was won. The child, Kay McGuire, swallowed a pin while lying in her crib and was found strangling by her mother. The pin was located in the child's throat by an X-ray in a Wilkes-Barre hospital, but physicians could not find an instrument small enough to reach it.

Mr. and Mrs. Frank McGuire, the baby's parents, then started with her by automobile to the Hahnemann Hospital in this city. Surgeons and nurses had been notified and a short time after the child arrived the pin had been removed and the little patient reported on the road to recovery.

SAIL TO VIEW SUN ECLIPSE

SAN FRANCISCO, Sept. 12—(AP.)—Scientists equipped with lollypops and telescopes, glass beads and astronomical cameras set sail for Niuafou, or Tin Can Island, aboard the liner Ventura.

They hope to acquire and compile data on the total solar eclipse which will be visible on that island of the Tonga group October 21.

The party of scientists is headed by Prof. and Mrs. Joseph J. Johnstone, sent out from the Perkins Observatory of Ohio Wesleyan University.

The candy, beads, tobacco and other trinkets will be used to make peace with natives.

Notables Sail Today For European Ports

NEW YORK, Sept. 12—(INS.)—Marcel Doret, French flier, and Alain Gerbault, French sailor who went around the world in a small sloop, will sail for France today, while Richard Squires, prime minister of Newfoundland, will be voyager for England.

John Jacob Astor was due to return from a European visit today.

Oil Driller Hangs Himself to Tree

WAYNESBURG, Sept. 12—Moss Rogers, 48, an oil driller employed for many years in the Mt. Morris fields, committed suicide at his home late Wednesday, according to a coroner's report. Other members of the family found his body suspended by a sash cord from a tree near the home.

Canadian Trooper Kills Wife, Self

TORONTO, Sept. 12—(AP.)—Angered when his bride of two months ordered him out of her parents' home, Simon McIntosh, 30, a Royal Canadian Mounted Police constable, shot and killed his wife Helen, 23, with his service revolver today.

Walking then to the rear of the house he killed himself.

Man Fined on Charge Of Movie 'Mashing'

Joseph Barnes, 26, of 113 Penn street, Braddock, was fined $25 with the option of 30 days in the workhouse by Magistrate T. D. Jones, in Morals Court today, after an Oakland woman testified he had molested her in a downtown movie theater last night. He denied the charge.

FIND EXPLOSIVE, ARMS ON PAIR

UNIONTOWN, Pa., Sept. 12—Accused of having sufficient nitroglycerine to blow up a city block, two revolvers, liquor and a kit of burglar tools in their car, Grey Fury, 24, of Oil City, and Irving Dickerson, 25, of Trevilians, Va., were arrested late last night on the Connellsville-Uniontown highway.

The explosive, which was placed in a vault at the courthouse, was in a tightly sealed glass tube. The burglar kit consisted of hacksaws, files and zip bars.

The two men told County Detective A. A. Downing they were on their way to West Virginia to obtain work. Dickerson said he had resided in Pittsburgh for the last six years, but his automobile bore New York license plates and his owner's card was issued in that state.

Friend of Hamilton, Screen Comic, Shot

HOLLYWOOD, Cal., Sept. 12—(INS.)—Detectives early today rushed to the Hollywood Hospital to investigate the accidental shooting of Douglas Kendall, a sporting goods salesman, who was wounded in the leg while at target practice with Lloyd Hamilton, noted motion picture comedian.

The officers found Hamilton at the bedside of the wounded man. The actor had brought Kendall to the hospital. Kendall told the detectives that he had shot himself.

Little Reinstated, Won't Lose Pay

Charles D. Little, of Braddock, today was reinstated by Auditor General Charles A. Waters as a clerk in the inheritance tax division in the office of Register of Wills Joseph N. Mackrell. He was one of a group of state employes dropped August 1. Mackrell said Little would lose no pay during the period he was off duty.

Plant Speeds Up, 150 to Get Jobs

ATLANTA, Sept. 12—(AP.)—The Atlanta Ford Motor Company plant, according to announcement today, will start Monday on an increased production schedule with 150 additional employes. The new schedule calls for 25 additional car units a day in the plant, bringing the total to 135 cars a day.

GERMANS-REDS LINK FEARED

the department of foreign troops in the ministry.

Gen. Wilhelm Groener, minister of national defense, who hitherto had been considered a reliable Democrat because he was the first to tell the former Kaiser in 1918 that he should abdicate, is held either to have been won over or to be on his way out. Even a successor already is being mentioned for his post. He is Gen. Hans von Seeckt, former commander of the German army who had to resign because, under his regime, the eldest son of the former Crown Prince was permitted to participate in army maneuvers.

VERITY HARD TO ESTABLISH

It is impossible to say how much of these alleged plans is true, if anything, and how far the personalities mentioned favor them, if at all.

The rumors regarding such plans are based mainly on two developments within Germany.

First—The inability of the extreme parliamentary government in Germany to cope with the difficulties of an economic crisis.

Second—The new freedom which German foreign policy has achieved, following the Allied evacuation of the Rhineland.

The economic crisis is blamed on the reparation payments imposed on Germany and on overextension of the Socialistic principle in German government and business. Powerful industrial and political interests are determined, therefore, to fight back the Socialistic tide, if necessary, by a dictatorship.

WELCOME SUCH ACTION

And even Republican and Democratic circles, despondent over the inability of the many parties in Germany to agree on a common program and the improbability of a government majority at the elections of September 14, are becoming reconciled to the idea of at least a temporary dictatorship. What they seek is to insure that if such should become necessary, it would be exercised by legal rather than illegal means.

German foreign policy apparently has definitely embarked on the problem of revising the peace treaty of Versailles to regain some of the territories which the treaty took from Germany, to revise the Young plan of reparation settlement and to free Germany of other disabilities imposed on her.

German leaders agree that elimination of the Polish corridor which separates East Prussia from the rest of Germany and the earliest possible revision of the Young plan must be the next objectives of German foreign policy, but they are by no means agreed on the speed and the methods by which this objective is to be attained.

FAZIO INDICTED ON RUM COUNTS

Philip Fazio, Clairton wildcat brewer, acquitted March 31 in Criminal Court of the murder of "Stuttering Bill" Gregory, a truck driver, and who told on the witness stand during the murder trial of making and selling beer at several wildcat breweries, must soon face a Criminal Court judge again. Yesterday he was twice indicted by the grand jury on charges of violating the liquor laws. In one case he was indicted individually and in the other he was named along with his alleged brew master, Jacob Block.

The grand jury broke all records yesterday when it returned 125 liquor violation indictments. No cases of any other nature were considered.

Man, Asking Divorce, Says Wife Deserted

Charles A. Marsh, of Hampton Hall apartments, testified at the hearing of his divorce suit against Mrs. Margaret E. Marsh, 27, of Prospect avenue, Brooklyn, before Judge Frank P. Patterson in Common Pleas Court that she left him after less than three years of married life. They were married May 12, 1924, residing in Brooklyn, and parted in March, 1927.

Crafton Man Leaves Estate to Widow

The will of Lyman E. Davis, of Crafton, filed for probate this morning, disposed of an $18,250 estate, which was left to his widow, Mrs. Ella H. Davis. The will stipulated in event of her death it be divided equally between two daughters, Laura and Marion Davis.

Officer Dismissed Over Game in Home

SHARON, Sept. 12—Because it is alleged he permitted a card game to operate at his home, Dewey Miller, a member of the police force, has been dismissed by council. He was suspended August 31 for 10 days and then asked for a hearing before council.

Arctic-Panama Canoeists Cover 8,500 Miles

PRINCE RUPERT, B. C., Sept. 12—(AP.)—Four Artic-to-Panama canoeists—Victor, Alvin and Evans Fisher and Charles Bruder, of Tyvan, Saskatchewan, have reached Prince Rupert after a journey of 7,500 miles by water and more than 1,000 by dog team. In the best of health, they declared today they would press on toward the Panama Canal by way of the Fraser, Saskatchewan and Red Rivers in Canada and the Mississippi to the Gulf of Mexico.

The four started from Waterways, Alberta, in May, 1929.

The most trying part of their adventure was the winter of 1929-30, spent trapping in the Snake and Peel River country, when in the darkness of the long Arctic night they lived for 98 days on Caribou meat and salt. There they made a moose skin canoe and ran the rapids of the Peel River for 200 miles. They brought in with them their winter catch of furs, which they were able to sell for several thousand dollars at Aklavik.

'HILL' LEADERS WAR GROWS

were accused of being election-law violators, bootleggers, racketeers and gamblers.

At a sub-committee meeting of the commission today, members failed to take definite action on the appointment recommendations of election officers in the first 10 wards, because no list had been received from the Fourth Ward. Attorney N. R. Criss, committee member, said. The next meeting, it was stated, is contingent on the time Howard Neeley, commission member and chairman of the Fourth Ward, hands in his list.

If this is done tomorrow or Monday, the committee will meet then. The same day, Criss intimated, the commission would meet en masse and take action on all the 10 wards. Members of the sub-committee include, besides Criss, Charles E. Flinn and William H. Ziefel.

COURT APPOINTS

The Redistricting Commission has received lists of candidates for each election district in Pittsburgh by the ward chairmen of the various parties and will submit the preferred candidates to Quarter Sessions Court for appointment.

The revised list submitted by Verona substituted Joseph Miekle for Michael Scozza, John Burgundy for Francis Haeck, John Adam for August Manfredo, August Gianna for Joseph Forte, Max Zerelstein for his brother, Milton; Morris Solomon for J. Golden, Arthur Dooley for E. Bates and Daniel Delsardo for James Venitone.

The Redistricting Commission has reduced the number of election districts in the 32 Pittsburgh wards from approximately 750 to 400 by combining two districts or sections of two or more districts into a single unit.

SEEK FEW CHANGES

That action necessitated the appointment of election board inspectors and judges, and the commission is making an effort to continue as many former officials as possible.

Attorney Criss has announced that the commission is taking every precaution to prevent the appointment of any person convicted or indicted for election law violations.

The commission is investigating each applicant and welcomes information from any citizen or group concerning a prospective appointee, Criss declared.

THEATERS DEFY MUSIC STRIKE

Warner houses and the others in the Fox theaters.

The strike was called a short time after the managers refused to comply with the association's demand that all musicians be retained until September 25, pending further arbitration of the differences between the managements and the union.

The musicians are asking for a renewal of contracts already in existence while the theater managements propose a reduction of 65 per cent in the orchestra staffs.

In a statement made last night, William Goldman, district manager of the Stanley-Warner Theatres, stated the reductions in the orchestra staffs is made necessary by the introduction of talking pictures which "not only do not require but do not permit of the accompaniment of musicians."

STRIKE IN DETROIT

DETROIT, Sept. 12—(AP.)—A strike of union musicians against Detroit theaters was voted shortly after midnight today.

A statement by executives of the Fox Theater said that the managers were willing to maintain the same wage scale as was in force under the old contract, but requested that they be permitted "to make a nominal decrease in the number of men that they were employing because of the fact that they had changed the policy of their programs."

NO TROUBLE HERE

Peace and serenity reign supreme here in the dealings of the Stanley and Warner theater managements with musicians, it was said today. The present contract has another year to run, and likely will be renewed, officials said. The theaters here contemplate no reduction in the number of stage and pit musicians, the primary cause of the Philadelphia strike.

Council to Meet At West View

An adjourned meeting of West View Council is scheduled for tonight to pass finally ordinances for improvement of Fordham avenue; Center avenue from Blind station to Park avenue and Mt. Vernon avenue. Members also will complete plans for participation in the opening of the new link of the Perry highway through Perrysville, Saturday.

Court Takes Away Family of Brewer

BROWN TO ASK POSTAL RAISE

DETROIT, Sept. 12 (AP).—Postmaster General Brown declared here he would recommend an increase in first class postage at the next session of Congress.

Addressing the National Association of Postmasters, Brown said one-half cent more an ounce on sealed letters and "minor changes contemplated in the rest of our rate structure" would "wipe out our present strictly postal deficit and balance our budget."

He added that if Congress could then be persuaded to "adhere to the rule laid down by the founders of our government that adequate postal revenues must be provided by law before additional charges against the service may be incurred," the result would be a solving of "the perplexing postal deficit problem for all time."

BLAME TREATY IN FATAL RIOT

BAGDAD, Irak, Sept. 12.—(AP.)—Dissatisfaction of Kurds with the new Anglo-Irak treaty led yesterday to rioting outside the government offices at Sulaimani, in which 13 persons were killed and 35 injured.

Kurds armed with revolvers, daggers and sticks blockaded the government offices and attacked police and soldiers called to drive them away. The dead included one Irak soldier.

The Kurds have been prominent in the opposition to the new treaty ever since it was negotiated last August. Last month they refused to vote at a general election as a result of the dissatisfaction.

Americans Evacuate Peru Mining Region

LIMA, Peru, Sept. 12.—(AP.)—American families and other foreigners residing in the Cerro De Pasco copper mining region have evacuated to nearby towns during the last few days as a consequence of an employes' strike there. Peruvian troops are on guard to prevent disorder.

The employes have sent a delegation to Lima protesting the "abusive attitude" of W. G. Bassett, superintendent of the company, said to have dismissed the organizers of a demonstration in favor of the new Peruvian government.

Lord Castlerosse

Most Talked of Journalist in England

Now in America

Viscount Castlerosse, son of the Earl of Kenmar and a distinguished London journalist, writer of a column in the Daily Express and one of the most widely read commentators in the British newspaper world, is writing of his American impressions for the Sun-Telegraph. Herewith is printed another of Lord Castlerosse's articles in which he takes us to the cinema and comments on talkie spies.

By LORD CASTLEROSSE.

Just back from the Strand cinema on Broadway and am thanking God for the man who invented White Rock and refrigerators and tobacco and a pipe and shower baths and beds. Oh yes, it's good to go to bed early for once. Since I've been in New York I've been getting into bed one side and immediately slipping out on the other for it's always time to get up.

I went to sea at the age of 12, and somehow I've got into the habit of starting work at 7 or soon after. Why disguise the fact? What I mean to say is I swallow my first aspirin, mix my first bromo seltzer and gloomily sharpen my first pencil round about 10. At least, in New York I behave like that.

MEET THE WIFE

And now what about your cinematograph theater? Well, children, I only know one, and that's the Strand. I went with my wife. It is a strange phenomenon, but it doesn't matter where she is, she can get a seat. I never can, but then I must say that a seat for me is no light matter.

We went in and reviewed an immense hall, acres of it, and battalions of people, but not a vacant chair.

This is one of the advantages of being married. I have only got to have my sweet spouse (I hope she'll read this) the last time there was a rare spat because I called her, innocently and affectionally enough, "the old girl") when a young attendant arrives on the scene and goes through all the formula of being obliging.

VAUDEVILLE WOES

Sure enough in the twinkling of an eye we were plumped in most desirable stalls right on the gangway. The program started with a youth who showed a most deplorable inclination to sing about his past loves and his wife that had left him.

While this was going on, I became aware that a man was observing me very closely. He stood swaying in the gangway from side to side like an elephant. I began to feel quite embarrassed. Suddenly he stooped down and whispered in my ear. The awful thought struck me that I might be overweight for the seat. You know those notices on bridges "Maximum load 10 tons."

No, I was wrong. He said to me, "Excuse me but are you sitting on my spectacles?" I arose and looked. I was not sitting on his spectacles. Very odd that. I've been accused of many things but never that of trying to hatch out spectacles. It is a form of vice foreign to my nature.

Now, if you will forgive my impertinence, I do not think that your cinemas are as suited to my taste as those at home.

ORPHEUS AND THE CINEMA

In New York they are larger and more sumptuous but there is great movement among the audience. This makes sleep impossible. In London on the other hand I have had many a good nap in the cinema.

The movies are seldom true to life. Many of the films are supposed to take place in England and they are so often wrong in detail as to be irritating. For instance, if a film showed the men of Broadway walking about in derby hats in mid-July, a syllable of criticism might pass your lips.

The subject of the film in question was a man and a woman spy, a good melodramatic subject, but not in this particular instance treated to the best advantage.

Constance Bennett looked very pretty and Eric von Stroheim thoroughly Prussian, but the film did nothing true to life. The importance of spies during the war has been greatly exaggerated.

THE MOVIE SPY

The principal spy on the Allied side during the war was a man who comes from Central Europe, made some money over there and I am not at all sure he did not go to prison. He had, I understand, a hobby of signing other people's names. He is immensely fat, plays cards magnificently, hates women, and in my opinion was quite useless.

Then, too, there was a red-headed woman always to be found in the low cafes of Amsterdam. She managed to become a clearing house of maritime news, sometimes of importance.

I always thought that she dealt faithfully as to both sides and her information was usually pretty correct.

Mata Hari was the most sensational spy. We would never have shot her, but the French are not so sensitive. One of the managers of the Savoy Hotel was detailed to watch her and she fell very much in love with him, which he found most trying. The most important piece of information we had in England during the war came through the medium of one of your leading bankers. He told a friend of mine, who went straight to Lloyd George, who acted on it.

The execution of spies was a horrible task, but there were always plenty of volunteers.

When Lody was shot, Lord Athlumney, whose duty it was to carry out the sentence, shook hands with him.

"Do you not object to shaking hands with a spy?" said Lody.

"I am honored to salute a very brave man," replied Athlumney, who was not much given to emotional scenes.

Well, I've talked enough, I guess.

WARN AUTOISTS OF BAD DETOUR

Because of a new detour between Turtle Creek and East Pittsburgh, the Automobile Club of Pittsburgh today warned autoists driving to Greensburg and points east that they could make better time by taking the William Penn Highway to Delmont.

The detour turns traffic along Airbrake avenue in Turtle Creek to Wilmerding, then to East McKee, sort along a road that not only is narrow but which also is full of curves, the club said.

This detour is expected to remain in force for the remainder of the year, to permit repaving and an underpass construction as preliminaries to building the big viaduct that eventually will eliminate the "bottle neck" at Turtle Creek.

Two Children Perish As Apartment Burns

NEWARK, N. J., Sept. 12.—(INS.)—Two children were burned to death, six persons were injured and three others escaped by jumping into life nets early today when fire swept a three-story apartment house.

Edward Santos, 6, died from burns and the body of a 2-year-old girl believed to be Gloria Romano was found in a top floor apartment.

Canadain Labor Leaders Re-Elected

REGINA, Sask., Sept. 12.—(AP.)—Tom Moore, Ottawa, who for 12 years has presided over the Trades and Labor Congress of Canada, was re-elected yesterday. P. N. Draper, Ottawa, secretary treasurer, was re-elected for his thirty-first consecutive term in that office.

South Side firemen were summoned twice within four hours last night to extinguish fires on the Pennsylvania Railroad bridge at Carson street and Brownsville avenue. In each instance, the flooring ignited from sparks from locomotives, firemen said.

ENVOY GIBSON'S MOTHER DIES

LOS ANGELES, Sept. 12.—(AP.)—Mrs. Frank A. Gibson, 72, noted California club worker, and mother of Hugh Gibson, ambassador to Belgium, died at her home here following a cerebral hemorrhage.

Seeking some avenue of activity to forget the grief of her husband's death in 1902, Mrs. Gibson turned to educational and club work and became one of California's most noted public workers.

Mrs. Gibson was a native Californian. In 1881 she married Frank A. Gibson, Los Angeles business man. Four children were born to them, but only Ambassador Gibson survives.

Cattle Lost in Barn Fire, 2 Men Burned

HAGERSTOWN, Md., Sept. 12.—(AP.)—Three head of cattle were lost and two men were badly burned in a fire that destroyed the barn on the farm at Burnside, Washington County, tenanted by Howard Knode.

The fire started as a group of farmhands were threshing wheat. All of the farm machinery and grain in the barn was lost.

GREEN ATTACKS INJUNCTIONS

ATLANTIC CITY, N. J., Sept. 12.—(AP.)—William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor, asserted here that the full power of the federation would be placed behind the Norris-Walsh bill to give labor relief from injunctions. He declared, after a session with his executive council:

"We have considered the whole matter of injunction relief legislation. It is the outstanding legislative problem in which the federation is interested and we intend to deal with it in our report to the Boston convention of the federation next month.

"The opposition of the federation to men like Senators Blease, Ransdell and Simmons and Judge Parker is based almost wholly upon their utterances and actions in relation to injunction relief legislation.

"For labor to function it must have relief from these drastic orders which limit free speech, freedom of the press and our rights under the Constitution."

STATE HIGHWAY RECORD SET

HARRISBURG, Pa., Sept. 12.—(AP.)—Several months before the close of the construction season, a new all-time record of highway construction in Pennsylvania was established this week with completion of 785 miles of new roads during 1930.

Samuel Eckels, chief engineer of the State Highway Department, announced that 40 miles of highways built by contractors for the department during the last week brought the total for the year to 785, exceeding by 40 miles the 745-mile previous high mark, set in 1925 during the administration of Gov. Pinchot. The 1925 figure was for the entire season.

Before the end of 1930, a total of 1,000 miles of new highways are to be laid. Three hundred additional miles of new pavement are to be built before the end of the year by the department's own forces. Attainment of both goals is dependent upon weather conditions.

The 785 miles completed this year represents a cost of $40,000,000, all of which was paid out of current revenues.

THE BEST PLACE TO SHOP, AFTER ALL

CREDITORS GET SETTLEMENT DUE IN 1909

Land Trust Co. Receivers, After Delay of 21 Years, Will Distribute $33,041

After 21 years in the hands of receivers and unexplainable delays, the Land Trust Company which failed in 1909 has $33,041 to pay creditors whose claims total $510,839.

This was revealed by the filing of the first and final account in court by Frank W. Jackson special deputy to Peter G. Cameron, secretary of banking, fourth receiver of the defunct company. The first three receivers, David P. Black, David Hunter, Jr., G. H. Getty are dead. Black resigned in 1911 being succeeded by Hunter who died in 1919. Getty died the following year and Jackson was named to take Getty's place.

WILL PAY 5 PER CENT

At Mr. Jackson's office it was stated that the receiver will be able to pay claimants about 5 per cent of their claims. On account of the delay in settling the bank's affairs, it is expected that when dividend checks are sent to several thousand depositors and other creditors that most of them will be returned, for want of proper address or because perhaps many depositors are dead. Where creditors cannot be found, the sums due them will be claimed by the state, which is in accordance with the law.

Receiver Jackson's report showed that most of the notes and bills receivable were worthless, years of waiting failing to make them good.

It was stated today that when the Land Trust Company closed its doors it involved the Mercantile Trust Company which also failed. The Land Trust Company owned 93 per cent of the stock of the Mercantile Trust. The stock of the latter was liable for assessment, equal to the par value of the shares.

DELAY NECESSARY

Delay was therefore more or less necessary in winding up the Land Trust affairs, because if an assessment was made, the Land Trust would have been forced to pay most of it and did not have the money to do so. The Mercantile Trust Company, however, of which Harry S. Calvert was the receiver, paid 100 cents on the dollar and liquidated its affairs five years ago.

The report of Receiver Jackson of the Land Trust Company, shows first class claims are divided as follows: Checking account depositors, $199,672; saving account depositors, $116,432 and $177,235 certificates of deposit which together with other claims bring the total up to $510,839.

The early reports of receiverships were filed in the Dauphin County court which was required under the law at the time. The law was later changed so as to enable the filing of reports in the local courts.

At Mr. Calvert's office today it was stated that the president of the Land Trust Company when it failed was W. L. Griffith, while W. H. Frederick was president of the Mercantile Trust Company.

BOMB ANSWERS WAR ON VICE

CHICAGO, Sept. 12.—(AP)—An extortionist's bomb splotched up the opening of the grand jury's investigation of racketeering today.

Just a few hours before the inquiry was called, the family of John Valentino was blasted from sleep by a bomb explosion. The home, on the West Side, was damaged.

Valentino, a street car company laborer, told police he had received letters threatening him with death unless he paid $5,000 to a man "who would approach him and ask for a match."

Prominent civic leaders—33 of them headed by Col. A. A. Sprague—supported State's Attorney John A. Swanson in his drive to put racketeers on the legal rack.

Girl, Brother Held On Liquor Charges

READING, Pa., Sept. 12.—(AP)—Violet Buettner, 20, called by police the "bootleg queen of Lancaster County," and her brother, Eldred, 19, were indicted by a grand jury yesterday on charges of unlawful manufacturing and possession of intoxicating liquor. Both are at liberty on $1,000 bail. Their cases will not be tried at the term of court now in session.

Slayer of Alleged Gambler Convicted

MIAMI, Fla., Sept. 12.—(AP)—Joe Cook, alias Jennings Pearman, was convicted of first degree murder with a recommendation for mercy by a jury in Dade County Circuit Court. He was tried for the slaying of M. H. Beddell, alleged Chicago gambler, in a downtown hotel room February 22.

The verdict automatically reduces the sentence to life imprisonment.

Mrs. Hoover Once Before 'First' Lady

WATERLOO, Ia., Sept. 12.—(AP)—Comes the revelation that the first lady was first lady years ago in a roller skating contest. Somebody has found in the Waterloo Courier of May 28, 1884, an item relating that Miss Lou Henry had won a beautiful silk parasol by skating twice around a hall and blowing out 19 candles in 38 seconds. Her address is now Washington, D. C.

HATCHET KILLER DIES IN CHAIR

WALLA WALLA, Wash., Sept. 12.—(AP)—Archie F. Moock, of Spokane, was executed at the state penitentiary here this morning for the murder two years ago of Mrs. Catherine Clark, who came here from Boston in response to letters promising marriage.

Mrs. Clark was killed in the woods near Spokane with a hatchet two years ago. Evidence at Moock's trial indicated she was induced to come west through several letters signed "Murphy." Moock claimed "Murphy" actually existed and that he himself was a victim of circumstances.

Mrs. Tenna Moock, the condemned man's wife was with him in the death cell the last few hours of his life. Moock read without emotion letters from the eldest of his five children bidding him farewell.

PERSHING AT 70 STILL ACTIVE

WASHINGTON, Sept. 12.—(INS)—Gen. John J. Pershing, America's greatest living military figure, will be 70 tomorrow. In good health, he will be busily engaged with half a dozen tasks besides planning future labors.

The commander-in-chief of the American Expeditionary Forces in the World War was retired from the Army, but he refuses to give up his strenuous life.

As he begins his seventy-first year he will continue work on his war memoirs, consider problems of the Battle Monuments Commission, give attention to the campaign for funds for the monumental Episcopal Cathedral here and perhaps walk a couple of miles for exercise.

He was born September 13, 1860 in Linn County, Mo. Twelve years ago he was viewing the results of his greatest military triumph—the St. Mihiel drive.

Slick Guardians Post $1,800,000 Bond

OKLAHOMA CITY, Okla., Sept. 12.—(AP)—The appointment of Mrs. Berenice Slick and Charles F. Urschel as guardians for the three minor children of the late T. B. Slick, wealthy independent oil operator, became final yesterday with approval of a $1,800,000 bond filed by Mrs. Slick and Urschel.

The bond was the largest ever required in a probate case in Oklahoma County.

Prisoner Slashes Wrists With Slate

Using a piece of roofing slate, which he found on a beam near his cell, Paul Floyd, 36, of 3504 Fifth avenue, slashed his wrists in Central Station today, police reported. He was taken to Allegheny General Hospital, where his injuries were dressed, then returned to the police station. He is being held as a suspect in the robbery of the N. Rice Cigar Company, 1635 Fifth avenue, a week ago.

HOME AGAIN!

VACATION days are over. Dad is back on the job trying to catch up with his work. Mother is getting the house straightened around and getting the kiddies ready for school. After several weeks in the country, it seems hard for either of them to get quickly settled down to home and city life. What they forgot to do yesterday should be done today. Yet they still forget.

Before they went away, the evening newspaper was an essential and important part of their home life. Dad says, "I'll order the carrier to start delivery again right away," but he forgets it. Night comes and there is no newspaper at the door. Mother says, "I'll call the Sun-Telegraph tomorrow."

But she has to get knickers for the boys, dresses and stockings for the girls, and it slips her mind. And they both miss their newspaper again.

That's why the Sun-Telegraph prints this convenient order blank.

FILL in this blank at once, mail it today and the Sun-Telegraph will come regularly to you by carrier—rain or shine, hot or cold—no matter what the weather. The Sun-Telegraph carrier boy never misses. He's always on the job.

AFTER-VACATION ORDER BLANK

BELLEVUE VET ENTERS LIST

Announcement of Lewis H. Easterly, 78, Gunnison, Col., as the youngest veteran of the Civil War has brought to the front a Bellevue man, John Nixon, also 78, who claims to be as young, if not younger, than Mr. Gunnison.

John Nixon

Kindly, alert, apparently in the best of health, Mr. Nixon is active in Grand Army of the Republic affairs as commander of Bellevue Post No. 886. He remembers well his enlistment in the 143rd Ohio Infantry.

"I was 11 years old, then," he says, "I packed a few belongings and made ready to run away. My mother found out about it and asked a Capt. Cole to take me along as mascot.

"We went to Camp Chase from Salineville, my home. After 30 days, we went into action. As a drummer boy I shared in the campaign before Petersburg, Va. There we lived mostly on hardtack. We dipped it in coffee, before the campaign was over, broke it up and skimmed the vermin off the top."

Mr. Nixon often met Lincoln, he says. Gen. Grant, later to be President, was another prominent man of the times with whom the drummer-boy was acquainted.

"When I left home," Mr. Nixon says, "my mother advised me, if I ever saw Grant, to shake his hand in spite of everything. I remembered that, and, boy that I was, pushed through a group of officers to shake hands with the great general. I didn't know how sacred was the earth on which I was treading, then. But I'm glad I did it."

Two Hurt as Auto Hits School Bus

FRANKLIN, Sept. 12. — Evan Boyer, 7, received a broken leg, and Frank Swatsler, 6, cuts and bruises when an automobile, crashed into a school bus loaded with 26 pupils, on the Galloway road.

The bus had stopped to discharge the pupils at Fee School when the accident occurred.

Copperhead Bites Schoolgirl in Garden

CONNELLSVILLE, Sept. 12.—Florence Baker, high school student, is recovering from bites inflicted by a copperhead snake which bit her four times as she was picking vegetables in the garden of her home at Breakneck. Her leg was badly swollen, but she received treatment at the hospital in time to avert serious consequences.

Jury Argues 17 Hours on Flat Iron Attack

WAYNESBURG, Sept. 12.—A jury of seven men and five women deliberated 17 hours before returning a verdict of guilty in an assault and battery case in which Mrs. Anna Kasale was charged with beating Albert Mike, a pack peddler, with a flat iron during an argument over a debt of $1.

Mrs. Kasale was convicted at the March term of court of a liquor law violation.

Ex-Prothonotary Of Mercer Dead

MERCER, Sept. 12. — W. S. Hirst, 68, former Mercer County prothonotary, was found dead in bed at his home. He became ill while visiting the Mercer fair grounds. For several years Mr. Hirst owned a string of harness horses which he raced at fairs in Ohio and Pennsylvania.

3 ROAD OPENING FETES SLATED

CONNELLSVILLE, Sept. 12. — Northern Fayette County will have three road opening celebrations within the next month. The Pleasant Valley Grange has fixed October 10 for observing the completion of the new route, via Mud School, from here to an eventual junction with the Donegal Pike at Laurelville.

Members of the Connellsville-to-Farmington Road League meet Friday night at Mill Run to plan for a program to celebrate the opening last Saturday of the new concrete section between Normalville and Mill Run, leaving only seven miles of the 26-mile stretch now to be improved. Residents of the recently opened Normalville-Indian Head road are also planning a half-day program to mark the realization of many years of effort.

LUXURY In Coats Need Cost But, $79.75

All one's notions of a $79.75 coat just tumble down humpty-dumpty fashion at sight of these coats. They look twice as lovely as their price! The two sketched are representative:

Jap Mink

in rich deep brown furs, a brown coat clearly inspired by Paquin both as to melon cuff and frame-the-face collar, $79.75.

Black Persian Lamb

collars Jenny copy. A strong Russian flavor to the sleeve treatment. Collar has suggestion of the very new lapel-point. $79.75

THIRD FLOOR

The New Colors In KID GLOVES

Slip-Ons One-Buttons

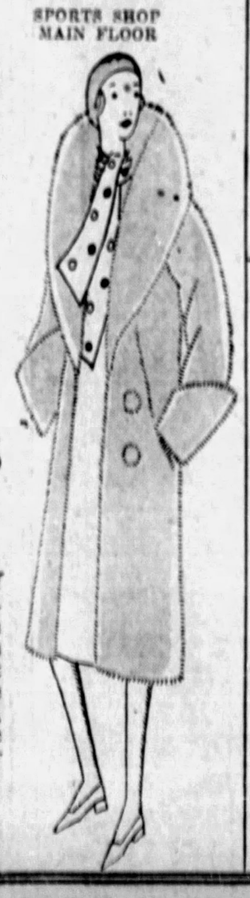
Green kid to match exactly a new cricket green coat. Navy to click with navy shoes or bags. Or brown, white or black in the one-button glove. Beaver, mode, black or white on the slip-on. Both perspiration-proof leathers. Most reasonable!

MAIN FLOOR

Knitted Suits With Young Ideas $16.50

One glance at this group and you no longer wonder that the knit-vogue grows and grows. Simply precious 3-piece notions, one with O'Rossen type pinch-tucking. Rust . . . green . . . brown . . . blue. "Thin" Woolen FROCKS Also, $16.50

SPORTS SHOP MAIN FLOOR



Lambskin FUR COATS $69.75

3,653 MOTHERS VISIT GRAVES IN FRANCE

Tours for Year End With Return of Party Oct. 2; 2,544 Sign for Next Year

By EDWARD L. BODDAN,
Universal Service.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 12.—Successful beyond the fondest expectations, the pilgrimage of gold star mothers to the graves of their hero dead in Europe will be ended shortly for this summer.

Under the chaperonage of the War Department, 3,653 mothers have been able to visit the final resting place of their warrior dead at the expense of a grateful government.

The pilgrimage for this year will be over when the last boatload of mothers lands at New York on October 2. Already 2,544 mothers and widows of veterans have qualified to make the trip next summer.

The oldest woman to make the trip was Mrs. Elisabeth Hutchins, 91, of Oakland, Cal., who apparently suffered no ill effects from her long journey. The youngest mother was only 44 years old.

The cost to the government for transporting the mothers and widows this summer was less than $3,000,000. This included all expense from the time they left home until they returned. Guides, nurses and medical attention were furnished without charge. Four mothers died during the journey.

The individual cost for each pilgrim was $773.51, including train fare and boat fare, hotel accommodations and chaperonage to the American cemeteries in Europe.

The longest journey was made by two gold star mothers from Alaska who are now with the last party in France.

WOMAN FOILS KIDNAP PLOT

BROWNSVILLE, Tex., Sept. 12.—(AP.)—A plot by reputed Chicago gangsters to kidnap two of the wealthiest men in this section, and hold them for heavy ransom was frustrated on the tip of a woman.

The woman told officers she had been approached by three men who said they were Chicago gangsters and asked her to assist in the kidnaping of C. P. Barreda, of Brownsville, and Juan Cross, of Matamoras, Mexico. Instead, she telephoned the sheriff.

Fifty armed officers were quickly stationed at strategic points in the Rio Grande Valley in an effort to apprehend the gangsters and two women from Detroit said to have been involved in the plot.

New Device Gives Glider Instruction

What is said to be a revolutionary new device for giving instructions in glider flying will be demonstrated Sunday afternoon at the Pittsburgh-Greensburg airport near Greensburg. With the aid of this device, which will be demonstrated by H. G. Traver, president of the Beaver Falls Glider Club, it is said to be possible for a student to learn to operate a glider within 15 minutes. The contrivance, mounted on an automobile, gives the student the experience of controlling the glider as in actual flight while safely supported.

Towboats Replace Craft Being Repaired

BROWNSVILLE, Sept. 12.—The Carnegie Steel Company has chartered the J. H. Hillman and Donald Birmingham towboats to haul tows while the Homestead, Clairton, Donora and Edgar A. Thomson steamers are laid up for repairs at Wilson.

Boilers of the Homestead, Clairton and Donora are being resheeted and the Thomson is up for an overhauling. Rivermen say the condition of the water, resulting from the recent drought, has a serious effect on steamboat boilers.

ANTI-AIRCRAFT GUNS TESTED

ABERDEEN PROVING GROUNDS, Aberdeen, Md., Sept. 12.—(AP.)—Airplane-towed targets, zig-zagging through a black sky, were spotted here last night by 80,000,000 candle power searchlights as army groups tested the world's latest anti-aircraft armament and fire control devices. The white sleeve targets were followed through the night air to the tune of the steady rat-tat-tat of machine guns and the thunder of 3-inch anti-aircraft guns.

It was visitors' day and hundreds of civilians watched the spectacular demonstrations that began early in the morning. In daylight hours red targets were used.

The tests, starting August 15, were conducted by the chiefs of ordnance, coast artillery, the air corps and the corps of engineers. Army officials said they demonstrated forcibly the great strides made in the development of anti-aircraft armament.

URGES SOCIETY BRANCH IN U. S.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 12.—(AP.)—Plans for organizing in this country a division of the International Society of Commercial Education were outlined to President Hoover by E. H. Boissevain, of Amsterdam, president of the society.

Boissevain was presented to Mr. Hoover by the charge d'affaires of the Netherlands legation. Later he is to call upon Julius H. Barnes, chairman of the board of the Chamber of Commerce of the United States, in quest of support for his movement.

MISSIONARY AID URGED AT MEET

DUBOIS, Pa., Sept. 12.—(AP.)—There will be a notable reduction in missionary effort the world over unless there is a strong, immediate and widespread response to missionary appeals, the Rev. George A. Spencer, Boston a member of the World Service Commission, told the third day's session of the Ninety-fifth annual conference of the Erie District of the Methodist Episcopal Church.

The Boston minister said the present situation regarding missions called for a frank facing of realities. He said there were heartening signs but that a greater ernestness was necessary on the part of all.

The program was devoted largely to missionary work, with the World Service program of Methodism being presented by Dr. Ralph Ward, executive secretary of the executive commission. The anniversary of the Women's Home Missionary Society also was observed.

Bishop Richardson, of Philadelphia, presiding at the conference, gave his first formal address.

The Board of Hospitals and Deaconesses also was up for consideration. It was pointed out by speakers that Methodism has a heart for the needy and homeless, and reports showed 250,000 sick had been taken care of in 77 hospitals.

ANTI-RELIGIOUS MUSEUM OPENS

LENINGRAD, Sept. 12.—(AP.)—The famous Saint Isaac Cathedral here, which recently was converted into a general anti-religious museum, was officially opened yesterday.

The main altar has been equipped with a screen for the showing of anti-religious motion pictures, while anti-religious lectures will be given regularly in the same place. Special equipment in the central hall will demonstrate to visitors the rotation of the earth and other astronomical phenomena.

The museum contains a huge collection of documents relating to former activities of the Russian Orthodox Church and the present atheistic movement in the Soviet Union and other countries.

Texas Educator Comes to Pitt

Hervey C. Hicks, of Lubbock, Texas, has been appointed assistant professor of mathematics at the Carnegie Institute of Technology for the coming year. Mr. Hicks comes to Pittsbur from the Texas Technological College where he was professor of mathematics and aeronautics. Mr. Hicks attended the University of California, the University of Chicago, and the California Institute of Technology. He holds a number of degrees, among them, master of science and doctor of philosophy.

ROBBERS LOOT FIVE HOMES

A man and a woman were being sought by detectives today in connection with the theft yesterday of clothing and jewelry valued at $350 from the home of Clayton Stephany, of 132 Stratford avenue, the sleuths said.

The couple, detectives said, disappeared several hours after they had rented a room. Their descriptions were broadcast throughout the city.

Mrs. Thomas McCaffrey, of 7039 Meade street, reported the theft of a stickpin valued at $200 and a class pin worth $60 from her home yesterday. The front door of the house had been opened with a key, according to detectives.

While the family was away on a vacation, Mrs. Louis Squiterie, of 2373 Eldridge street, told detectives, thieves forced a rear door and escaped with wearing apparel and linens valued at about $200.

Thieves ransacked the home of H. L. Seamens, at 6908 McPherson boulevard, after gaining entrance through a cellar door during the family's absence, but Mrs. Seamens was unable to determine the value of the articles taken.

Herman Escovitz, of 5518 Hays street, told police that some one forced an entrance to his garage and escaped with ginger ale and near beer valued at $114.

Commission Given To Pittsburgher

WASHINGTON, Sept. 12.—(AP.)—Commissions in the Officers' Reserve Corps were issued to the following Pennsylvanians:

Philip A. Burket, 2827 Fifth avenue, Altoona, second lieutenant, Quartermaster Corps; Lester I. Finkelstein, Downtown Y. M. C. A., Pittsbu second lieutenant, Coast Artillery, and George T. Price, Harrisburg, second lieutenant, Veterinary Corps.

Indians, Deserters Sack Bolivian City

BUENOS AIRES, Sept. 12.—(AP.)—A delayed dispatch from Asuncion to La Nacion said a large force of Indians and army deserters attacked the Bolivian city of Rodore last Sunday, overpowering the garrison and sacking the city.

The raiders then fled southward with troops from Puerto Suarez and San Juan pursuing them.

URGE EXPORT COAL RATE CUT

WASHINGTON, Sept. 12.—(AP.)—Reduction of freight rates on export coal so United States operators could better meet foreign competition has been proposed to the Interstate Commerce Commission as a means of increasing exports and providing employment for thousands of men now idle.

The proposals were made in testimony and arguments at a hearing on complaints of Pennsylvania Coal Producer Associations and traffic bureaus that rates on bituminous coal from Pennsylvania and Northern West Virginia eastward for seaboard and export consumption were out of line with rates on other commodities.

Arthur Hale, general counsel for the Coal Export Association, called the commission's attention to a rate of 16 cents per 100 pounds recently granted shippers of export grain.

RECOVER BODY OF PROFESSOR

CAMBRIDGE SPRINGS, Pa., Sept. 12.—(AP.)—The body of a young professor at the Polish National Alliance College here who went for a boat ride on French Creek Wednesday while trying to solve a difficult mathematical problem, was taken from the stream late yesterday.

The victim, Thaddeus B. Hetke, 22, who received his master's degree at Harvard last spring and arrived here only last week, was believed to have accidentally drowned. Hetke's home was at Dorchester, Mass.

The body was recovered by coast guards from Erie, summoned after hours of dragging had failed to reveal Hetke's body, which finally was found in 14 feet of water. The boat, with his hat and coat in it, was found previously.

WALSH AWAITS KING IN CUBA

HAVANA, Sept. 12.—(AP.)—Senator David I. Walsh, of Massachusetts, has postponed his scheduled return to Washington.

He has been here for what he described as a purely social visit, but decided to remain after learning Senator William H. King, of Utah, was expected here.

The Cuban press has indulged in much speculation concerning the presence of Senator Walsh and the coming of Senator King. Previously there had been a report that an "investigating committee" composed of several members of the United States Senate Foreign Relations Committee would visit Cuba before the first of October.

2 Held for Court In Sale of Heroin

Guy Angelucci, proprietor of the Roma Restaurant, South Mill street, New Castle, and Tony Rich, a waiter in the establishment, were held for court by the United States commissioner for alleged violation of the Harrison narcotic act.

They were accused of supplying an ounce of heroin to a government informant, at the request of John DeThomas, in an alleged transaction for the purchase of an ounce each of heroin and morphine. DeThomas was held for court last week, after the alleged sale of the morphine.

REED CAUTIONS EUROPE ON U. S. 'TANGLE'

Universal Service

PARIS, Sept. 12.—Warning to Europeans that they are trying to achieve something which would do them more harm than good when they seek to involve the United States in their affairs was sounded here today by former Senator James A. Reed, of Missouri, addressing the American Club luncheon.

Emphasizing the doctrine that "America keep her hands off the affairs of other nations," the former senator, veteran of many a national political battle in his own country simultaneously paid his mock respects to "all those great men who are trying to save the world and at the same time keep their jobs."

CITES EXPULSION

Prefacing his remarks with an obvious reference to the French action in expelling William Randolph Hearst, Reed confessed himself a bit nervous about speaking his mind in his accustomed fashion, saying:

"I feel a little anxious, because I have been in the habit of saying whatever I please at home where I have people to protect me and a constitution to shield me. But I have been led to believe that a man may be invited to leave France on short notice."

The ex-Senator declared himself shocked at the notions relative to America prevalent in the old world. In Ireland, he said, he saw a 30-year-old American film giving "about as accurate a picture of American life today as 'Uncle Tom's Cabin.'" Edgar Wallace's play, "On the Spot," now featured in Europe as a picture of Chicago gang life, was also referred to by Reed as being unusual rather than typical.

As a parallel, he said, one might just as well point out the recent French "Bluebeard" as typical of the French husband.

ASSAILS APOLOGISTS

The veteran statesman did not overlook an opportunity to assail Americans who seem to delight in apologizing for their own country and brought a storm of applause when he said:

"I am by no means trying to apologize for America."

Dealing more strictly with the international field, Reed pleaded the doctrine of everybody minding his own business as applicable to nations as well as individuals. Governments and politicians, he said, have "been more responsible for the greater part of the misunderstandings between races and men." Going directly to a delicate issue hereabouts, he added:

"I believe that if all the people in France could travel through Germany for 20 days you could not make them fight in the next hundred years.

"The more we talk about organizations supposed to preserve peace, the more we are putting the thought of wars into the heads of the people. The more we warn against the dangers of war, the more we are likely to bring it to pass.

"If each nation will tend its own business, the same results will occur as in communities it happens when each man goes home and attends to his own family matters. There will come a feeling of security and peace. But when we get together in some league of nations and then leagues for having a United States of Europe and we say that the reasons for this are that if we don't do it we are going out after each others' throats, the result is that every man thinks the other fellow is sharpening a knife for his own particular gullet.

OPPOSES LEAGUE

"If you take all the mistrusts and hatred and put them together into a room, you'll have perfect peace! If we add together the sum total of these iniquities it spells virtue! That is a foolish philosophy.

"With regard to the United States entering the League of Nations, it is argued that we should enter since it will stabilize the whole thing. But, supposing the United States comes in, and some European nation has a quarrel with some other nation, how can the citizens of the first nation know that we will not come in with the wrong idea? We are just as likely to come in on the wrong idea as on the right—we, a people 3,000 miles away with no immediate contact, a people, who, however well informed on subjects in general are not well informed on international questions. I contend it is better for Europe to undertake her own affairs rather than risk the menace of placing the most powerful country on the earth, a country unacquainted with these problems, in a league of her nations."

Reed referred to the difficulties encountered by nations in running their own affairs—citing prohibition in America and Europe's own long record of mistakes.

Befriending Two Strangers Costs Man $144

NEW CASTLE, Sept. 12.—John Vito met two strangers, one of whom claimed he was sick. Vito was asked to get some medicine and was asked to leave his money, amounting to $144, as a guarantee of speedy return. He did, but when he returned his friends and money were gone.

TRAINS KILL 2 AS AUTOS STOP

STEUBENVILLE, O., Sept. 12.—James Crawford, 42, of Unionport, O., and Charles Quillen, 45, of Broadacre, O., were fatally injured when their auto stalled on a crossing and was hit by a New York Central freight train at Millers Station, west of here. Both men died as they were admitted to the Ohio Valley Hospital here.

MARTINSBURG, W. Va., Sept. 12.—(AP)—I. N. Trouth, 50, salesman of Hendersonville, N. C., was killed when his automobile stalled on a grade crossing and was struck by a Cumberland Valley passenger train. The accident occurred near Bunker Hill, 12 miles south of here.

She Was Fat And 40

THE OLD STORY A TRUE STORY

"What's the use of fibbing?" said Beatrice—"All you girls knew I was fat—Knew I was 40—But there were other things you didn't know.

Besides being fat, I was lazy—that's the exact word—No make believe in this true story—my blood was sluggish—my eyes were dull—Oh—how I did hate to get up in the morning.

No ambition—No Energy—No Activity—didn't care about going anywhere or doing anything—I was just an all 'round flop—and worst of all my husband was growing indifferent—

Yes! You're right—I was fat on my fortieth birthday—besides all the other things I have told you about—just four months ago.

But look at me now—my medical friend says I've been revitalized — rejuvenated—invigorated and reshaped.

Maybe he's right, but in my own language I'll tell the world that I have lost all of my fat and it's going to stay lost.

It was so strange and thrilling," continued Beatrice, "that my emancipation (freedom from fat) as my husband calls it, started on my fortieth birthday.

It was this way—I was reading the evening paper and right before my eyes was an article headed, 'How one woman lost 47 pounds of fat in three months' and you can just bet I woke up and got interested right away.

And all this woman did to lose all that fat was to take one-half teaspoonful of Kruschen Salts in a glass of hot water every morning before breakfast and while doing this she cut out candy, sugar, pastries and fat meats.

That seemed easy to me—I was sold on Kruschen Salts and took my first dose the next morning—that was four months ago.

Well, as you can all see, my fat is gone—I've gained a shapely figure — bright eyes — clear skin—and tireless energy—and I never felt better in my life.

Yes! I'm joyfully happy—why shouldn't I be—was ever a woman so blessed—and here's something I am going to whisper to you—

I've regained his love."

Kruschen Salts (It's the Little Daily Dose That Does It) brings activity to mind and body—Its rejuvenating influence causes the stomach, liver and bowels to do their work naturally and faultlessly.

Kruschen is not just one salt, mind you, but a combination of the six vital minerals that Nature demands you must have to keep stomach, liver, bowels and kidneys in splendid working condition at all times.

Sidestep imitations and substitutes—If you want to lose fat—Kruschen and modified diet is what you need.

There is nothing so good as Kruschen—(remember the name) taken every morning — it causes every organ, nerve, gland and fibre in the body to function naturally. One woman lost 19 pounds in four weeks.

A bottle of Kruschen Salts that lasts four weeks costs but 85 cents at any drug store in the world.

TAD JONES TALKS ON RADIO TONIGHT

Element of Surprise
Politeness This Fall
Plug for Walker
Rebellious Senility

By LOUIS REID

NEW YORK, Sept. 12.—The most persistent charm of the radio is the ever-present note of the unexpected. You never know what is in store for you in a journey on the air waves. The microphone men would occasion no surprise in us were they even to announce a broadcast tomorrow of, say an electrocution at Sing Sing. I had always considered that Babe Ruth had the most booming voice ever to reach my ears until I heard the Hon. Joseph T. Robinson of Arkansas. Were I to prescribe a tonic for a persistent case of the heebie-jeebies I would order an ear-cupping once a night for one week of the English country dances of Percy Grainger.

Louis Reid.

Fall Campaigns Will End Air Politeness

Of all the events in the offing on the radio sea my most eager interest is in the Congressional campaigns because they will definitely put a stop to the Alphonse-Gaston politeness now so prevalent on the air. The inability of the average stage comedian to be funny on the microphones continues to be a matter of great curiosity to me. I can recall only one broadcast of a special event that failed to live up even in the minutest degree to the ballyhoo that preceded it. It was the occasion of a scheduled talk by a parachute jumper as he dropped from the sky.

The most radio-frightened speaker I ever heard was Capt. Fried, of the American, but Gloria Swanson crowds him closely for the distinction. I continue to believe that "A Garden in the Rain" is the best dance ballad to come out of England since the war.

I never thought that the "Beautiful Blue Danube" could possess any new charm for me until I heard it played by the expert fiddles of the Philharmonic. I am ever at a loss to understand why the broadcasters, tracking down oldtime tunes, continue to pass by "Ta Ra Ra Ra Boom-de-Aye," the whoopee song of the nineties.

It is my persistent hope that I will be within easy call of my armchair when the broadcasters finally decide to lead the Four Marx Brothers, maddest of the mad wags, to the microphones. The most wistful of all the college songs for me is Princeton's "Old Nassau."

Though my search has been painstaking I am yet unable to discover whether Theodore Dreiser ever received any royalties for his lyrical contribution to "On the Banks of the Wabash." Nothing, to my mind, did more to humanize the Washington scene in the past year for the eardrums than the old-fashioned bee between congressmen and newspaper men.

Walker Might Have Been Famous Jazz Song Writer

I am ever captivated by the varied pronunciation on the air of the name Saint-Saens. One of the most satisfying uses of the radio, to my mind, is the opportunity it affords most listeners to turn off after-dinner speeches. It is my opinion that James J. Walker would be among the most successful of jazz song-writers had he continued in his early activity as a Broadway tunesmith.

I once heard Herbert Hoover clear his throat six times in a 20-minute speech. The enterprise of the broadcasters will not reach its peak, it seems to me, until they have organized a parade of radio artists. Fifth avenue would be closed to traffic two days to let it pass. The jazz band division alone would easily stretch from the Battery to Forty-second street.

Of Chic Sale's various impersonations—radio has yet to hear him as "The Specialist"—I am most amused by that of the railroad-crossing watchman on the witness stand, who asked whether the automobile beat the train to the crossing, answered: "It was a tie." I have not surrendered hope of hearing some day Speaker Longworth stroke a violin or Senator Tydings tickle a piano. There will be no regrets from me when the exploits of Gallant Fox are replaced on the air by the exploits of Albit Booth.

I have never ceased to regret that when Dr. Julius Klein traced advertising back to the cave man he did not at the same time trace the cave man back to advertising.

Were I a member of a committee appointed by Thomas A. Edison to award a decoration for the best memory in the world I would urge the name of Arturo Toscanini if only because he has the scores of 100 operas in the back part of his head.

Out of sympathy I invariably tune off the average soprano when she reaches the last bar of "My Hero" from "The Chocolate Soldier." The most defiantly highbrow concert that these ears have yet detected on the microphone was a piano recital by Josef Hofmann.

No Room on Radio for Rebellious Senility

I am ever curious to know why there is always room on the radio for those speakers who would express sympathy for rebellious youth but none for those speakers who would express sympathy for rebellious senility.

It's so hot in most recording studios at downtown stations that the announcers always refer to them as "Studio H."

Do you know that radio artists have doubles? The girl you hear speak lines so softly in a radiodrama is not always the same character who later sings "Sweet Mystery of Life." The main character steps aside while her "double" warbles in song.

We've been reading Wild Oscar's private mail. Among it was this token from a friend in the South:

On the inside was this inscription:

"Broadcasting exclusively for Mr. and Mrs. Pierre Baulogne."

"WILL ALWAYS BE A BOOSTER FOR KONJOLA"

Pittsburgh Resident Tells How New Medicine Put An End To Years of Neuritis

What cheerful news this is for all who suffer from neuritis, and who may fear that they never will find relief from this most distressing ailment.

MR. J. E. CHAMBERS

Take the experience of Mr. J. E. Chambers, 3830 Perrysville avenue, Pittsburgh, and then hear all about this modern medicine from the Konjola Man at the Dow Drug Store, Penn avenue and Sixth street, Pittsburgh. Read the words of Mr. Chambers, who said to the Konjola Man:

"Neuritis in my arms and shoulders caused misery for the past two years. My work is outdoors, and I am exposed to all kinds of weather. I tried many medicines that were highly recommended, but could find no relief. Friends advised me to give Konjola a trial, and this I did. To date I have used six bottles, and with the first two came signs of relief. As I continued with the treatment all my pains disappeared, and my bowels were regulated. I highly recommend Konjola to anyone who suffers as I did, and I will always be a booster for Konjola."

So it goes; victory after victory when Konjola is given a chance to show why seven million bottles of this amazing medicine were used in two years. Konjola is a medicine of the aged or the infant; for all the family. That is why Konjola is a household word in tens of thousands of American homes.

CAPT BLAKE
DALE
ESTELLE HAWLEY—
"SHE HAD ONE OR TWO OF THE CHECKS HE GAVE HER AND WAS ATTEMPTING TO USE THEM AS A MEANS FOR EXTRACTING A SETTLEMENT"
CAPT. BLAKE—
BLACKMAIL, WE CALL THAT, MISS HAWLEY

WHAT HAS GONE BEFORE.

Zelma Shaw, a chorus girl is found in her apartment, dead by arsenic poisoning. Oscar Welling, her recently-divorced paramour has been shot to death. The apartment is locked and bolted on the inside. All windows are barred. The hallboy had broken open the door at eight in the morning and found the bodies. Robin Dale finds a card in the apartment signed "M. W." It is in a box of chocolates. The night boy tells of three visitors the night of the murders. No prints are found on the revolver which killed Welling. Nor are there any prints on the glass containing the poison which killed Zelma Shaw. Two small cardboard boxes are found in a cabinet. They each contain capsules. Sergt. Jardin learns that Brandies, Zelma's attorney, had returned to the apartment at 11:30. This was after the crimes had been committed. Brandies also called at 7:30 the following morning. Myrtle Welling, widow of the dead man, is called by the police.

Now go on with the story.

CHAPTER V.

Mrs. Welling was a gentlewoman. Robin Dale saw that the moment she entered Capt. Blake's office and walked with erect, proud posture and unfaltering steps to a chair beside the desk.

She was still a young woman and exceedingly beautiful, but there was a distinction between her aristocratic beauty and the showy attractiveness of Zelma Shaw. Mrs. Welling seemed to be unaware of her charm while the Titian Butterfly, proclaimed hers in every act and gesture. After all, Zelma Shaw bartered with hers while Mrs. Welling's was deemed a sacred gift.

Dale in a fleeting moment wondered what made men sacrifice pure gold for filthy dross. It happens every day and no one had ever found an acceptable answer. Capt. Blake's first words sent the thought a-glimmering.

"Did you write this, Mrs. Welling?" Blake was holding the tiny card toward her. She merely glanced at it and nodded her head.

"In view of the tragic happening and the circumstances leading up to it we thought you might like to make an explanation."

"It was rather a silly thing to do and as the woman" . . . she placed a peculiar emphasis on that word . . . "came to her end by poison I believe you are entitled to an explanation."

She paused for some moments as though considering the manner in which to make her explanation. Dale watched her closely from where he sat and marveled at her self-possession. She had every trace of unhappiness and bitterness that this second tragedy in her life must have been causing her. And yet her warm, olive skin and brown eyes, that had a strange softness about them, bespoke a woman of great emotions.

"I'll have to go back many months . . . I had met Miss Shaw at gatherings and had become friendly with her. We were together quite often. There was one party in particular some months ago, while we were enjoying ourselves unusually well, that she pointed out my husband dancing with one of the guests . . . She said something about my watching him or I'd be losing him. Laughingly I told her I believed in him. Merely in fun she said she'd wager a box of chocolates that she could win him away from me. In a spirit of fun I accepted." Mrs. Welling paused again.

"You see, I did believe in my husband with the implicitness of blind faith. The wager of the chocolates seemed merely a joke, but in seriousness I would have wagered my life on him.

"As you know, I lost . . . I remembered the silly wager and paid it. When one has lost so much one cannot revoke on such a small thing as a box of chocolates."

Capt. Blake and Robin Dale sat for some time in silence after Mrs. Welling had left the office. She had made a deep impression on them.

"How simply the most perplexin' things can be explained away," Dale mused.

"It wasn't an easy story for her to tell, but she went through it like a thoroughbred." There was a touch of admiration in Captain Blake's voice.

"Another disillusioned woman in this old world of ours, captain. Funny place but very popular. Who's next?"

"Suppose we keep up our strength with a little food in the meantime."

They had returned to Captain Blake's office by two when the attendant announced that a Miss Estelle Hawley wanted to see the captain about the Zelma Shaw case, she said.

A rather pretty young woman, exquisitely gowned, was ushered in. She appeared very nervous and ill-at-ease and preferred to stand at Blake's desk.

"I am Estelle Hawley, fiancee of Gregory Brandies," she began. "I understand Gregory has been called to appear here this afternoon. I was afraid that there are certain things he may not explain on my account, but unless you know the complete truth there may be suspicion cast upon Gregory an account of the woman's death." Once again Dale thought he heard a peculiar inflection on the word referring to Zelma Shaw.

"Gregory had become infatuated with her," the young lady continued, "and foolishly paid certain expenses for her. She held one or two of the checks he gave her and was attempting to use them as a means of extracting a settlement. Gregory, as you know, inherited a large fortune from his father."

"Blackmail, we call it, Miss Hawley."

"That's what she was doing . . . Gregory has confessed everything to me now that the silly infatuation has passed. I love him enough to forgive him anything, enough to come and bare everything to you. Last night Gregory went to her home for the last time. She insisted upon being paid, and gave him until midnight to return with the money under the threat of turning over her documents to the newspapers and ruining his career.

"There was quite a scene between them, and then Gregory left and returned before midnight with the money to pay her, but was unable to see her."

"Miss Hawley, were you at Miss Shaw's apartment early in the evening?" Robin Dale asked unexpectedly.

"Pattern 2019

Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph 15c Practical Pattern

By ANNE ADAMS

If you have time for a bit of hand work, this adorable little model is lovely smocked below the front and back yokes, yet gathering will do very nicely and create just as much fullness. The collar, cuffs and sleeve bands may be cut from contrasting material. There are bloomers, too.

Pattern 2019 may be made of dimity, swiss, pique, gingham, cotton broadcloth, etc. White with colored dots, colored smocking and colored ribbon bow, would be cunning; or a color with white dots, etc. Brown shantung and natural pongee are very popular with youngsters this season, and are very practical.

May be obtained only in sizes 2, 4, 6 and 8. Size 4 requires 1⅞ yards of 36-inch material.

No dressmaking experience is necessary to make this model with our pattern. Yardage for every size, and simple, exact instructions are given.

Send FIFTEEN CENTS (15c) in coins carefully wrapped, or stamps, for each pattern. Write plainly your name, address and style number. BE SURE TO STATE SIZE WANTED.

JOE E. BROWN BRINGS LITTLE MOUSIE TO STANLEY

By CLARENCE E. GRUNDISH

Joe E. Brown formerly of the stage and lately with the movies is making an appearance in person in the Stanley. He's the fellow with the wide-open grin you know.

He is present as the big feature in Gene Morgan's new revue, "Laff-O-Mania." And incidentally this name is a good one for Brown. One keen comic he is. He tells a couple of stories one being his famous "Little Mousie" tale. He displays some of his trick steps. And assisted nicely by Mr. Morgan he spills a couple comedy gags. The result is applause more applause and then some more applause.

Of course there are other entertainers in "Laff-O-Mania" some who do quite well. Take the team of Apache dancers. They show pep and originality. Organist Bernie Armstrong and Mr. Morgan also do a skit in pantomime that is amusing.

OPERETTA PATTERN

The screen has "Dixiana" starring Bebe Daniels. It is an RKO picture. But it isn't another "Rio Rita."

The film keeps to the operetta pattern. Tunes and lyrics are scattered all about. Comedy comes in big but spasmodic doses with Bert Wheeler and Robert Woolsey in prominence. These lads spend a lot of time with their game of the three cigars. The idea is to pick up the cigars without saying "ouch." And that's where the kick comes in. Ouch!

ONLY A CIRCUS GIRL

A story sandwiched between the song and the comedy gets quite melodramatic at times. It has Miss Daniels in the role of a circus girl of old New Orleans. She falls in love with an aristocratic fellow and they sing a couple of songs at each other, only to learn it takes more than songs to bring the happy finale. But it does come ultimately after a big splash of music, melodrama and scenic elaborateness in a gambling house and in an atmosphere of the good old Mardi Gras.

Supporting players include Everett Marshall, Joseph Cawthorn and Ralf Harolde.

The production attains some picturesqueness with its costumes and settings of a day that is gone. But many of its musical displays are made of modern-day stuff.

Short screen entertainment includes a fashion reel, in which movie stars display some of the latest styles from Paris.

MOVIE CLOCK

Hours at which feature photoplays begin in first run houses are in accordance with the following time schedule:

PENN: "Anybody's Woman" 10:07, 11:47 a. m., 1:58, 4:18, 6:56, 8:16 and 10:52 p. m.

STANLEY: "Dixiana" 11:50 a. m., 1:50, 4:25, 5:45, 8:20 and 10:55 p. m.

ALDINE: "Animal Crackers"—10 a. m., 12:05, 2:35, 5:05, 7:35 and 10:05 p. m.

WARNER: "All Quiet On the Western Front"—10:49 a. m., 1:31, 4:13, 6:55 and 9:37 p. m.

ENRIGHT: "The Way of All Men" 1:57, 4:13, 5:53, 8:09 and 10:25 p. m.

SHERIDAN SQUARE: "Eyes of the World"—12:01, 1:56, 3:57, 5:58, 7:59 and 10 p. m.

HARRIS: "The Squealer"—12:26, 3:22, 4:18, 6:17, 8:13 and 10:09 p. m.

Star Role

Douglas Fairbanks, Jr., has his first starring role in "The Way of All Men" film opening today in the Enright.

Kiwanians Hear Judge McNaugher

Judge William H. McNaugher of Common Pleas Court, addressed members of the Kiwanis Club of Pittsburgh at their weekly luncheon yesterday in the Fort Pitt Hotel. Judge McNaugher spoke on his experiences since ascending to the bench this week. This program was under direction of the financial group, A. J. Bradford, chairman.

Lilyan Tashman to Revive Her Chorus Girl Days In New Picture

By HARRISON CARROLL

(Copyright, 1930, Premier Syndicate.)

HOLLYWOOD, Sept. 12.

Most leading women prefer to forget their chorus days, but Lilyan Tashman will revive hers in a series of four articles for a national magazine.

She has just signed a contract which brings her $750 a story for her initial literary out-put. The series will be called "Gangway for the Chorus Girl" and will be based on Lilyan's experience in the Ziegfeld Follies. The characters will be fictional.

Lilyan Tashman

In addition to this, Lilyan will undertake to edit a fashion page for Rob Wagner's "Script," a zestful publication that originates in Beverly Hills, home of many of the film people.

As usual, Lilyan and Ed Lowe are talking about a New York trip but they seldom are able to get away from picture engagements at the same time.

ANOTHER FOR GRETA

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer now has bought "Inspiration," an original story by James Forbes, and is considering it as a vehicle for the Swedish star.

The choice lies to-date between "Red Dust," a story that has been in possession of the company for some time, "Mata-Hari," a play recently purchased from Barney Glazer and "Inspiration." Or it may be something else entirely.

Finding a part for Greta presents obvious difficulties. Moreover, in her case, the studio is not satisfied with a mediocre success as it might be with other stars. Greta must be sensational, or nothing.

CONTRACTS THROUGH

When June Clyde enters into the marital contract with Thornton Freeland today, she exits from her picture contract with R. K. O. In the future, she plans to freelance between stage and screen. There was an offer to do a New York play this fall, but Freeland has vetoed the idea. The couple will take a two-week motor honeymoon.

Mary Doran has followed Dorothy Sebastian's example in asking Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer to release her from her contract. She was getting good roles at the studio, but thinks she can better herself free-lancing. And there seems to be justice in her argument, for she already has lined up three leads at Tiffany and two at Columbia.

Mary Doran

Lillian Roth is another player to join the free-lance field. She has left Paramount to go back into vaudeville. Later, she'll be back in Hollywood.

DO YOU KNOW that Lewis Ayres formerly was a banjo player in a Los Angeles orchestra?

REDISTRICTING MEETINGS SET

Five meeting have been set for next week by the sub-committee of the Redistricting Commission for Allegheny County for the purpose of hearing suggestions in regard to changing election districts.

The first two meetings will be held Tuesday, September 16, in Wilkinsburg's Municipal building and the Municipal Building in Homestead.

On Thursday, September 18, meetings will be held in Brackenridge, Fawn and Harrison townships. These three meetings are scheduled for Natrona.

New Exhibits at Kaufmann Center

New exhibits, typical of the work of the various departments of the Irene Kaufmann Settlement, have been put on display throughout the buildings in preparation for the fall opening of activities. An art and sculpture display, showing some remarkable work of young settlement members, and a case exhibit of clubwork, gymnasium activities, and handcrafts are two of the most prominent of the exhibits.

The young men's social room, has also been rearranged, with new equipment and furniture added and has been put in order for the coming season.

5 in Bellevue Church Contest

Five young people will compete in a speaking contest next Wednesday night in the Bellevue Methodist Protestant Church, for a gold medal to be awarded by the Bellevue unit, Woman's Christian Temperance Union. Those entered are Jack McFarland, representing the Forest Avenue Presbyterian Church; Charlotte Park, the Avalon United Presbyterian Church; Angie Holna, Bellevue Methodist Episcopal Church; Frederick Bing and Isobel Gerchen, of the Bellevue Methodist Protestant Church. Miss Gerchen recently was awarded a silver medal in a similar contest.

East Liberty 'Y' Opens Night School

The East Liberty Y. M. C. A. evening school will open on September 29. This will mark the 30th year of practical educational service to ambitious adults.

Courses will be given in advertising, business correspondence, business principles, English, English for foreign-born, dramatics, blue print reading and estimating, practical investments, Italian, French, Spanish, German, mathematics, public speaking, real estate, show card writing, salesmanship and mechanical, structural and architectural drawing.

P. M. I. to Present Free Music Talks

The Pittsburgh Musical Institute announces a series of illustrated talks on "Modern Music Education" by Miss Angela Diller of New York at 9 o'clock and at 1 o'clock September 15, 16 and 17 in the Recital Hall. These talks are free and all are invited. Miss Diller is prominent in advanced musical training of children. She has written a number of books on the subject.

Washington Pa., Man Joins 'Y' Staff Here

Theodore Blackhurst, of Washington, Pa., has joined the staff of the Downtown Y. M. C. A. Blackhurst graduated from the Chicago Y. M. C. A. College in June and since that time has been on the summer camp staff of the Washington association.

OVATIONS GIVEN MARINE BAND

President Hoover's own United States Marine Band, 60 pieces strong, playing for the benefit of the crippled children and the Boys' Club, under the auspices of Pittsburgh Rotarians, received thunderous ovations last night from thousands of persons who packed the Syria Mosque.

The band, playing under the baton of Capt. Taylor Branson, was forced to quadruple its program of eight selections.

Included in the announced program and the many encores was a type of music to meet every desire. Opening with the overture, Henry Hadley's "In Bohemia," the band went right down the list, including Rudy Valee's "Stein Song" and the Marine's "national anthem," "The Stars and Stripes Forever." Greatest applause, however, was elicited by medleys of marching and patriotic songs.

A medley of Stephen Foster's songs, arranged by Capt. Branson, was offered, in honor of the Pittsburgh composer.

The audience also revealed deep appreciation for the soloists, Arthur S. Whitcomb, cornet, and Robert E. Clark, trombone, the latter answering three encores.

A group of songs were sung by Miss Helen Maree Greenwood, dramatic soprano, accompanied on the piano by Miss Helen Machette.

Show Boat Bills New Floor Show

A new floor bill opens in the Show Boat, Sixth street and Duquesne way, tonight. It features Nat Nazarro, Jr., and Fuzzy Knight, comedy pianist, whose act is continued. Others in the bill are the Winslows, roller skaters; Jerrie Blanchard, blues singer; Hannah and Mary, Miss Personality and "the 10 tempting daughters of Eve" dancing ensemble. Jimmy Carr's orchestra will be heard in musical numbers.

Girl Named Editor Of Bucknell Paper

LEWISBURG, Pa., Sept. 12.—A woman, for the first time in the history of the publication, is editor of the Bucknellian, student newspaper at Bucknell University. She is Miss Trennie E. Eisley, formerly of Milton, but now a resident of Lewisburg. Miss Eisley has been on the college newspaper staff for three years.

Carpenter Hurt In 30 Foot Fall

Portrait of a Man Talking to Himself

Well, I guess I won't rate a pass to heaven after all . . . I'm a bad boy, that's what I am . . . All the time making cracks . . . The very idea! . . . Daring to have a sense of humor! . . . On the other hand, maybe if I ever become an editor (gahfobid!) I'll get emotional and ridiculous the way Harvey got . . . All because I printed about his costly trans-Atlantic call to Mme. Coste (who spoke in French) and his reporter only savvies slang . . . So Harvey got dramatic and started an investigation to "find out how Winchell got that stuff!" . . . Haw! . . . Maybe Harvey's face would get purple if he learned that one of his Sherlocks gave it to me!

If they were good detectives, then they'd know by now that it didn't come from Harvey's staff . . . So all right . . . They find out the source . . . Let 'em . . . So suppose the grand guy with the sense of humor (the most priceless of the inheritances) gets fired? . . . So what happens? . . . I use every influence to connect him with my rag or two others . . . Hearst chirped a mouthful when he recently said that when a man wants you to keep anything out of the paper it is good news! . . . When he wants you to print it—it is propaganda or advertising! . . . What Harvey didn't want printed was good news . . . My ambition is to be a good newspaperman.

That's what slays me . . . They say it takes 65 muscles to frown and only five to smile . . . Some guys would rather tire themselves out scowling instead of laughing and lasting . . . The funniest gags told about me were first printed in my column. If I heard them before my contemporaries did . . . And, anyway, I didn't squawk when Harvey headlined his front page with "Mrs. Winchell Arrested!" the time a woman by that name was nabbed in Brooklyn for teaching kids how to burgle . . . All the other rags gave it ten lines and a single column head, which it rated because it was an unimportant bit of news . . . But the enterprising Harvey probably figured the name would sell in the Times Square district, so he made a pretty front page banner out of it.

Newspapermen and newspaper stuff excite me . . . They are more spellbinding than all the movie and stage stars and their stories . . . Which usually are about their marriages, divorces, two-timing and their temperaments . . . There's that clever stunt that was pulled down in the S. American countries where they are putting Presidents on the spot . . . When the recent fireworks began, the censors muffled all cable press dispatches, but forgot to stifle the radio phones . . . After the Times used the radio phone at hundreds of dollars per minute, to get the Buenos Aires revolution yarns, the censors woke up and clamped that, too . . . But one newspaper lad, Percy Forster, was too smart.

Even with the censors listening in to make sure no news got through, Forster, the International News Service man, began making scoopee thru to N. Y., on the refusal of the Argentine Navy to fire on army revolters and the joining of the revolution by the gobs . . . The INS lad, who rates a wage tilt and promotion, called up H. C. Montee, cable editor of INS here, and began telling him jokes . . . Montee wondered if his correspondent was nuts . . . Then the correspondent pulled his punch-line: "The fishermen are jumpy, but they won't bite" . . . Montee got it! . . . The navy had refused to join the revolution! . . . News!

And the wallop that went with blasting the one about the doll from the night club (now in a hospital) who was last seen with the "lost" Supreme Court Justice Crater . . . A new clue! . . . Maybe it would help locate him? . . . The reporter who landed it almost choked because he couldn't get it in his own rag, the last edition of which had been put to bed . . . So he phoned a pal on an opposition journal, which beat its nearest rival by two hours with the tale . . . "Thanks," the pal said to the Santa Claus the next day, "but the gal who is in the hospital has two gorillas guarding her from reporters and they have vowed to bump off the guy who spilled it!" . . . Hooey . . . The guy who spilled it was the one who promoted the "gorills" to frighten off other reporters! . . . Newman Levy once wrote it in the thrilling manner something like this:

So here's to the gallant reporters, the boys with the pencils and pads. Those calm, imperturbable, cool, undisturbable, nervy, inquisitive lads. Each time that we pick up a paper, their marvelous deeds we should bless. Those bold, reprehensible, brave, indispensable, sensible lads of the press!

I must remember what to say the next time an aspiring reporter wants counsel . . . I'll give him what Lord Castlerosse told me Ruddy Kipling gave him . . . Kip flipped:

"After you've written your article, read it carefully, then eliminate all the adjectives, all the four-syllable words, and never use three words when you can use two."

Lord Casserole's discussion of the Rudy Vallee feud with newspapermen was amusing . . . Rudy, it appears, has been snapping back at reporters all over the country . . . His Lordship points out that anyone who tiffs with newspapermen starts off with two strikes on him, because the newspapermen can always have the final word.

"The person," said Cassy, "who quarrels with a newspaperman is as silly as the fellow who matches his mouth-made 'razzberry' against thunder."

Wonder how I can reach Frances White, who just got into that jam over a cab fare? . . . A lad sent me a check for her and doesn't want his tag printed . . . That's the second time he's done that to people in distress, which Frances says she isn't . . . Incidentally, without revealing his identity the other night, Nick, the Creek, the guy who has won and lost millions across the dice tables, gave two kids $15 to pay their hotel bill . . . A minute later he was on his paws and kneecaps in Dave's Blue Room frantically searching for something he had dropped . . . "What did you lose, Nick?" I asked him . . . "I got it! I got it!" he cried as he pocketed the recovered treasure . . . It was a dime.

RAHN NAMED JUDGES' AIDE

For five years private secretary to the district attorney of Allegheny County, George Rahn, of 2645 Ellis avenue, returned from a Canadian fishing trip with District Attorney Andrew T. Park during which he landed a six-pound small mouthed black bass, then he landed a still bigger prize in being named private secretary to Judges Samuel H. Gardner and Sylvester J. Snee, at a substantial increase in salary.

Rahn and Fish

Judge Gardner, while district attorney, appointed Rahn his private secretary, and when he was elevated to the bench, his successor, District Attorney Park, reappointed Rahn.

CONSIDER PLANS FOR STATE DAY

Details for the special program on Pennsylvania Day to be observed October 3 in conjunction with the nineteenth annual Safety Congress and Exposition were discussed yesterday at a session of the executive committee, Pittsburgh Safety Congress committee, in the Chamber of Commerce.

Committee plans call for the observance to be the feature day of the week's convention. All activities of the day will be under supervision of the Pennsylvania Day committee. A street exposition in William Penn way with non-commercial displays will be included on the program with special attractions.

E. T. Whiter, chairman of the executive committee, presided at yesterday's session. Among committee members were Walter Rosenbaum, Frank C. Duggan, Frank J. Lanahan, W. S. Linderman, G. E. Clarkson, T. A. Dunn, C. B. Auel, Edward H. Sykes and Mark Egan.

Last Civil War Vet In House Near Death

WASHINGTON, Sept. 12.—(INS.)—Representative Charles M. Stedman, of North Carolina, 89-year-old Confederate veteran, sole surviving Civil War veteran in the House, was believed today to be nearing the end of his notable career at Mt. Alto Hospital, a veterans' institution here.

Stedman was said today to have passed a fairly comfortable night, but that his condition was serious. He was stricken Tuesday with a stroke of apoplexy. The venerable veteran began his career in the House in 1911 when he was 70 year old.

N. A. T., STOUT LINES MERGE

CHICAGO, Sept. 12 (AP)—Plans for the purchase of Stout Air Services, operating passenger lines between Chicago, Detroit and Cleveland, were announced here today.

Both companies are divisions of the United Aircraft and Transport Corporation, and their activities will be merged as rapidly as possible, Lester D. Seymour, vice president and general manager of N. A. T., said. His company carries all mail and express between New York, Chicago and Dallas.

In four years Stout ships have flown 1,559,000 miles, carrying 126,000 passengers without injury. N. A. T. has carried 9,000,000 pounds of cargo, 8,500,000 miles in four and one-half years.

Pine to Lead Fight On Meyer Bank Post

OKMULGEE, Okla., Sept. 12 (AP)—Opposition to confirmation by the United States Senate of Eugene Meyer, Jr., New York, as a member of the Federal Reserve Board was announced here by Senator W. B. Pine, Republican.

Senator Pine said he based his opposition, in the belief that the position should be filled by a member either from the Tenth or Eleventh Federal Reserve Districts. He also declared that Meyer is an "internationalist."

Firemen Put Out Blaze at Tiny Golf Course

Firemen early today extinguished a small fire in the office of the miniature golf course operated by H. B. Rea at Center and Negley avenues. Damage was estimated at $50. Firemen said they were unable to learn the cause of the blaze.

MORROW SOON ON WAY HOME

MEXICO CITY, Sept. 12 (AP)—Ambassador Dwight W. Morrow announced officially he would leave for the United States September 17, going via Nogales, where he expects to arrive the twenty-first.

Mr. Morrow intends to have a short vacation, a spot yet to be chosen, perhaps in New Mexico. He expects to return to Washington the first week in October to resign his present position and undertake his political campaign.

In a final press conference today, it was announced Morrow would have a leading part in Mexico's Independence Day celebration, September 16. A reception for the Ambassador planned for the diplomatic corps was cancelled because of the death of Gen. Carlos Marquez Colombian minister to Mexico.

RICKENBACKER HURT IN FALL

NEW YORK, Sept. 12 (AP)—Capt. Eddie Rickenbacker, famous World War ace and automobile racer, is nursing several bruised vertebrae as the result of a recent 25-foot fall in a sleep walking expedition.

Capt. Rickenbacker said that while he was lightly bandaged the injury was not serious and he expected to be normal again within a few weeks. He said he had fallen from a balcony of his home at Riverdale-on-Hudson, to the lawn Sunday morning during an attack of somnambulism.

BANK ROBBER ADMITS GUILT

VAN WERT, O., Sept. 12 (AP)—Charles Blair, 50, of Moorestown, W. Va., was held in $10,000 bond for the grand jury after pleading guilty to robbing the Farmers Bank of Ohio City Monday. Previously Blair had pleaded not guilty but altered his plea when the charge was explained to him.

Blair's companion in the holdup, Charles Anderson, 27, of Pittsburgh, was shot by the cashier before the pair escaped in an automobile. Anderson is recovering at a hospital here.

Ask your Radiola dealer today to demonstrate sensational new instrument acclaimed by the inventor of radio himself

Praised by the great Marconi . . . acclaimed by the inventor who sent the first "wireless" message . . . hailed by the scientist who has stood at the peak in radio for 36 years!

And so Marconi heads the list of enthusiastic experts . . . radio engineers . . . broadcasting officials . . . broadcasting artists . . . and musicians who have marveled at the thrilling tone and power of the new Radiola Super-Heterodyne.

The world's most brilliant group of radio engineers created it—the same experts who build so many of the great broadcasting stations! Seven years of research and millions of dollars went into its development. Based on the same dependable Super-Heterodyne principle relied on to intercept the all-important SOS, the new Radiola is 4 times more alert than any recent model in bringing you a wide range of the finest programs . . . 3 times more selective in getting any one station you want without interference from others.

Four years ago, a Radiola Super-Heterodyne console cost $570. Today, with every tested feature known to radio science, the exquisite new model illustrated here can be yours for the remarkably low price of $142.50, less Radiotrons.

The best now costs no more. See your Radiola dealer today. He is a dependable merchant selling the world's most dependable musical instrument—the RCA Radiola.

ADDING to Milady's beauty has become one of the nation's major industries. Today there are salons and parlors where expert hands tend to the setting of Madame's coiffure, where agile fingers knead Madame's face in an invigorating massage, where scientific preparations renew the beauty of the hungry skin. It is all-important that you seek out the more reliable of these shops. That you entrust your greatest asset—beauty—to experienced hands. Thus, we suggest that you patronize those establishments who advertise in the Sun-Telegraph. Their reputation is solid. They are the masters of their profession. So that you may easily use their messages as a guide, we have grouped them every Sunday in the Society Section of the Sun-Telegraph. In these masseurs, barbers and beauticians you may place the utmost confidence. They are Sun-Telegraph advertisers, and are endorsed by the Sun-Telegraph.

What Advertisers Want to Know

These Linage Figures Reflect the Newspaper Advertising Trend in Pittsburgh

The following figures, as taken from Media Records, show how advertisers are increasing their linage in the Sun-Telegraph, and are steadily withdrawing their dependence on the other Pittsburgh newspapers to carry their selling messages to the buyers in this market.

Advertisers who have made a study of the situation, and have made a consistent test of the Sun-Telegraph, know for a fact that this newspaper is the most powerful selling medium in the Pittsburgh area.

Not Circulation Totals— But Character of Families Reached

CIRCULATION is important to advertisers only when it reaches families able and ready to buy that which is offered for sale. No matter whether the newspaper's readers live one mile or twenty miles from the merchants' stores, they are no value from an advertising standpoint unless they are able to buy.

What Agency Executives Say:

*"Advertising agencies, well supplied these days with information about newspaper circulations, advertising rates, and linage carried, are turning their attention more and more to editorial contents and classes of readers reached. There is less of the idea of buying circulation totals, and a growing attitude of trying to fit a particular advertising campaign into the newspapers that appeal most to the potential buyers of that product.

"After all, no one ever bought circulation totals alone except the old patent medicine man with universal distribution.

"About the only thing a publisher has to sell an advertiser is the attention of people. We're trying to buy the people who can and will buy the things advertised. The more a publisher can tell us the kinds of people he reaches, the better we like it.

"If a newspaper puts on a popular columnist, or adds an outstanding comic strip, that is important to the advertising agency, and we should be told about it."

*Excerpts from an interview with Frank M. Lawrence and Ben Duffy, of Batten, Barton, Durstine & Osborn, New York, as reported in Editor & Publisher for August 16, 1930.

The Sun-Telegraph commands the best newspaper talent available. No other Pittsburgh newspaper provides for its readers such complete news services, famous writers, exclusive news pictures and expensive features. It is only natural therefore that people who appreciate the better things of life would be the first to recognize the merits of a newspaper of this character.

Every advertiser familiar with the Pittsburgh market knows that the city proper has long since overflowed its restricted corporate limits . . . many of the middle class and better districts have become overcrowded and have deteriorated from their former condition as families with means have moved to the more pleasant residential suburbs adjacent to the city.

It is no mere claim that Sun-Telegraph circulation is predominant in the middle and better class districts of the City of Pittsburgh and in the residential districts surrounding the city. There is no longer any doubt but that the Sun-Telegraph now reaches the majority of families in this market most able to buy merchandise of every kind and class, and advertisers demonstrate their knowledge of this fact by their increased use of space in this newspaper.

Proved by Fact That Advertisers Show Increased Preference for the Sun-Telegraph

For the first seven-months period of this year the Sun-Telegraph shows a gain in total advertising of 1,225,161 lines over the same period of last year. For this same period the other evening and Sunday newspaper shows a loss of 2,091,663 lines, and the morning newspaper shows a loss of 674,452 lines.

During the first seven months of last year the Sun-Telegraph carried 32.7% of all the advertising appearing in Pittsburgh newspapers. This year, for the same period, it carried 38.3%—a gain of 6.1%. Both other newspapers showed a loss in their proportionate share, the evening and Sunday newspaper dropping from 47.7% to 43.2%, and the morning newspaper dropping from 19.6% to 18.0%. As revealed by the linage figures shown on the left, these totals were not affected solely by any one classification . . . the Sun-Telegraph shows substantial gains in all important classifications.

128 PICTURES IN SHIPMENT TO MUSEUM

Record Consignment of Art Worth Half Million Comes To Show at International

A shipment of 128 paintings, valued at $500,000, was received in Pittsburgh yesterday for exhibition in the Carnegie International. It was the largest consignment ever made to the Carnegie Museum. There were 32 crates. Sixty-two of the canvases are French, the others being the works of artists in Belgium, Austria, Switzerland, Czecho-Slovakia and Russia.

Special interest will be attached this year to the Russian section. It will be the first time since 1914 that the Carnegie Institute will have a collection of paintings direct from Russia. Last March, Giuillaume Lerolle, European representative of the Carnegie Institute, visited Russia and arranged for the representation. While the selection of artists was made by the institute, the arrangement for the section and the shipment out of Russia was made through the courtesy of the Soviet Union Society for Cultural Relations with Foreign Countries.

The Russian artists, in Russia, because of the economic situation, have no market for their paintings. The government is the only possible purchaser. It buys paintings which go to small museums or to decorate the workers' clubs and union headquarters.

The subjects of the paintings purchased by the government must be confined to industrial scenes. This is not true, however, of the paintings which will be in the Carnegie International, for in subject they are as diverse as those of any other nation. The Russian section promises to be the most interesting in the International.

AUTO CRASHES PARKED CAR; 4 HURT

Bus Passengers Shaken, Woman Injured in Triple Collision in Baum Blvd.

Nine persons were reported recovering in hospitals today as the result of auto accidents in the Pittsburgh district last night, according to police reports.

Mrs. Viola Caskie, 22, of 454 Patterson avenue, McKeesport; Herman King, 25, of 1224 Railroad avenue, McKeesport, and Rex Prebley, 28, of Eighth avenue, McKeesport, are in the McKeesport Hospital with serious injuries.

Police said that David King, of Market street, McKeesport, lost control of the machine in which Prebley, Herman King and John Macetta, 30, of Monessen, were riding, and crashed into a parked car in which Mrs. Caskie was sitting. Macetta received minor injuries.

SKULL FRACTURED

Mrs. Bertha Wucher, 60, of 1513 Howard street, is in the Allegheny General Hospital with a fracture of the skull, received when she was struck by an auto operated by G. Kitsch, 39, of Perrysville, near her home, police say.

Passengers in a bus driven by John C. O'Toole, of 538 Osceola street, and owned by the Pittsburgh Motor Coach Company, were shaken when it collided with three automobiles, operated by William M. Robinson, of Monessen; Frank S. Simpson, of 912 Maryland avenue, and Louis C. Wolfe, of 115 Seventh street. Robinson's wife, Ruth Anna, 33, is in the Homeopathic Hospital with injuries to her chest.

TWO WOMEN HURT

When their auto was sideswiped by another at Monongahela avenue and Third street, Glassport, Mrs. Sophie Pavlik, 35, of 94 Glen avenue, Portvue, and Mrs. Mary Lagun, 46, of 595 Romaine avenue, Portvue, suffered bruises. They are in the McKeesport Hospital.

Edward Moritz, 24, of 529 Vermont avenue, Glassport, was seriously hurt when, as he cranked an automobile in Monongahela avenue, Glassport, he was hit by another car driven by Hungust Finey, 24, of Second street, Glassport, according to Burgess Seaward Gross, of Glassport. Moritz is also in the McKeesport Hospital.

MERGERS HELD AID TO COAL INDUSTRY

Help to Develop Resources, Improve Selling Methods, Mine Engineers Informed

Mergers as a partial solution of the bituminous coal industry's ills by providing control of expenses and against overexpansion and poor selling methods, were discussed today by the coal division, American Institute of Mining and Metallurgical Engineers, in session at the William Penn Hotel.

Citing the merger as an aid in the use of latent resources, H. V. Coes, of New York, declared:

"The underlying motive today is not increased production capacity as a rule, but the necessity to decrease the spread between the raw material and the ultimate consumer. It is estimated that 37.5 cents of the consumer's dollar go for production and 62.5 for distribution of commodities. Essential factors for success of a merger are economies in distribution, administration, production and finance."

Other speakers at the morning session were C. H. J. Patterson, of Pittsburg, Kan.; H. F. Yancey, of Washington, and J. R. Campbell, chairman. A dinner will follow the afternoon session, which calls for addresses by Eugene McAuliffe, of Omaha; Frank Haas, of Philadelphia; R. R. Sayers, W. P. Yant and R. D. Leitch, of Pittsburgh; Kenneth Lambert, G. S. Rice and J. T. Ryan.

Four sightseeing trips are scheduled for the closing program tomorrow. These will carry groups to the Hazelwood plant of the Jones and Laughlin Steel Corporation; the Champion mine of the Pittsburgh Coal Company; the Davison Coke and Iron Company plant on Neville Island; the Colfax power station of the Duquesne Light Company, and the Springdale power station of the West Penn Power Company.

ST. CLAIR BANK TO BUILD

The board of directors of the St. Clair Savings and Trust Company, Brownsville road and Bausman street, Mt. Oliver, today announced that work will be started about January 1 on a new $100,000 home for the institution. The bank was organized at its present site in 1903.

The new building will have a frontage of 68 feet on Brownsville road and 115 feet on Bausman street, and will be constructed of granite and stone exterior, with floor and wainscoting of marble, and the counter work of a combination of bronze and marble. The bank is an independent institution, directors being business men of the Hill Top section.

EYNON EXPECTS TIRE CODE SOON

Certificates of mechanical fitness, stating that the tires are in good condition, will be required by the state for registration of automobiles and trucks in a few years, according to Benjamin G. Eynon, Commissioner of Motor Vehicles. His prediction features an article to appear in the October issue of the Pennsylvania Motorist, official publication of the Pittsburgh Motor Club.

Declaring tire blowouts figure prominently as causes of motor accidents, Eynon regrets the Motor Code does not already require certification of good rubber by the inspectors who will pass on the fitness of automobiles for the road between September 15 and October 31.

Eynon admits that in previous campaigns, many cars received "approved" stickers without being inspected or after perfunctory inspection by incompetent mechanics. This practice will not be tolerated, he promises, during the coming period.

Rum Seized, 2 Men Arrested in Raids

Francis Harmon, 40, of 3216 California avenue, was released on his own recognizance by prohibition agents yesterday who found 22 bottles of assorted liquors in his home, they said. The contraband was destroyed.

A 25-gallon still found, agents reported, in the home of Matt Evok, 42, of 40 Prospect street, Turtle Creek, resulted in his arrest. Several barrels of mash were destroyed.

MAN STABBED, SUSPECT HELD

A stab wound in his back, Steve Fenyush, 22, of 2612 Sarah street, today was in a serious condition in Mercy Hospital, while Oakland police were holding Carlo Cuda, 51, of 335 Beelen street, as his assailant, it was reported.

Fenyush, wheeling earth for a contractor in Beelen street, was stabbed, police said, during an argument which started near Cuda's home.

Cathie Is Offended by New Relative

CHAPTER XVII.

The woman was sitting up in bed, a great, walnut four-poster that had probably been moved up to the third story when newer styles crowded it out of rooms below.

Her beautiful dark red hair streamed over her shoulders and her angry eyes were fixed on Chester Farnsworth who was leaning against the foot of the bed, wiping his forehead with a blue bordered handkerchief.

"Oh, it's you!" Marguerite muttered sullenly, when she saw Cathie's frightened face in the doorway.

Chester Farnsworth turned and greeted her with an unwholesome smile. "The fair Catherine. First I, then you, next father and Enid, I suppose," he said. "The whole family seems in upheaval over the delicate Marguerite. And oh, how that retiring, timid creature hates to be the center of interest!"

Marguerite slumped down in bed, pulled the covers over her head, and lay there like a log.

Chester Talks
Starts to Tell Cathie About Maid

There was nothing to do but leave. Cathie went first, and Chester at her heels. As she neared the door to her own room on the second floor he stopped her.

"I suppose you know all about Marguerite. My father probably told you," he said, in what Cathie secretly thought of as his most "oily" manner.

"Yes, he told me something about her," Cathie admitted.

"The family scandal?"

"I wouldn't call it that."

"No? Then he didn't tell you. You want to hear it. It's our best family yarn."

He followed her into the room, and made himself comfortable on the silver brocade chaise-lounge. "This is good, really. Our dear little Marguerite is more than an old family servant. She's an heirloom, that's what she is. That's not bad—heirloom, ha! He laughed unpleasantly at his own wit.

"Your father told me that her mother used to be housekeeper here," Cathie said coldly.

"Yeh? Well, she was housekeeper all right." He watched Cathie to see how she was taking it, and his little brown eyes behind the thick glasses glittered, when he saw that he was making her uncomfortable.

"What else she was we don't know. Grandpa with his whiskers was an elder in the church, and maybe the buxum Maggie didn't appeal to him after all."

"Need we go into that?"

"What's the matter? Aren't you a married woman? What do you mean, blushing like a schoolgirl? Where was I? The scandal! Our Marguerite put in an appearance anyway, and the red-headed butler got fired. Maybe grandpa was jealous, and maybe he was just being righteous. Anyway out went Maggie and her che-ild, and ever since we've paid and paid. Mother started it—took pity on the girl after old Maggie passed on. But pshaw! what can you do for anyone like that?"

"What were you trying to do?" Cathie asked. It was a stupid question. It just slipped out because she was tired and ill at ease. It had no meaning and no malicious intent, but it had a sudden, very frightening effect on Chester. He sprang up and glared at her, his sallow face distorted with anger.

"You mind your own damn business!"

Cathie gasped. "Why, Chester! —I didn't mean——"

"Cut that. I know what you meant. And you mind your own business. Do you understand? You lay off of me, and I'll lay off of you! Go sticking your nose into my affairs and——"

"But Chester, I——"

"Don't Chester me. I'm on to you. I saw through you from the first. But I've no intention of making trouble if you don't."

"Please—I wasn't trying to make trouble. Oh, please listen. Listen—it doesn't matter about us. But we've got to be friends, for your father's sake. It would hurt him so. Please——" She held out her hand.

Nervous
Realizes That Chester's Story Is Fake

"Oh, well," he said ungraciously. Then he held out his hand, too, and smiled. "All right. And don't get this wrong. Marguerite is a blackmailer. I've been paying her for years, just to keep her off poor dad's neck. I was just telling her that I'd quit. Has she been talking to you?"

"No! Oh, no—of course not."

"Take my advice, and give her a wide berth. She's a terrible liar. Likely to tell you anything. She's already told me plenty about you."

"About me? But she doesn't know anything. There isn't anything to know—"

No? Well, that won't stop our

Demand Medical Tests for Cafe Employes

A demand for medical certification of all restaurant employes engaged in handling food and drink will be made under reorganization of the restaurant division of the Bureau of Food inspection, Pittsburgh Department of Health, Dr. C. B. Maits, director, announced. Certificates must be filled out by physicians employed by the restaurant proprietor, Maits added.

Under the new state law examination of all restaurant employes will be demanded every six months.

SETTLE FATAL AUTO CASE

When James Welsh, 26, of 4224 Geneva street, was called for trial in Criminal Court on an indictment charging him with involuntary manslaughter for the death of Lillian Martin, 11, of 3906 Penn avenue, who, it is said, was crushed April 17 near her home by Welsh's truck, Judge George V. Moore was informed by Assistant District Attorney Jacob Kalson that a large cash settlement had been made with the child's parents, and the case was nolle prossed by the judge on motion of the district attorney.

The settlement was the outgrowth of a civil suit brought by the parents of the child against Welsh soon after the accident, an insurance company paying the amount, which was not divulged, it was declared.

Natrona Man Faces Rum-Making Charge

Accused of manufacuring intoxicating liquor, Charles Donelawski, 66, of 41 Federal street, Natrona, is to be given a hearing tonight before Justice of the Peace J. Francis Heck, of Natrona. Chief Engelmann and Patrolmen Edward Hileman and Michael Gunning raided Donelawski's place last night and said they found a still in operation and seized a small quantity of alleged moonshine whisky and mash.

Brentwood Police Investigate Fire

Brentwood police today were investigating a fire which destroyed a vacant two-story frame dwelling in Bellanca avenue, Brentwood, last night. The entire house was enveloped in flames when volunteer firemen reached it. Boys playing in the building were thought by police to have set it afire.

Coyne Chats With Mayor; Just 'Social Visit'

State Senator James J. Coyne called late yesterday upon Mayor Charles H. Kline, and the two conferred for some time. The Senator explained he merely wanted to have a leisurely social visit with the Mayor.

Coyne called at the Mayor's office after the close of regular business hours and was promptly ushered into Kline's private suite by Assistant Secretary J. Edward Garlitz.

The Senator attended the Kline home-coming dinner in the William Penn Hotel Wednesday night and occupied a seat at the table reserved for members of Council. Coyne's friends had a number of tables in the immediate vicinity.

Cynic Doubts Sad Story, Causes Arrest of Trio

Three alleged confidence men were being held in Tarentum today for a hearing because William Fullmer, of Tarentum, doubted the sad story they told, and called police.

The men said they are Joseph Demato and Alfred Amato, Fifth avenue, and Sam Lina, Kincaid street. They were arrested by Patrolman Joseph Pierri.

Pierri said he was called to the scene by Fullmer just as Charles Sebella, 48, of West Natrona, was about to turn $475 over to the trio. Amato was arranging with Sebella to find a Tarentum contractor who he said would help Demato financially, following the death of a brother.

Sebella, to show he was sincere in making an effort to find the contractor, was going to give the men the money, police said.

SIDE WALKS of PITTSBURGH
by WILLIAM PFARR

A gentleman who signs himself Arthur Belmont, of Aliquippa, writes in to say that anybody who wants to get in touch with a professional paper cone balancer can do so through him. Mr. Belmont knows this balancer and promises that if a store will furnish a display window the balancer will balance a paper cone on his nose for perhaps 30 minutes, this being pretty good in paper cone balancing circles, and not so bad in nose circles, either. But that's not all, not by a pretty long shot. After our balancer has balanced for 30 minutes, Mr. Belmont says that he will then do a few tricks and end up by balancing a lawn mower on the same nose. Our hero's routine sounds very promising, although we do not think it much of a feat to balance a lawn mower on one's nose.

Sidewalks' favorite copyboy poet, Edward Dublin, should be remembered as the author of a poem, "The Night Copyboy," two of whose classic lines were, "The night copyboy stands by, sending up copy while he's eating his pie." Here verbatim is his latest valued contribution to Sidewalks:

"After supper when everyone was in the parlor talking, etc., my little nephew thought he would like to clean his teeth. (He's only six years old). Everything was quiet when my nephew (his name is Russell) came in and said, 'Mother, do you take a drink of water while you're cleaning your teeth?' Of course his mother said that you didn't. Then he said 'Mother do you spit the toothpaste out?' His mother answered no to this also. Then while walking away, he said, 'Then I must have the wrong stuff,' and glancing down you could see a big tube of shaving cream in his hand that he was using for toothpaste.

ED DUBLIN,
Copyboy."

We felt uneasy when we wrote, the other day, that there was actually a vacant lot in the city—at Fifth and Craig—which was not occupied by a Tom Thumb golf course. And our uneasiness was justified, for now a reader writes in that the Zoning Board had refused permission to construct a course there. The reader's stationery is ultra marine blue. We scented romance immediately.

Heber Dithrich, just appointed to the bench, is the third Allegheny County jurist who was once a newspaperman. The other two are Judge Patterson and the retired Judge Carnahan. Judge Dithrich worked on the old Gazette in 1909 and 1910 and his city editor was Frank Jenks.

Andrew Thompson is 85 years old but refuses to act his age. The other day he walked into the offices of the Pittsburgh Motor Club and took out insurance on his new auto. Mr. Thompson can remember when people used to complain about those new-fangled horseless carriages scaring the horses . . . The Thomson Run road in Shaler Township was named for Mr. Thompson's family.

Will Rogers Says:

CAMP RICHARDSON, Cal. Sept. 12.

To the Editor of the Sun-Telegraph:

A fine old fellow about 73 years old, Luke Gosgrove, who is working here with us, after reading Gov. Roosevelt's statement on prohibition, said to me: "Will, Gov. Roosevelt says he wants to bring back liquor, but not the old-time saloons. Why, that was the only thing about the whole business that was worth having. Roosevelt has got it just backwards. We want to bring back the old-time saloon with five-cent beer, and outlaw the liquor."

Yours,
WILL ROGERS.

$250,000 ISSUE UP AT POLLS IN NOVEMBER

20-Room Structure Planned To Accomodate 600 and Save Paying City Tuition

A $250,000 bond issue for the erection of a junior-senior high school will be voted on by residents of Brentwood Borough at the November election, the Rev. S. C. Michelfelder, president of the borough school board, announced.

The board, according to the Rev. Mr. Michelfelder, has been planning for the issue for about two years. If the issue is carried a building will be erected to accommodate 600 students, and will contain 20 rooms.

Under the present system students of the borough attend city high schools at a cost of about $150 a pupil, which is $25 more than the cost last year. It is estimated that by 1932, 500 Brentwood students would be eligible to attend Pittsburgh schools, the cost of which would be $45,000.

"WELL, WELL," SAYS VISITING JOE!

TRIP TO PARIS INCLUDES ALL POINTS

Five Others to Be Given Vacation in the Bermudas; Gloria Swanson Hostess

Girls! This trip to Paris is going to be THE event of a lifetime.

Visits to the Palace of Fontainebleau, the Palace of Versailles and the World War battlefields have been arranged for the girl awarded the Sun-Telegraph Gloria Swanson tour, by M. Guy Croswell Smith, chief executive of Les Artistes Associes, the company that represents Miss Swanson and United Artists in Paris.

WELL CHAPERONED

From New York to Paris and back the young ladies who go to France as the guests of Miss Swanson will be chaperoned by an elderly American mother who speaks French and knows how to settle all the problems of a traveler. In Paris, both Mme. Smith and Mrs. Benson, wives of executives of Les Artistes Associes, Miss Swanson's film company, will join in organizing pleasure trips for the girls.

On the way home, there will be a stopover in New York, after the stopover en route to Paris while going, and after the glamour of Paris and a round trip on the fast trans-Atlantic liner, there will be the glamour of New York City, something that will never be forgotten by the fortunate winner.

Although the trip to Paris will be the most prized of the awards, the Sun-Telegraph has amplified Miss Swanson's generosity by adding five additional trips to sunny Bermuda—one of the most popular tours outside of our own United States.

For the purpose of a fair distribution in the award of these free de luxe trips, the classes of workers to whom the awards will eventually be made have been divided into five groups. There is to be one girl more fortunate than all the others in these five groups. She will get the Gloria Swanson trip to Paris. The trips to Bermuda, however, will be awarded so that one trip, all expenses paid, will be awarded to each group. This means that when the winning candidate for the Paris trip is announced, another girl in the same group will also be given a trip to Bermuda.

GROUPS CLASSIFIED

The groups have been arranged as follows:

Group 1—Telephone operators in the employ of the telephone company or operators in charge of private switchboards at hotels, clubs, mercantile houses and industrial plants. This group is limited in its entirety to telephone operators.

Group 2—Office workers, bookkeepers and clerical help; stenographers; private secretaries.

Group 3—Cashiers, restaurant employes, grocery store, chain store, etc., employes and workers in industrial plants other than the classification in the preceding groups.

Group 4—Department store and women's specialty shop employes.

Group 5—Home girls, students and school teachers.

The awards are open to every unmarried girl (excepting professional beauties, such as stage girls or artists' models, and excepting employes of the Sun-Telegraph and their families), who is a citizen of the United States and who is or will be at least 21 years of age at the time the awards are to be made. LUCKY GIRL

Marguerite. She's got an imagination—that one!"

He laughed boisterously, turned on his heel and left.

"He's the liar," Cathie thought, uncomfortably. "He's lied to me . . . and he lies to his father . . . oh, I know he does . . . he could say anything about me . . . he will, too!"

She began to walk up and down the room, wringing her hands. The sight of her drawn, frightened face in the mirror shocked her. "I mustn't give way to this. It's foolish. I'm just imagining things . . . no, I'm not . . . but I can trust Mr. Farnsworth. He loves his son, but he loves me, too . . . oh, if I could only tell somebody . . . If I could just talk to Ma . . ."

But she knew she couldn't talk to her mother. She couldn't talk to anyone. There was no one to go to with her troubles. She must keep them all locked in her heart, and go on living, trying to look happy in Alfred Farnsworth's 12-room house.

In the morning she was still too shaken and miserable to face them. She slipped away, with an excuse of necessary shopping, and when she came back at tea-time her husband was waiting for her in the drawing room, a whisky and soda by his side.

"Chester is gone," he said without preliminary.

"Gone!"—Then he'd told his father about yesterday's unpleasantness. He WAS still angry.

Mr. Farnsworth looked apologetic. "Yes, it was hasty. They were both very sorry not to see you, but their apartment was ready and they went right over. Anxious to get settled. They left messages for for you. Enid was particularly sorry—"

He thought she was hurt because they had not waited to bid her a formal goodbye. He went on explaining, and she came and knelt on the floor beside his chair, her head on his knees.

They were gone! She clung to him, almost dizzy with relief.

"It's nice to be alone, just you and I again, Catherine."

"Oh, yes—yes," she breathed. "You are more to me than anything now. More to me even than my son. More than I had thought anyone could ever be." His voice shook and there came that look in his eyes . . . devotional. . . . Old Shep used to look like that, sitting beside her, his shaggy head on her lap, his nice eyes watching with patient humility.

Cathie swallowed the lump in her throat. "You—you shouldn't care so much for me. I'm—I'm always doing things wrong. I'm just nobody!" she burst out childishly, and then, afraid of her own withdrawing, she slipped her arms tighter about his neck, and kissed him warmly.

The twilight deepened. They sat together, silent, in the firelit room.

After a long while she realized that he was speaking again.

"By the way, Catherine, Moore is coming here for a few days. It will be convenient. We can work together in the evenings."

"Here? You—you asked him . . . here?"

"But Catherine dear, I didn't think you would mind!"

Cathie hid her twitching face in his sleeve. He stroked her tumbled honey-colored curls. "Is it that you don't like him, my dear? Shall I—"

In a small voice she answered. "No, it isn't that. It was sort of a relief to be alone, that's all. But we can be alone later. There will be plenty of time for that after . . . after he's gone."

But she couldn't control her voice any longer. It broke, and she lay there weeping, weeping as if her heart would break, burrowing her twisted, streaming face deeper into the crook of her husband's arm.

LAUGHING BOY LANDS HERE

By KAYE GODARD

Hollywood's laughing boy, Joe E. Brown, himself, landed in Pittsburgh yesterday, donned a brown suit and received reporters in his dressing room at the Stanley Theater.

"What, funny so early in the morning?" laughed Joe, "Don't be silly."

Mr. Brown told about his trip since leaving Hollywood.

He and Mrs. Brown will go to Philadelphia next week and from there to New York, to sail for Europe. The European trip is expected to be a real vacation.

"Mrs. Brown and I have saved $80 now," he remarked, "so we think we'll travel through Europe."

Mr. Brown is greatly interested in sports, having at one time been a professional baseball player.

2 HELD ON CAR THEFT CHARGE

Stephen Kiss, 19, and Peter Kirwald, 22, both of High street, arrested at the Woods Run avenue entrance to Riverview Park, while police said, they were stripping a stolen automobile, were held for court trial today.

They were held in connection with the theft of a machine owned by Howard Christy, of 3100 Wadlow street. They took it to the park and were stripping it when they were discovered, the officers said.

LOSS OF STREET BLOW TO ISOLATED SECTION

CHICKEN HILL VAINLY FIGHTS CLOSING

Grading Robs West End Community of One of Its Two Connections to City

Complaints that closing of Castor street, one of its two connections, has cut Chicken Hill, West End, from convenient communication with the city, are bringing to the attention of city authorities one of the most isolated and undeveloped districts of Pittsburgh.

Chicken Hill is a high, lonely knob of land jutting high in the air above Independence street, Wabash avenue, and the Banksville road. It has no paved streets, no sewers, no sidewalks, no policeman is on the beat, residents say. It is served only by Junius street, leading up from unpaved Independence street.

It is said that 75 families live on its summit. Some 200 school children clamber down to the West End schools every day.

STREET CLOSED

Castor street, until early July, was the easiest approach. It led up over the tracks of the Pittsburgh and West Virginia railroad, on a bridge built and maintained by the railroad. Plans were made to widen, grade and pave Independence street. The grading was to cut it below the level of Castor street, giving that road no outlet. So Castor street was closed, the bridge torn down.

Some time after Independence street is improved, Junius street will be widened and paved. Until then, according to U. N. Arthur, City Planning Commission engineer, residents must use roundabout Junius street.

CHILDREN CROSS TRACKS

Shortly before the bridge was torn down, new steps leading from Wabash avenue side of the hill to the railroad cut were built. Children now climb down the hill to the railroad, cross the tracks and descend the steps, rather than add over a half-mile to the mile or more they must now walk to the nearest school. In winter, residents say, that route will be impassable.

Led by a former policeman, Charles Muck, owner of the hill's only store, at 340 Junius street, residents are at last protesting removal of the bridge, lack of police protection and sewers.

POLICE HARD TO GET

Muck told Councilman W. Y. English of conditions on the hilltop.

"Some of the residents on the hill," he said, "are openly thieving and molesting others of us. I keep three police dogs as protection. Only murder will bring the police up here. One night I caught a robber in my store. I called the police four times. After keeping the robber covered with a gun for over three hours, I told him to get out and went back to bed. A little later the police came.

"We pay taxes. Why don't we get some consideration and improvements from the city?"

English, impressed by conditions on Chicken Hill, has promised to look into the matter. He will move for pavements, police protection, a bridge over the tracks, if possible.

According to H. B. Cooper, old-time resident of the hill, fire trucks cannot get up there in the winter. Two years ago a row of houses burned down, he says, while firemen tried to scale the hill.

The dead must be carried down in wheelbarrows, in winter, he says, because the roads are impassable. The sick can't be reached by doctors.

The Camera Question Box

Today's question—If you were given another two weeks' vacation right now with the use of a new automobile and a draft for hotel expenses, where would you go?

RAY S. GODARD, construction engineer, Mt. Lebanon:—I'd go to Canada because of the good fishing and golfing if I had all that, but I'm getting too old to believe in Santa Claus.

Ray S. Godard

MISS STELLA HODIL, secretary, Wildwood:—Well, if someone got generous and paid my hotel expenses I think I'd go to Cuba. I've heard that the trip is nice, and, anyway, I've never been there.

Miss Hodil

EARL McALEER, elevator operator, North Side:—All I'd want would be the car, and I'd drive to California. I've never been farther west than Chicago and the scenery out that way is supposed to be beautiful.

Earl McAleer

CHARLES McPHERSON, elevator operator, Wilkinsburg:—I think the trip to Atlantic City would be a nice one, and I'd like being there at this time of the year much more than in the summer.

Chas. McPherson

MISS LORRAINE HARDING, secretary, Dormont:—I'd like to go to Philadelphia to see the people I know there and then to Atlantic City for a few days and then to New York because I've never been there and have always wanted to see it.

Miss Harding

PAUL McCLURE, cab driver, North Side:—I've always wanted to go through Canada, especially Quebec and Ontario, to visit all the historic places and because of the scenery.

McKelvy Funeral.

Funeral services for William E. McKelvy, president of the McKelvy-Hine Company, who died Tuesday in Beddeford Pool, Me., were to be held at the home, 5302 Westminster place, at 4 p. m. today. He was born in Pittsburgh in 1872, and was educated at Shady Side Academy and the Rensselaer Polytechnic Institute, Troy N. Y., graduating from the latter institution in the class of 1896. For a time he was assistant engineer of the Bessemer and Lake Erie Railroad, and in 1900 organized the McKelvy-Hine Company. He was a member of the Pittsburgh Golf Club, University Club, Duquesne Club, Fox Chapel Country Club and the Rolling Rock Country Club; a member of the board of trustees of the Shady Side Academy, and chairman of the management committee and a trustee of the East Liberty Presbyterian Church. Besides his widow he leaves a son, William R. McKelvy; two daughter, Chirstian L. and Martha M. McKelvy; two brothers, Charles H., of Pittsburgh, and King McKelvey, of Beverley Hills, Cal., and two sisters, Mrs. Jessie T. Lazear, of Augusta, Ga., and Miss Jean McKelvy, of Pittsburgh.

Krieger Funeral.

Funeral services for Ernest Krieger, 78, formerly of Malvern, O., who died in McKeesport Hospital yesterday, will be held at the home of his daughter, Mrs. Catherine Rinehardt, of First avenue, West Elizabeth, at 8 p. m. today. The body will be taken to Malvern, where services will be held Sunday. Interment will be in Malvern.

J. L. Dawson Speer.

J. L. Dawson Speer, Sr., retired stock and bond broker, residing at the Duquesne Club, died today at the Mercy Hospital.

Mr. Speer retired from the bond and brokerage business about 10 years ago. He was born in Pittsburgh. He attended the First Presbyterian Church.

He leaves three sons, Charles E. Speer III, in the United States Army; J. L. Dawson Speer, Jr., and Talbot Speer, both of Baltimore, Md.; a brother, Charles E. Speer, Jr., of Ajo, Ariz., and two sisters, Mrs. F. H. Denny, of Blue Ridge Summit, Pa., and Mrs. Charles A. Painter, of Sewickley.

JUSTICE FIGHTS FINE CHARGES

Charging that audit of his books and announcement of a supposed shortage by Mt. Lebanon Township auditors was a malicious effort to injure his political standing, Justice of the Peace Ira H. Edmundson yesterday secured an order from Court of Quarter Sessions demanding that the auditors show cause why the statements in their report to the court should not be stricken out.

Edmundson contends that the auditors have no power to audit his books, as he does not hold office from the township.

The auditors, Agnes H. Joyce, George R. Fisher and F. Carl Long, set forth in their report of the general fund of the township that from 1924 to 1929 Edmundson collected $820 in fines, remitting only $312, leaving a balance of $508 unaccounted for.

According to the petition, the auditors refused, on demand, to make a statement of the fines said to be due the township, and failed to credit the township with the amount owing as an asset.

By wide publicity given the report, Edmundson claims, the audit has injured his personal and political reputation.

The auditors have until September 26 to set forth their reasons, if any, for inclusion of the alleged debt in their audit.

BEAVER COUNTY THRONGS FAIR

By CHARLES A. EARLEY,
Staff Correspondent.

NEW BRIGHTON, Pa., Sept. 12.—Children's day was observed here today at the annual Beaver County Fair, being held in Junction Park with thousands of racing enthusiasts, livestock owners and agriculturists from all over Western Pennsylvania in attendance. The exhibition will close tomorrow.

Aside from special features for all from seven to 70, a historical pageant is scheduled for tonight. The early life of the Economites, old settlers of the Beaver Valley, will be depicted in a prologue and a number of episodes. More than 600 persons will take part.

Judging in the cattle, horse, swine, sheep and poultry classes has been completed and the prizes are being distributed. Pacing and trotting races, for lucrative prizes, are part of the daily program.

Horsemen from Troop D, Pennsylvania State Police, are giving daily exhibitions of fancy riding.

Operated under auspices of the Beaver County Fair Association, the fair is the nineteenth to be arranged. Officials of the association are: J. T. Anderson, president; Brandon Wright, secretary; Ross Bradshaw, secretary of speed; Robert F. Gavrin, treasurer, and Chester Stands, starting judge.

PATRICIA PITT'S SPRIGHTLY COMMENT ON PITTSBURGH'S SOCIETY HAPPENINGS

Miss Jarvis To Wed on Oct. 18

Weddings and plans for weddings and entertainments for brides-to-be are adding fascination to the days of early autumn. Announcements and the bridal interest are announcements dates of more fall dates selected by brides-to-be for their wedding day.

Among the autumnal brides will be Margaret Ralston Jarvis, daughter of the William Rice Jarvises, of South Graham street, who has selected Saturday, October 18, as the day for her marriage to Frederick Redfield Weed of Boston, Mass.

Weds In East

Another wedding in this intriguing fall season took place yesterday in the East, a wedding of interest to Pittsburgh society folks.

The bride was Jane Boas Wood, daughter of the William Boas Woods of Baltimore and granddaughter of the late Joseph Wood of Pittsburgh, and the bridegroom was William Arthur Force III of New York, son of the late Junior William Arthur Forces.

The ceremony took place at 4 o'clock yesterday afternoon in the Church of the Transfiguration, New York, with only the relatives attending the wedding. There were no attendants. A reception in the Ritz-Carlton followed.

The Forces will sail today on the Statendam for France and England, and upon their return will be at home in Fifth avenue, New York. Jane attended Dana Hall, and Mr. Force is a Harvard man, class of '27.

Yule Party

Some time ago the date of the annual Christmas sale of the Women's Industrial Exchange was decided upon, November 10. Now that folks are beginning to return home, further plans have been made for the event. The sale will be held in the Urban room of the William Penn Hotel. And a feature will be a Christmas party for children in the ballroom adjoining. In charge of the party will be the Junior League.

* * *

And I know of plans for the debut of one of our buds. The Richard Hollyday Semples of Louisville, Ky., and Chestnut road, Sewickley, have decided to present their daughter, Hester Hatton Browne, to the social world at a dance Christmas night in the exclusive old Pittsburgh Club.

A few days ago I told you that Nancy Hume James, daughter of the Frederick C. Bairds, of Fifth avenue, had selected tomorrow as the date for her marriage to Earle Phillips Elmore, of Oneonta, N. Y. The wedding will take place at 4 o'clock in the afternoon in the Little Church Around the Corner, New York, with the Rev. Dr. Randolph Ray officiating. A reception in the Vanderbilt Hotel for the two families will follow. Mr. Elmore and his bride will be at home in Oneonta after a trip through the South. This afternoon Sherman Fairchild of New York, who'll be best man, will entertain the bridal party on a yacht cruise, and this evening at a dinner and dance. Frances Fitzgerald and Betty Thaxter are among the guests.

October Wedding

And now I have still another autumn wedding to chat about. Margaret Hagan, daughter of Mrs. William Charles Hagan of Aylesboro avenue, has chosen Wednesday evening, October 1, as the time for her marriage to Theodore Gregg Brown, son of Mrs. Elmer Collins Brown, of Chicago. The ceremony will take place in the Hagan home.

Dorothy Keller will be maid of honor and Mrs. Frances Charters McClure, Mrs. Roland Minor Kenah and Mrs. Allan C. Davis, of Baltimore, will be bridesmaids.

Samuel T. Brown will be his brother's best man, and John P. McGhee and Wallace D. Guthrie, of Chicago, will be ushers.

Have you heard that the Richard Beatty Mellons have purchased "Casa Loma," adjoining their Watch Hill estate, for their daughter, Mrs. Alan Magee Scaife? The home was formerly the summer place of W. W. Tapley, of Springfield, Mass.

Health Club Year Books Ready

The very good-looking year books of the Health Colony Club are ready for distribution. Bits of appropriate verse, announcement of prominent speakers and listing of unusual events give promise of one of the most interesting years the club has had and are evidence of the care and time which have gone into the making of the green-and-silver-bound booklets.

Among the visitors scheduled to appear are Dr. E. G. Kuhlman, of the Children's Hospital, who will speak on "The Problem of Tuberculosis in Infant and Child Welfare." Margaret McCown Hood, who will read Milne's "The Ivory Door" at a reception in November, Miss Suzanne Hafer, of Torrance House, Dr. Harry G. Noah, of the Passavant Hospital, and Florence Fisher Parry, columnist. The season begins October 7 with a program including Dr. Kuhlman's talk and music and drama by children of members. The president's reception, dated for November 4, contrary to the usual custom, will be under the chairmanship of the chief executive, Mrs. E. D. Harshbarger, and will be in honor of the presidents of other clubs. The annual benefit to finance Christmas cheer for the club's beneficiaries will be held December 2. A calendar party is a unique affair listed for the new year, the annual luncheon and club's sixteenth birthday party following it in succession. There will be the usual sale of articles made by the blind, and to close the year a garden party at the home of Dr. and Mrs. U. F. Rohm in Carnegie.

Another new feature this season will be the visits to Leech Farm, the State Sanitarium at Cresson and Torrance House.

Club Tips

A significant line under many of the days' calendars in the new year books of the Aspinwall Woman's Club reads "Tip-of-the-month from each department," explains itself and shows a spirit of progress.

The members will honor their president, Mrs. I. H. Milliken, with a reception on Thursday afternoon. Mrs. John M. Phillips, chairman of the home department, State Federation, will speak and Mrs. Paul C. Kress and Mrs. W. W. Colledge will furnish the music.

Among the more important events listed for the year are a guest night in November, which will be addressed by the Rev. Dr. Gordon A. MacLennan; a play by the drama department; a dinner for club members and their families to celebrate the fourth anniversary of the clubhouse; a Christmas party for children of members; a community Christmas celebration; a talk by Florence Fisher Parry; a discussion of "Woman's Rights Under the Law," by Attorney Ella Graubart; a tree planting; a discussion of whether women should engage in gainful occupation after marriage; the annual sunshine luncheon and a garden party, the latter closing the year on June 25.

Again Mrs. Samuel E. Diescher, a past president, will open her home for the president's reception of the Forum Club, October 15 being the date set for the affair. The club, however, will have the first of its semi-monthly card parties as its initial event of the season. The annual visit to the International Art Exhibit, a Christmas benefit card party, the usual Christmas celebration, an afternoon of book reviews, a travel talk by Mrs. Edmond Englert, the usual luncheon for the blind in March at the Workshop, a talk on international relations, the annual business meeting, the June outing and rose day are other events scheduled for the year.

The Woman's Club of Crafton will sponsor two important events next week, a trip through a Newell, W. Va., pottery on Tuesday and the annual flower show on Friday.

ORIGINALITY ADVANCES SLEEVES TO NEW SARTORIAL DISTINCTION

Paris Bureau, Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph.

PARIS, SEPT. 12.—Lots of sleeves are feeling very puffed-up these days, and rightly so, for sleeves are receiving all sorts of attention from whom is the great sleeve designers, each one of thing of originality and note to the great sleeve movement. Tight cuffs, over-sleeves, little sleeves, cape sleeves and now the leg-of-mutton and the all-puffed-up sleeve that is being shown on some of the newest frocks.

Coat sleeves are also being accorded all kinds of attentions, as you have no doubt noticed from a survey of the sketches depicting advance autumn coat models that have appeared on these pages from time to time. By their sleeves shall you know them, is certainly true of this season's dresses and coats.

THE QUAINTLY PUFFED sleeves that are a feature of the Lucile Paray frock sketched here, are distinctly reminiscent of the leg-of-mutton sleeve that was the latest thing way back in the lively nineties. They really do not look at all out of place and add an attractively demure note to the frock which is of fine brown woolen with an infinitesimal white diagonal line. By using the fabric in different directions for the piecings of the skirt and bodice, an interesting effect is achieved. Reddish-brown velvet makes the flat, round collar and the bow. The belt is of brown leather. This frock has attracted much interest and attention from visitors to the new Lucile Paray collection.

WANT ODD JOBS FOR IDLE HERE

Appeals to home owners and smaller business places for jobs were made today in behalf of unemployed married men.

The State Employment Bureau, working with Pittsburgh social service agencies, seeks to find one-day and two-day jobs for resident workmen, who have families, until permanent positions can be obtained. J. F. Mitchell, superintendent of the Pittsburgh bureau, declared:

"There are many odd jobs about homes and smaller business places that should be taken care of now. Such work as cleaning furnaces, cellars and yards and repair jobs of a minor nature, which would require a man for a day or two, or even cleaning work for men or women, would help the situation.

"This office, at 622 Grant street, has volunteered to act as a clearing house for such needs. If those who can give such employment will communicate with us by telephoning Atlantic 7950 or by mail, and mention the kind of work they can provide, we will notify the social agencies so needy unemployed can find at least a few days' work. There are plenty of such jobs, if people will co-operate.

Writer Displeases Family of Beauty

SAN REMO, Italy, Sept. 12.—(AP.)—Dr. Bruno Zuculin, newspaper writer, will be careful in describing feminine beauty hereafter. Employed by the young woman's family to praise "Miss Italy," winner of a beauty contest, he wrote:

"Her beautiful blonde hair is becoming more blonde every day."

The beauty's papa refused to pay, being angry over the suggestion that his daughter used dyes, and the doctor is suing.

80 Accused in Fake 'Citizenship Ring'

BOSTON, Sept. 12.—(INS.)—A concerted drive by federal agents, to stamp out an alleged fake citizenship ring, today had brought 12 persons under arraignment and 20 under secret indictments, while the authorities were on the trail of 50 more.

According to John W. Schenk, assistant United States attorney, nearly 8,000 aliens have paid between $40,000 and $50,000 this year to the ring. Fees for tutors and witnesses ranged between $25 and $100, according to Schenk.

The ring operated, he declared, by impressing on illiterate aliens the danger of being deported if they did not take out citizenship papers which, the swindlers said, would be impossible to get without "help."

Youths Rob Autoist, Escape in His Car

Police today were looking for two youths who held up and robbed David Berkovitz, of 816 Vermont avenue, Glassport, on the Buttermilk Hollow road, near Bettis Field, late last night. The bandits escaped in Berkovitz's car, leaving the one they had driven in exchange, according to Mifflin Township police.

They also took $35, Berkovitz declared.

Yale Instructor Gets Post at Pitt

Dr. George K. McCabe, formerly a member of the faculty of Yale University, has been elected a member of the economics department at the University of Pittsburgh. He takes up his residence here this fall, and will teach finance in the downtown division of the university.

Burs Advertise Cafes in Berlin

BERLIN, Sept. 12. — (AP.) — They're boosting Berlin bars with burs. Many a tourist has wondered at times why folks stared so. It is the habit of some cafes to fling burs at a passerby when he isn't looking. The prickly seed vessel is fashioned in the shape of a doll with an advertisement of the cafe on it.

'Robin Hood'

1930's Way of Wearing a Feather in Your Hat

$3.50

This carefree affair has a black-and-white quill placed at a very strategic point. It coaxes the eye from that smart up-and-off cushion brim to call attention to the flattering new nape-of-the-neck line. Black or brown.

Second Floor

The Fall Mode in Two Words

Suede Shoes

$7.50

To quote a noted style authority "Black (or brown) suede isn't a pair of shoes—it's a wardrobe!"

Here you may have your fall shoe wardrobe with informal cuban or more formal high heels at only $7.50. Made on the new longer last with reptile or kid trimming.

Paris Copy Bags

They are simple and capacious (in spite of their flat thin-ness).

And you will know at once that they are typically Parisian—by their metal tabs and geometric motifs and sparkling jewel trimmings.

Envelopes and concealed frame styles of sturdy calfskin and imitation pin seal, in black or brown. This quality is almost unheard-of at $2.95.

Tomorrow a Super-Special—

Smart Fall Dresses

$10

A sale that starts out with smart fashions at a price — and will surely end as a thing women talk about! A sale with these fashion points to recommend it: boleros, peplum jacket dresses, tunics, cowl necklines, contrasting trimmings. And these value-points — well made in every detail—generously using these smart materials:

Travel Crepe Embroidered Jersey
Georgette Crepe Satin Canton Crepe

In every conceivable smart color for business, street and college wear. Misses' sizes, 14 to 20; women's sizes, 36 to 44; juniors', 13 to 17.

Second Floor

"Town and Campus" Coats

Imagine yourself in one of these young, swanky, inexpensive coats as sketched above! They're so very practical every college or business girl will have one.

Deep, furry alpacas and boucles to wear now — and later, shed anything that looks like snow. Two styles: a notch collar, and patch pockets, or johnny collar and slit pockets. Alpacas come in Brown and Camel. Boucles in Brown, Navy, Oxford.

There's a Tweed Look to These

3-pc. Knit Suits, $16.75

We are treating knit things very much like tweeds this year. We weave them like old-fashioned homespuns. We color them like heathers (in monotone or "snowflake" effects.) We tailor them like suitings. But no matter what ingenious things we do to them—you must admit they're smart!

As sketched above, three-piece styles with jersey blouses to tuck in or out. With double-breasted, belted or cardigan jackets — in black and white, black-and-white or brown mixtures, blues, wine, green or ruby tones. Sizes 14 to 40.

Sports Section, Second Floor

Chinchilla Coats

$5.95

By 9:30 one hot, late-August morning we sold scores of them. It shows that double-breasted, notch collar, slash pocket, good weathering coats like these are very unusual at the price. Another shipment is in tomorrow.

In navy only, sizes 7 to 14—lined with suede and serge.

Second Floor

Blue Label Special Suits

$12.75

The exclusive line of B & B all-wool suits with extra knickers. Well tailored. New fall patterns. Knickers full lined. Size 7 to 18. Feature priced at $12.75.

PRUDENCE PENNY'S RECIPES

SPANISH RICE—[illegible] —Half [illegible] water [illegible] teaspoon salt, 2 [illegible] cooked [illegible] meat, 2 [illegible] peppers [illegible] teaspoon butter, [illegible] onion [illegible] 1 pint tomatoes, [illegible] ⅛ teaspoon pepper, [illegible] teaspoons salt, [illegible] grated cheese, [illegible] buttered [illegible].

Boil [illegible] boiling salted water. Scald the peppers and fry in the butter with the onion. Add tomatoes, the [illegible] teaspoons salt and pepper and heat to the boiling point. Place in layers in a buttered baking dish, [illegible] layers with the meat and [illegible] rice. Cover with grated cheese and top with crumbs. Bake in a moderate oven, 375 degrees, [illegible] crumbs are brown and cheese is melted.

SCALLOPED MEAT AND SPINACH—Make a white sauce of 3 tablespoons melted butter, 2 tablespoons flour, 1 teaspoon salt and ¾ cupful milk. Stir until the boiling point is reached. Line a buttered casserole with a layer of cooked spinach, a layer of cooked chicken [illegible] medium-sized pieces. Cover with the white sauce. Repeat and cover with buttered crumbs. Bake until heated through and crumbs are brown.

BAKED SWEETBREADS—Soak the sweetbreads in cold water for about 30 minutes, then carefully remove membrane. Drain. Cook slowly for 20 minutes in boiling salted water to which you have added 1 tablespoon lemon juice or vinegar. Drain again and drop into cold water immediately to keep the sweetbreads firm. Then remove any separating membranes. Place the parboiled sweetbreads in a buttered baking dish. Season with salt and pepper and sprinkle with flour. Pour melted butter or fat over the sweetbreads and bake about 25 minutes, until brown. Baste several times during baking.

OATMEAL MUFFINS—Put 2 cups rolled oats through a food chopper. Add one teaspoon salt, 2 tablespoons sugar, 1 cup sifted flour and 2 teaspoons baking powder. Beat 1 egg slightly and add 1 1-3 cups milk and pour gradually on to the dry mixture. Beat until very smooth, adding more milk if necessary. Stir in the fat last, 2 tablespoons of melted butter or other shortening. Pour into well greased muffin pans, let stand 5 minutes then bake in hot oven, 400 degrees, for 15 to 20 minutes.

FROZEN CHEESE SALAD—Mix together the following ingredients: 1 cup salad dressing, 1 cup whipped cream, 1 package cream cheese, 1 cup shredded pineapple, ¼ cup powdered sugar, 1 small bottle maraschino cherries. Mix all ingredients and chill in the mechanical refrigerator for 3 hours.

CHICKEN CREAM—Two cups finely minced cooked chicken, ½ cup finely minced ham, 1 [illegible] cups chicken stock, 2 eggs, 1 tablespoon granulated gelatine, 2 tablespoons cold water, 2 teaspoons lemon juice, 1-3 teaspoon grated lemon rind, ¼ teaspoon paprika, 2-3 teaspoon celery salt, ½ cup cream whipped, lettuce, mayonnaise or cooked salad dressing.

Be sure that the chicken and ham are very finely minced. If possible, pass them through the food chopper. Scald the chicken stock, pour it over the egg yolks slightly beaten and cook over hot water for 3 minutes. Then add the gelatine softened in the cold water, the lemon juice, rind, paprika, salt and minced meat. Then stir in the stiffly beaten cream, also the whites of eggs beaten until stiff.

Turn into a mold previously dipped into cold water, chill, [illegible]

He Knows What He Likes and governs His desires by TASTE alone. How unlike many adults, who disregard flavor and quality in bread . . . and buy only what is cheapest.

The Retail Master Baker in your community bakes his bread UP to a standard, not DOWN to a price, and uses unsparingly all ingredients necessary to produce a fine-flavored loaf of bread. He has learned through years of continued success that QUALITY and TASTE are remembered long after PRICE is forgotten.

From childhood to old age, there is no substitute for bread as wholesome food. In fact, we are entering the Age of Common Sense after chasing the illusion of "health foods." The sun has set on the day of the food faddist with his trick diets. Bread, in its many varieties, always was, and always will be, the most nourishing and most economical food for young and old. The baker who makes GOOD bread has come into his own, and may well be proud . . . he feeds the world.

Leafy Vegetables Rich in Needed Vitamins

Foods Such as Cabbage, Cauliflower, Broccoli and Brussels Sprouts are Very Beneficial. Cooked by Steaming They Retain Their Fine Elements.

By ROYAL S. COPELAND, M. D.,
Former Health Commissioner of New York City, United States Senator from New York.

All the leafy vegetables add greatly to the value of the diet. In them we find the essential vitamins, mineral salts and carbohydrates needed for good health.

The ancients, even though they knew nothing of the chemistry involved, knew a good deal about the right foods to eat. Cato the Roman recommended cabbage for nearly every disease.

In both vegetable and animal tissues the most actively functioning part contains the most vitamins. The greatest functioning activity of leafy vegetables is in the leaf.

Cabbage and cauliflower, broccoli and Brussels sprouts, of which all belong to the cabbage family, possess in great measure these vital food elements. They are the elements necessary to our well-being.

RICH IN IRON

The thin green leaves of cabbage and lettuce are richer in vitamin A and other elements than the whiter inside leaves. It seems strange that so many cooks throw away the green outside leaves that are so valuable as food.

Cabbage is rich in iron. It possesses lime compounds needed by the blood for coagulation and which help in the digestion of fats. These lime compounds give to cabbage its bone-building properties. The acid of the stomach is derived from the sodium chloride, or common salt, of the foods we eat. The cabbage keeps in this matter.

Of course, we cannot get all the minerals and vitamins necessary for health in vegetables alone. Common sense says we should eat other foods with them.

VITAMINS LOST IN BOILING

Only cabbage that is crisp and bright-colored should be eaten. Eaten raw or steamed, it contains more of the nutrients than cabbage that is boiled. Much of the minerals and vitamins are lost by boiling, since most people throw away the water in which this vegetable is cooked.

Cauliflower, while really a flower, is classed as a vegetable. I believe someone has called it "cabbage with a college education." This saying is well founded because, by careful seed selection, it has been built up from the homely cabbage.

You would guess from its name that broccoli was native in Italy. It is a vegetable that deserves more attention in America than it receives, although it is becoming better known. We are seeing it more commonly on the restaurant menus. It is similar to cauliflower, but more highly colored. Its flavor is delicate and agreeable.

ROUGHAGE BENEFICIAL

Brussels sprouts have been cultivated in Belgium for centuries. Growing on a long stalk, small, cabbage-like heads about an inch in diameter make this a distinctive vegetable. These tiny cabbage heads, when picked and cooked are very delicate and tender. They are in season from September to January. Short cooking makes them tender, but too much cooking makes them "mushy," so be careful in cooking them.

Cook your vegetables by steaming them. If you boil them, short cooking at a high temperature with a minimum amount of water, is much less destructive to the vitamines than long simmering.

At last, but not least, we must mention the bulk and roughage afforded by vegetables. This property is very essential in digestion.

which all membrane has been removed and which have been cut in smaller pieces. Serve at once. This is enough for six or eight.

SPICED RED BEETS—Cook 12 very young beets until tender. Chill in cold water and slip off the skins. Cut them in very fine strips and place in a preserving kettle in which 2 cups of sugar and a cup of water have been cooked to a thick syrup. Tie a tablespoon of cloves in a piece of cheesecloth and cook with the beets until they have absorbed much of the syrup. Remove the bag of cloves and place the beets in jars or crocks.

PAPRIKA BEETS—Cook 3 to 6 large beets in boiling water to which a tablespoon of sugar has been added. Chill in cold water and slip off the skins. Slice or if small halve the beets. Arrange in a serving dish and pour over a sauce made by melting 2 tablespoons of butter to which has been added 1 tablespoon of sugar and ½ teaspoon each of salt

COFFEE CINNAMON ROLLS—One cup lukewarm water, 3 tablespoons melted shortening, 1 egg well beaten, 2 cakes compressed yeast, 1 cup lukewarm coffee, 2 teaspoons salt, 6 tablespoons sugar, 5½ to 6 cups flour.

Soften the yeast in the lukewarm water. Add the coffee, melted shortening and egg. Add the sugar and salt and sufficient flour to make a dough stiff enough to knead on a lightly floured board. Knead the dough until smooth and elastic. Cover with a warm moist cloth and allow the dough to double in bulk. Knead down and again allow to double in bulk. Turn out on a lightly floured bread board. Roll out in a sheet ¾ inch thick.

Spread with melted butter and sprinkle thickly with sugar and cinnamon, using 2 teaspoons of cinnamon to each cup of sugar. Roll as a jelly roll. Cut with a sharp knife in slices ¾ inch thick. Place cut side down in a well oiled baking pan. Bake at 400 degrees F. for about 20 minutes. Cover with a warm moist cloth. Allow to double in bulk.

MAPLE COFFEE MOUSSE—One cup maple syrup, 2 eggs, 1 cup evaporated milk, 1 cup coffee, ¼ teaspoon salt.

Combine the coffee, syrup and salt and cook over hot water for 5 minutes. Remove from the fire and pour over the slightly beaten eggs. Stir constantly. Cook until the mixture thickens. Cool. Partially freeze in a tray of the mechanical refrigerator or in an ice cream freezer. Carefully fold in the evaporated milk which has been whipped until stiff. Continue freezing until firm.

BANANA ICE BOX PUDDING—One cup milk, 1 cup coffee, 2 eggs, ¼ cup butter, 3 bananas, ¼ cup sugar, ¼ teaspoon salt, ½ teaspoon vanilla extract, ½ teaspoon almond extract, 24 vanilla wafers.

Scald the milk and coffee; beat the eggs slightly with a fork and add sugar and salt; stir constantly while slowly adding the scalded milk and coffee. Cook over hot water until the mixture coats a clean spoon. Add butter; cool. Add vanilla and almond extract. Cover the bottom of a deep dish with vanilla wafers; add a layer of sliced bananas and pour ½ of the custard over the bananas.

PINEAPPLE FRITTERS—One and a third cups flour, 2 teaspoons baking powder, ¼ teaspoon salt, 2-3 cup milk, 1 egg.

Mix and sift dry ingredients, gradually adding the milk and the egg well beaten. Drain rings of canned pineapple from the juice, cut in 2-inch pieces, dip in the batter and fry a golden brown. Drain and serve as a meat or fish accompaniment.

CHEESE CUSTARD—This recipe will serve five. Make a custard of 4 eggs slightly beaten, 1 cup milk, 2 tablespoons melted butter, 3 tablespoons grated cheese, ½ teaspoon salt, cayenne and a few drops of onion juice. Turn into buttered baking cups, then set in pan of hot water and bake in a slow oven, 300 degrees, until set and top is brown. Remove custards to a hot platter and pour around them the following white sauce.

WHITE SAUCE—Melt 1½ tablespoons butter, add 2 tablespoons flour, dash of pepper, ½ teaspoon salt and 1 cup evaporated milk diluted with 1 cup water. Cook until thick and smooth.

BAKED FUDGE SQUARES—For 30 cookies 2 inches square, cream 2 tablespoons butter, add to it 1 cup fine granulated sugar and cream together. Add 1 unbeaten egg and beat until light and fluffy. Add 2 squares melted chocolate, 1-3 cup evaporated milk and ½ teaspoon vanilla. Sift 1 cup flour, then resift with 1 teaspoon baking powder. Add to the first mixture. Add ½ cup nuts, chopped. Spread ½ inch thick in square or rectangular cake pan lined with waxed paper. Bake in slow oven, 325 degrees, for a half hour. Cut in squares while warm.

SPINACH DUMPLINGS—Beat 1 egg until very light. Add ¼ cup water and mix well. Add 2 cups flour, ½ teaspoon salt and 4 teaspoons baking powder and mix thoroughly. Roll dough thin and cut in squares. Place a tablespoon of well-seasoned spinach in the center, fold dough over, pinching edges together. Drop in boiling salted water with 1 onion sliced, cover and cook 15 minutes.

APRICOT UPSIDE DOWN CAKE—Into a large hot skillet put a piece of butter the size of an egg, when it is melted add 4 tablespoons brown sugar. Then place well drained apricots in the pan, fitting them in close together. Sprinkle a cup of chopped nuts over the fruit.

For the batter, beat the yolks of 4 eggs until light, then beat in 1 cup of sugar, the stiffly beaten whites of 4 eggs, next fold in 1 cup flour sifted 3 times with ¼ teaspoon salt. Add 1 teaspoon vanilla. Pour over the fruit mixture in the skillet and bake 30 to 40 minutes in a moderate oven. When done, turn on a cake plate and decorate with whipped cream and chopped and whole cherries and bits of apricots.

BEETS WITH LEMON SAUCE—Mix ½ teaspoon of salt, ½ cup of sugar, 2 teaspoons of cornstarch, ½ cup of water and ¼ cup of lemon juice; bring to a boil and boil for 5 minutes, stirring constantly. Pour 1 pint of sliced cooked beets and let stand for ½ hour. Add butter, heat again and serve immediately.

PEACH PUDDING—Cream 1-3 cupful of shortening with 1 cupful of brown sugar. Add 2 eggs and beat until smooth. Add 1 cupful of milk and 3 cupfuls of flour, 3 teaspoonfuls of baking powder, 1 teaspoonful of salt and ¼ teaspoonful each of nutmeg and cinnamon sifted together. Pour into a well greased pan. Slice some fresh or canned peaches and stick the slices in the batter to cover the surface. Sprinkle lightly with powdered sugar and nutmeg. Bake for 35 minutes in a medium oven. This serves six.

* * *

MARSHMALLOW DESSERT—Dissolve 1 tablespoonful of gelatin in ¼ cupful of cold water and ¼ cupful of boiling water and ½ cupful of sugar. Let stand until cool. Add 1 pint of whipped cream and beat until well mixed. Then add 10 ground marshmallows, 12 ground macaroons, ½ cupful of chopped almonds, and 3 table-

WHAT DOES YOUR MIRROR SAY?

TO MANY WOMEN the mounting birthdays bring a little less beauty, a few more wrinkles, a complexion that has lost its youth and charm. Yet for others, Time seems to stand still.

The difference is often a matter of diet. So many foods lack sufficient roughage or bulk. Without it, constipation is inevitable. Its poisons spread over the whole system, causing ill health and loss of youth.

Today, you can prevent it easily by eating Kellogg's ALL-BRAN. Two tablespoonfuls daily are guaranteed to prevent and relieve both temporary and recurring constipation. In stubborn cases, eat ALL-BRAN with each meal. This is so much better than taking pills and drugs that may be harmful.

Advanced processes have improved Kellogg's ALL-BRAN both in texture and in the delicious, nut-like taste.

Delightful with milk or cream, fruits or honey added. Use it for making fluffy bran muffins, breads, etc.

Kellogg's ALL-BRAN also brings iron, which paints cheeks and lips with the natural tint of health. At all grocers. Made by Kellogg in Battle Creek.

230 CASH AWARDS
FIRST PRIZE, $250.00

Second Prize	150.00
Third Prize	75.00
Fourth Prize	50.00
Fifth Prize	25.00
25 Prizes at $10	250.00
100 Prizes at $5	500.00
100 Prizes at $2	200.00
Total (230 Cash Prizes)	$1,500

FOLLOW THESE RULES:

1—Everyone is eligible to participate in the Title Hunt except employes of the Sun-Telegraph and members of their families.

2—Every day from September 7 to October 6, inclusive, ten Ripley "Believe It or Not" pictures (without description) will be published in addition to the regular Ripley feature. The descriptions for each picture will be published in the Classified Ad columns.

3—The Title Hunt consists in finding the descriptions in the Classified Ads, clipping them out, and placing each under the picture to which it refers. The words making up each description will appear as a single unit in one place.

4—Hold all of the pictures until you have thirty complete sets of 10 each—300 pictures in all. Then send them in to Ripley's Title Hunt Editor, Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph, Telegraph Square, Pittsburgh, Pa.

5—All entries must be postmarked not later than midnight, October 31. No entries will be returned to the sender.

6—$1,500.00 in cash prizes, in accordance with the complete prize list published herewith, will be paid to the persons sending in the most nearly correct and neatest complete set of pictures at the close of the Title Hunt.

7—A committee of judges will be appointed by the Sun-Telegraph to determine the successful contestants. All entrants agree to accept the decisions of the judges as final. In cases of ties, a duplicate award will be given each tying contestant.

8—It is not necessary to purchase the Sun-Telegraph to compete. This newspaper may be examined at any of its offices or at the public libraries free of charge, and if you wish you may copy or trace the pictures as well as the descriptions from the Sun-Telegraph and then assemble the sets from the copies you have made.

...spoonfuls of candied cherries ...ce in a bread tin to set and cut ... slices like ice cream.

FISH HASH—Soak in cold water for three hours enough bits of salt codfish to fill a cup, then heat slowly to the boiling point. Add 2 cupfuls of hot boiled potato cubes and chop and mix thoroughly. In a frying pan brown 2 tablespoonfuls of fat salt pork cut into cubes. Do this slowly and remove the scraps when they are crisp and of a delicate brown color. Put the hash into the pan and stir until heated. Sprinkle with pepper and add salt if required. Let cook until well browned. Fold like an omelet, and turn onto a hot platter and serve.

FRESH FRUIT COCKTAIL—Peel three large oranges and a grapefruit and separate the sections, removing all the membrane. Mix with ½ cup of chopped apple. Sprinkle 3 tablespoons of lemon juice and ½ cup of powdered sugar over the fruit. Chill about an hour, and a few minutes before serving add a crushed mint sprig to each individual service.

* * *

PAN-BROILED LAMB CHOPS—Broiled lamb chops are universal favorites. The so-called "English" chop always pleases men. The shoulder cut also offers a substantial serving. In pan broiling, pour off all extra fat, so that the chops may broil, not fry. An attractive garnish for your chop plate is made by hollowing a half lemon, fluting its edges and filling its center with chili sauce. The perfect accompaniment to a chop is a baked potato. Its flavor is improved by slitting the hot potato, spreading the opening and inserting a square of butter, a teaspoonful of grated cheese and a bit of parsley. The cheese flavor, though not pronounced, is excellent.

LETTUCE WITH SOUR CREAM DRESSING—This dressing, as served at a famous Viennese hotel, can be used on almost any variety of salad greens. It is especially good when lettuce is combined with the slightly bitter chicory. To ¾ cupful of thin, slightly sour cream add ½ cupful of cider or tarragon vinegar, 1 tablespoonful of sugar, 1 teaspoonful of salt, 1 teaspoonful of prepared mustard, and beat well.

Press the yolks of 3 hardcooked eggs through a coarse sieve and fold into the cream mixture. This dressing should be almost as thin as coffee cream. The whites may be used as a garnish.

BAKED BLUEBERRY ROLL—Two cupfuls flour, ¾ teaspoonful salt, 6 tablespoonfuls shortening, 1 egg, 3 teaspoonfuls baking powder, 1 tablespoonful sugar, ½ cupful milk, 1 cupful blueberries, mixed with ¼ cupful sugar.

Sift the dry ingredients together, cut in the shortening and add the milk and beaten egg. Mix well, toss on a floured board and knead for a few seconds. Roll out very thin into sheet about 10 inches square and spread with the blueberry mixture. Roll up as you would a jelly roll, pinch edges together to prevent the fruit juice from escaping. Place lengthwise in a shallow pan 8x12x2, and bake in a hot oven (475 degrees F.) for about 20 minutes. Slice and serve hot with cream or the following hot sauce.

One-half cupful sugar, 1 cupful blueberries, ½ cupful boiling water, 2 tablespoonfuls butter, 1 tablespoonful lemon juice, 2 tablespoonfuls flour.

Cook the berries and water for 5 minutes and pour them gradually over the flour and sugar mixed together. Return to a double boiler and cook for 5 minutes longer, then add the butter and lemon juice.

SOUR CREAM MOLASSES COOKIES—Three-quarter cup shortening, ¾ cup brown sugar, 1 egg, ¾ cup molasses, ¾ cup sour cream, 3½ to 4 cups flour, 1 teaspoon salt, 1 teaspoon soda, 1 teaspoon ginger, 2 teaspoons cinnamon, ½ teaspoon cloves, ½ teaspoon nutmeg, 1 cup raisins.

Cream the shortening and sugar together. Add egg and beat well. Add molasses and sour cream, then the dry ingredients, which have been sifted together, and the raisins. Drop by spoonfuls onto a greased cooky sheet. Bake in a moderately hot oven.

WHOLE PRESERVED STRAWBERRIES—Simmer for 20 minutes, slightly mashed strawberries, adding no sugar, strain them and to each cupful of juice, allow 1 cupful of sugar. Add the sugar to the syrup, when it has been replaced on the stove, and is at the boiling point. Skim, and let it boil until thick, and pour it over whole hulled berries, that have been placed in sterilized glasses being careful not to use too many berries to a glass. Allow to cool, cover, and set in the sun daily for one month.

PICNIC HAM LOAF—Dissolve 1 package of lemon flavored gelatin in boiling water (1¾ cups). Add 2 teaspoons vinegar, 2 teaspoons Worcestershire sauce and ¼ teaspoon mustard. Cook in the double boiler and when slightly thickened add 2 cups of cooked ground ham, 2 tablespoons mayonnaise, 1 tablespoon drained horseradish, 1 finely cut pimento, ½ teaspoon onion pulp, a dash of cayennee, and 1-16 teaspoon each of nutmeg and cloves. Mix and set in loaf form in refrigerator to chill for at least 1½ hours.

Carry to the picnic grounds in the form. When ready to serve unmold on a platter and garnish with lemon slices, bits of parsley or watercress. Serves eight.

JELLY CHEESE DROPS—Two cups sifted flour, 4 teaspoons baking powder, ¾ teaspoon salt, 3 tablespoons shortening, 5 tablespoons soft cheese of ½ cup grated cheese, ½ to ¾ cup milk, jelly or marmalade. Sift dry ingredients together, add shortening, working in with a fork or pastry-blender. Work aspic rings and serve on lettuce in cheese. Add sufficient milk to make soft dough. Drop portions into small muffin pans, filling 2-3 full, or shape as small biscuits on a baking sheet. Make depressions in center and fill with jelly. Bake in a 475 degree oven 10 to 15 minutes. Serve hot with tea or salad. Makes one dozen.

MARSHMALLOW SALAD—Four oranges, 2 bananas, 1 cup marshmallows, ¾ cup cream, yolks of 2 eggs, 2 tablesspoons sugar, 2 tablespoons lemon juice, sprinkling salt, 1 cup fresh grated cocoanut. Cut oranges into sections, slice bananas and cut marshmallows into quarters. Mix with dressing made by scalding cream and thickening it carefully with egg yolks, beaten until light with sugar. Cool dressing and add lemon juice and a light sprinkling of salt before adding fruit. Serve with cocoanut.

Wash mushrooms and remove tough end of stem. Cut mushrooms lengthwise in thick slices. Heat 2 tablespoons of butter in grill pan with reflector underneath. Put in mushrooms and cook 10 or 12 minutes, reducing heat to medium after the first 5 minutes. Beat the eggs slightly, add the milk and seasonings, then add the mixture to the mushrooms. Increase the heat to high again and cook until eggs are "set," stirring frequently.

MISS HARD-BOILED

By JANE DIXON

Raquel Is Recognized as Queen of Beauty

CHAPTER LI

That part of Paris which flashes and froths and whirls giddily in its frenzied flight toward pleasure rejoiced that Alphonse Courbet had returned from a hurried trip to the States.

Once more the magic carpets in Alphonse's splendid apartment just off the Champs Elysees would transport them to the ultimate heaven of their delight. A savant of all things beautiful, exotic, lavish, he promised to outdo all previous attempts at originality and abandon in entertainment. Not to have been the guest of Alphonse was to admit oneself an outsider in the world of fashion and frivolity.

The center of these Arabian Night revels was invariably "le lis noir." The mysterious young woman of black and white loveliness reputed to be a Spanish lady of high degree who had come to Paris by way of America—for a reason no one seemed able to discover.

Alphonse had undertaken to establish "le lis noir"—called Raquel Rojos—queen of beauty in the capital city of Venus. He had succeeded magnificently.

There was to be a reproduction of a fete of Louis XVI in the apartment of Alphonse. Fashionable circles buzzed in anticipation of the event. Frivolity accelerated its pace. preened before mirrors polished its jewels.

Many Rumors

There was much whispering too, behind hands in drawing-rooms, over dinner tables, at late suppers in smart cafes.

"Le lis noir has captured Eric Stafford," one would confide.

"His fancy perhaps—not his heart," the other asserted.

"Both. He will make her Lady Stafford if he can."

"Nonsense."

If these rumors and rumblings reached the ears of Alphonse, he gave no sign.

"Are you seriously thinking of adding a handle to your name?" Greta asked Raquel one evening, when they had had tea in the garden and Eric Stafford lingered so long they had to rush into their dinner clothes.

Raquel examined her face closely in the mirror. It showed no trace of the rich foods, the rare wines, the late hours, the swift pace of pleasure. She had taken care it shouldn't. Without beauty there would be no magic carpets for her to tread.

No, she had lost nothing. She had grown more beautiful. More finely drawn. Her creamy pallor had a transparency, a luminosity it lacked before science took it in hand.

She turned to Greta, now drooping delicate cream lids over thoughtful black eyes until their sable lashes swept her cheeks.

Queen of Beauty

"Perhaps," she said laconically.

"Better think it over," Greta advised. "They tell me these ancestral castles have plenty of drafts, but no bathrooms."

Raquel laughed. "I do like my bath," she said.

"Umm. Perfumed. In a sunken tub. They don't have these little novelties on the Left Bank where Eric lives while in Paris."

"No. He lives very simply. I've been told Eric's father, the present head of the Stafford line, believes his sons should stand on their own feet. It's a tradition in the family."

"Well, you can't eat traditions, or wear them, or bathe in them, either. The old boy ought to loosen up."

"Eric is clever."

"Then he'd better convert his cleverness into cash before he takes you on, old dear. That costume Alphonse is creating for you to wear to the Louis fete will set the firm back several hundred pounds, or guineas, or whatever it is they use for money in deah ol' Lunnon."

As was freely predicted, "le lis noir" proved her undisputed right to reign as queen of beauty at the Louis XVI fete. The rooms had been transformed into exact reproductions of those in Versailles for the event.

Through them moved that breath-taking young woman of mystery, Raquel Rojos—"le lis noir." In creamy satin embroidered so thickly with seed-pearls and crystals that the billowing skirts would easily stand of themselves. Her feet, encased in pearl-embroidered slippers, played in and out like winged things among the priceless lace of her petticoats. She did not affect the powdered wig of the period. The sable cloud of her hair, piled high, was held in place with garlands of orange blossoms.

"You are supreme, ma petite," Alphonse told her. "You are perfect. You cannot be more so." He was startled by the unbelievable skill with which he had wrought.

Raquel gazed down at the billowing skirts. Pearls and crystals and creamy satin. For the merest flick of a second her eyes saw a sleasy red silk dress, scuffed, shapeless black shoes. If Lucy—her mother—could see her this night! Lucy. She had not thought of her mother in weeks. Not since she saw the little boy with the wistful eyes playing a violin on the streets. Baby Jose. She gave the boy a handful of francs. For her brother, Baby Jose.

Eric Stafford, a proud courtier in blue and silver, was at her side. Impatient to be off with her. What would the proud Lord Stafford think of Lucy's daughter? Of Pancho Rojos' girl, Raquel? She smiled. The thought of Lucy and of Pancho in the ancestral halls of the Staffords had a humorous appeal to her. Little Jose riding on a fat, sleek pony with a groom at its head.

Summoned Home

You are more lustrous than the finest gem that was ever carved," Eric told her. Awkwardly. Superlatives did not come easy to him. "You are lovelier than the loveliest flower that ever bloomed. You are Circe and Venus—dawn and dusk."

Please, Eric. This from you?" Raquel tapped him playfully with a miniature fan that was a cobweb with the dew upon it.

His lips were stern.

"London?" Raquel fought back her chagrin.

Yes. The pater cabled me today. I'll fly over and be back at the beginning of the week. It's just around the corner, you know, now that we take it by air. The pater says he has something important to talk over with me. And I must see him, too."

His eyes sought hers. They told her—oh, so plainly—why this son must see his father.

"When I return, Raquel, I shall have something to ask you. That will be my heaven—or my hell."

Sees Mrs. Bosart

She flirted with her fan. He must not know which it was to be until—until she herself was sure. She could decide while he was away in London.

She turned. Someone had touched her arm.

"Princess—Miss Raquel—I have been searching everywhere for you," cackled a creature that was so terrifying she drew back instinctively. "Have you seen my Elsworth?"

"Mrs. Bosart!" breathed Raquel. "I scarcely recognized you—"

"I've been in Vienna for the treatment. It's done wonders. Elsworth can't believe it. He's fallen in love with me all over again."

Raquel thought: If this creature shrinks another ounce, she will crack apart, disintegrate into a little heap of desert dust.

"I must find Elsworth," Mrs. Bosart cackled on. "He'll be delighted to see you—the remarkable resemblance between us, you know—except I've gone back to Titian for the hair. More life in Titian."

"Who is that grisly marionette?" asked Stafford, fascinated, as Raquel had been, by the sheer terror of what science had done.

"That," said Raquel, her eyes peering into distant space and wide with fear of what she saw there, "is my specter."

Beauty Box

By HELEN FOLLETT

Middle-aged women are singularly free of turkey tracks and all their miserable ilk. It is because of the general public shouting about health rules, hygiene, cosmetics and beauty insurance by various methods. The campaign for pulchritude which has been marching on for the last 15 or 20 years is showing results. Wrinkles are kept at bay by a well-behaved digestions, regular hours for sleep, daily exercise and the disposition that refuses to believe that everything is going to the dogs.

Diets are changing. In the past it was a matter of shuffling off fat cells. The interest now is centered on foods that make for vigor and vitality. Calories are forgotten and vitamines hold the fort. The beauty army has taken to drink and its favorite tipples are orange juice, tomato juice and sauerkraut juice. No, these vitalizing fluids are not mixed together. Don't be silly. The last two go tandem, but orange juice plays solo.

Going without stockings will cause burning, smarting foot soles. In-soles of shoes do not absorb moisture. Best to wear anklets. When feet burn, massage with cold cream, and wrap the feet in bath towels which have been wrung out of cold water.

Evelyn Thaw once ran a tea room. She flitted about in a little gingham gown, looking very wholesome and sweet peeling potatoes. This was a decided flop with her curious customers who preferred to see her in a scarlet gown.

I once knew a little singer in a road house out West. She had a wistful little face and sad blue eyes, and a plaintive voice. She had a whole repertoire of confession stories of her "downfall," knowing just which one would most appeal to her listener of the moment.

The slums have their "characters" and "atmos-fear" for the tourist trade.

The real thing would not be so picturesque—or safe!

Love's Reawakening

Continuation of Loves Awakening

By ADELE GARRISON

Mrs. Cosgrove Converses With Madge

I laughed at Mary's exaggeration as I guessed she meant me to do, but when I had left her, I heard the click of the door key, and realized that she was really enough afraid of the vague menace of Jack Leslie to lock her door while I was gone. But it was not of the "capering cockroach" I was thinking as I went out of the door after listening to Mrs. Hasbrouck's naive account of the way she had foiled Mary's attempt to go for a stroll, and walked again down the road to the Cosgrove home.

What was it that Harry Underwood feared for Mary which made him lay such stress upon the fact that she must not be left alone? I almost turned back as I realized that obeying his injunction to the letter would mean my return to the Hasbrouck house immediately and compelling her to come with me. But I told myself irritably that Mrs. Hasbrouck was a puissant guardian, and went on with the brain flagellation impelled by Harry Underwood's cautionary directions to me.

The reason for precaution, I knew, lay in the chase which the man in the black roadster, the man Mr. Underwood had said was a private detective, had given up. Harry had eluded the man with consummate skill, but he had not given me a direct negative when I had asked him if there was any danger of the detective's picking up our trail again. And his explanation of the possible reason for the man's espionage had been as lame as it was bizarre. Nevertheless, I knew that Harry Underwood would not frighten anyone unless he thought that he must do so.

I was hazily conscious that somewhere deep in one of the flics of my brain lay the answer, if I could only concentrate sufficiently upon the matter to bring it out. But with both heart and brain so obsessed by Lillian's problem, I had no mental energy for anything else. With the sensible resolution to keep watch over Mary without bothering about the reason for doing so, I again knocked at the Cosgrove door.

Mrs. Cosgrove came to the door, and I saw that her eyes were red. With a sudden clutch at my throat I put out my hand.

"Robert!" I whispered. "He hasn't—"

No, no," she said hastily. "He is still here, and thanks to Lillian we probably shall have him with us a little longer even than we had hoped. You see," she explained as she led the way into the sitting room and pulled out a chair for me, "he doesn't suffer much, now, so that every day he stays with us is so much happiness for me to remember. I suppose you see that I have been crying, but it's for joy to see the peace and happiness on his face. Whatever she said to him, I don't know—of course he told me nothing, but it's made him so happy!

"He's lying there smiling at her picture as if it were her living self. And when I went into the room a few minutes ago—he sent for me—he put out his hand and pulled me down so he could whisper to me, he saves his voice always—you know, the doctor tells him he must. 'Darling,' he said—he always has called me that since we were little children together—'Darling, you've worried so. I want you to know that I'm perfectly happy. Heaven can hold nothing more for me than what I have. It doesn't matter whether I go an hour from now or a year. I've had her divine assurance. I shall never see her living face again, but it doesn't matter. I have the most wonderful memory a man could have, and this—" he pointed to the portrait. "From now on, sister, darling, don't let anyone besides yourself and the nurse come in here. You're the only one who can understand, the only one I can talk to about her. I've been a bad brother to you these last months, but now you'll see, while I stay I'll make it up to you.'"

Mrs. Cosgrove stopped, chokingly, and for a few minutes let the tears have their way, while I sat, quiet, knowing that only thus could I serve her.

"He meant," she said, "that since he and Lillian weren't friends any more—he has been so moody and unhappy that he didn't have a pleasant word for anybody. It was pretty trying for me, for I've always worshiped him, but I knew how he was suffering over Lillian, and I've tried not to mind him. But I could go down on my knees to her for making him so happy. It has seemed to me that I couldn't bear for him to go out into the darkness with that bitter look upon his face. And now it's all gone, thanks to her."

She wiped her eyes and sat upright.

"There's something else which I ought to say to you now you're here," she said slowly. "And yet, I don't know. Robert's left a letter for me to give you, so perhaps I'd better wait."

"I have come over to talk to you about that very thing," I said slowly. "Robert told me about the money he had left to me in trust for Lillian. But I cannot take it. Don't you see I can't?"

Tomorrow's Horoscope

Saturday, September 13

Although there is augury for some much-desired success and advancement, according to the sidereal operations for this day, at the same time there is shown the menace of small disappointments, delays, treachery and slander or gossip. Correspondence or important papers or writings may be involved.

Those whose birthday it is may anticipate a year of favors, preferment or advancement in employment, with some gain in finances, but at the same time they are enjoined to be on guard against idle rumor, slander, treachery and anxiety or delays through papers or writings.

A child born on this day should be clever and accomplished and may attain a favored place with its superiors or employers, but nevertheless may suffer through slander and idle gossip or treachery.

CORRECT MANNERS

By Mrs. Cornelius Beeckman

Honoring the Future 'In-Laws'

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

When a man becomes engaged to a girl and gives her the engagement ring, is he supposed to tell the girl's parents about it, or is the ring itself enough to announce the engagement? C. H. M.

Before the engagement is actually consummated, he should give his future in-laws the honor and privilege of talking over with them his wish to marry their daughter. Any man who does not do this shows a fundamental lack of good taste and social discrimination. After all, he surely owes this consideration to the mother and father of the girl whom he wishes to marry. Not to take this recognition of their parenthood starts, inevitably, the relationship with this family on entirely the wrong basis and shows a deep selfishness. And this is true, even if the girl urges him not to take consideration of her family!

When I hear of a young man doing this sort of thing, I find myself wondering if perhaps life won't pay him back some time, in his own coin, if some time the young man who wishes to marry his daughter will disregard him when this important time comes.

Sandwich Etiquette

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

Will you please let me know if it is correct to eat a plain chicken sandwich (no dressing, lettuce, and not toasted), with a knife and fork, instead of cutting it into quarters and picking it up in the hand, when one is dining in the main dining room of one of the large apartment houses? C. H.

Yes, this is correct, and in the very best of eating-form.

Household Hints

Now is the season when we usually have fresh flowers in our homes and unless we are careful we are apt to harm some of our furniture. Place a piece of waxed paper under the centerpiece upon which your vase of flowers is to be placed. Otherwise the dampness will cause the linen to stick to the woodwork of the table and ruin the finish.

When the children arrive at the investigating age, it is time to put matches, scissors, medicines and similar articles out of their reach and to keep them out of their reach until they fully understand the danger of each article and how to handle it.

What could be a better gift for the prospective bride at the kitchen shower than a market basket containing a jar of each preserve or jelly done up during the summer and fall? Of course, give her the most ornate jars and tumblers that you have used.

TELL IT TO SALLY

By SALLY MARTIN

Should a Girl Be Tied to Her Sister's Apronstrings?

Have you someone who fusses and frets and fidgets over you—who insists on making sacrifices and bearing crosses for you—even though you tell 'em to lay off?

Someone who gets Simply Frantic if you want to dash out and take a chance on your own?

Yes? I thought so. And how about you?

Are you tickled pink at all these damp and dolorous attentions? Or, do you privately consider them a doggone nuisance—and then feel like thirty cents because you don't appreciate their beautiful, noble, long-suffering love?

You do? Then listen in while Mirza spills her static.

Dear Sally Martin—

I wish you'd give me some help. Maybe this will sound silly to you, but what would you do with a sister, who, on the very threshold of her greatest happiness, is about to wreck her life and make her fiance miserable . . . because she "doesn't know how" I, who have been earning my way for the past five years, "will ever get along without her"?

It's got me just simply going around in circles. But all talk about the fact that I'm old enough to have a brain of my own, and am perfectly able to rent myself a room or an apartment, and take fairly good care of myself, has no effect on her at all. She just "sits on the fence" and says she doesn't see how she can marry, because if she did, she'd be continually worrying about me.

Heaven knows, I don't want her to worry about me. To think of her giving up her life because she does makes me feel like a robber and a criminal. Don't mistake me. I'm awfully happy to think she is that fond of me, but I can't bear to be responsible for thwarting her life.

And it seems to me such utter nonsense. I can't for the life of me see any sensible reason for her to sacrifice her future because she is "worried" about me. Sooner or later we must part any way. That's life. And then it may be too late for her to find anything to make her happy. So why shouldn't she go ahead and take what life offers her? She is the home loving kind, and wants nothing more than a home, a man who loves her, and children. And the idea that I stand between her and happiness makes me utterly miserable. But she can't seem to get it. She won't listen to a word I say, and I've talked to her till I'm hoarse. It makes me so mad, and humiliates me so, that I don't know what to do.

I wonder if you can't possibly think up some sort of an argument that'll prove to her that I'm right when I say that she should go ahead an not spoil her life and her fiance's so unnecessarily for my sake.

I'll be watching your column every day. And oh how grateful I'll be if you can make her understand. I'm depending on you. I've used up every argument I can think of, and got nowhere. It's all stifling me, and I can't make her see it. I want her to be happy, and I can't be happy unless she is. Please help me. What makes her that way, anyway?

MIRZA.

What makes her that way?

Well, of course, my diagnosis may be wrong, but I suspect she has elected to be a martyr, and in spite of her seeming anguish, is getting a big bang out of it.

Queer thing, this business of being a martyr. In spite of its lugubrious aspects, it is one of the most popular of indoor sports. And one of the hardest to referee. For who is going to tell a patient, grieving, suffering, slaving martyr that she or he is a selfish egotist, using love as an excuse for hogging the spotlight and bossing the show? No one. Yet that is exactly what the average family martyr is—and does.

Every human being has a normal desire for love and attention—for power and popularity, and to try to achieve these ends by cheerfulness and stimulating companionship. But in certain warped natures this desire amounts to an obsession. They have an insatiable desire to Get in the Picture. Yet, for some sick reason, they haven't the normal endearing qualities. And so they proceed to make themselves important by messing up the scenery with their Bleeding Hearts.

Do they get a hand? Of course they do. For fifty per cent of us think what saints they are. And the other fifty per cent, who are secretly convinced that they're getting by with murder, are ashamed to say so.

And I suspect, Mirza, that this is the sort of show Sister is putting on. She PRETENDS to be suffering all the agonie crucifixion, and perhaps she even kids herself that she IS. But actually, she is reveling in the sense of saintly importance that her "heroic sacrifice" is giving her—and the commotion she's creating.

Personally, I don't think there's one chance in a million that she'll go through with her act. Why this mean, cynical attitude? Because I've been a martyr myself, dearie. One of the best. And I've yet to make good on any of my threats!

However, if she DOES insist—if she refuses to abandon her li'l halo and harp, your course is still easy. You can't keep her from being a martyr, but you can keep yourself from being a martyr. If she won't leave you, leave her! Tell her that you flatly refuse to accept the donation of her life in your service, and beat it. Leave her to martyrize alone.

How to Keep Well

By DR. ROYAL S. COPELAND

Modern Life the Cause of Nervousness

Most typical of the ailments of modern life are the nervous diseases. In these days we are exposed to many factors that contribute to nervousness.

DR. COPELAND

These disturbances are not confined to those who live in the big cities. The monotony of rural life may bring an almost intolerable condition of the nervous system. The normal body will resist these ailments, but if disease weakens it, some form of nervous disorder may appear.

To this condition the layman gives the name "nervousness." The medical profession call it "neurasthenia," "hysteria," or "nervous excitement."

There is no certain cure for the nervousness that accompanies disease. It is really a symptom and disappears when the underlying disease is cured. Nervousness cannot be prevented except as you prevent its exciting cause or causes.

The chief symptoms of neurasthenia are inability to sleep, and fitful sleep. There is a tendency to lie awake for hours.

The discordant, distracting, grating noises of a great city are bad for the nerves. Science and the law can do much to remove them.

The strain on the nerves from "loud speakers" and other noises of a city are tremendous. They mean long hours of wakefulness on the part of a great many people. Such experiences are sure to undermine the health.

Worry and fear can make a man go down hill very fast. The strain and stress of modern business bring many a nervous breakdown.

Nervousness comes to all ages and to both sexes, but it is more common in women and children than among men. It is most likely to occur among those who are brought up in idleness and luxury. Persons who earn their daily bread and have wholesome work to do are the better off when it comes to this test. It is a good thing to live a simple, useful and profitable life.

The victims of neurasthenia should have a change of scene in a restful place. Congenial companions, agreeable diversions, new sights and thoughts pave the way for better mental and physical health.

GIRL AROUSES FAMILY IN FIRE

An early morning fire that raged through a two-story frame building, 210 Eighth avenue, Homestead, forced several families from their homes and caused damage estimated at $4,000.

The fire started on the second floor of the building occupied by Sterling Moore, his wife, a son and three daughters. Awakened by smoke, Rita Moore, 17, called the fire department and awakened others in the household.

The first floor is occupied by Benn Little, shoe merchant. Damage by water to Little's stock was reported. The fire burned from the second floor into the rear of the storeroom.

Families living adjacent to the burning house were ordered from their residences by firemen, who feared the flames would spread.

PACIFIC FLIGHT AGAIN DELAYED

SAMBONGI, Japan, Sept. 12.—(AP.)—Harold L. Bromley postponed again tonight his projected non-stop flight to Tacoma, Washington, announcing unfavorable weather would delay the take-off until Sunday morning at the earliest. He had planned to take off early tomorrow.

Slot Machine Player Loses, Starts Fight

Max Kahn, 28, was fined $25 on a charge of operating a slot machine at his confectionary at 6429 Frankstown road, and Charles Connelly, 25, 405 Forty fifth street, forfeited a $30 bond on a disorderly conduct charge at a hearing before Magistrate Charles Papale in East End Police Court today. Connelly, said to have put $2 in the machine, is charged with starting a fight at Kahn's establishment.

Arrested, police say, with a loaded gun in his possession, Edward Roberts, 279 Spahr street, was fined $50.

WRIT PROTECTS RAIDED PLAY

NEW YORK, Sept. 12.—(AP.)—Counsel for the producer and cast of "Frankie and Johnny," raided Wednesday night in Jamaica, said today he had obtained a Supreme Court injunction restraining police from interfering further with the run of the play.

Jack Kirkland, author, 10 members of the cast and four others connected with its production, were arrested and held in $500 bail each on charges of presenting an indecent performance.

Police said their principal objection to "Frankie and Johnny" was the dialogue. The play, which has its setting along the St. Louis waterfront, was scheduled for Broadway.

Balked by Safe Lock, Take Dresses, Radio

Unsuccessful in opening the safe, thieves early today carried off women's apparel and a radio, valued in all at $400, from the store of Half brothers, 120 Eighth avenue, Homestead, police reported. The robbers knocked the combination off the safe and experts were required to open it today.

WILSON TO TALK IN CANONSBURG

Deputy Prohibition Administrator Harold D. (Three Gun) Wilson, who personally directed a number of raids recently on club rooms of fraternal organizations in Canonsburg, will make a return visit Sunday.

This time he will be the invited guest of the United Presbyterian Church, Canonsburg, and deliver an address at the evening service. The subject of his address was not announced, but will be on the prohibition enforcement question. The Rev. Ross Hume is pastor of the congregation.

Mr. Wilson, who, during the two months he was in charge of the Pittsburgh district, has carried on a drive against sources of supply of moonshine whisky, and seized 179 moonshine distilling plants, has been recommended for transfer to Wilmington, Del., by Prohibition Administrator John D. Pennington. Pending the transfer Wilson is on leave of absence.

SEIZE BEER IN WOMAN'S CAR

Forcing her automobile to a stop at Fifth avenue and Market street, McKeesport, today, prohibition agents arrested Miss Helena Dillon, 30, of 3403 Walnut street, McKeesport, and seized her machine, in which the agents say they found three cases of beer.

The agents reported they observed the woman and her unidentified companion load the beer in the machine at a garage at 611 Rebecca street, McKeesport. The man left the woman after the machine had been driven a few blocks.

Questioned concerning the beer, Miss Dillon told agents that she purchased the beer at a barbecue stand to take to a party. The agents scouted her story.

Following the woman's arrest, the agents returned to the garage where they reported seizing 50 additional cases of beer and a 100-gallon vat.

The woman was placed under bond, pending a hearing.

Paroled for 2 Years In Auto Theft Case

Gilbert Fowler, 23, of Roanoke, Va., pleaded guilty in Federal Court today to transporting a stolen automobile from Canonsburg, Pa., to Wheeling, W. Va., March 8, 1929. He was paroled for two years by Judge Nelson McVicar.

The court was informed that Fowler had just been released from the federal reformatory at Chillicothe, O., after serving 13 months for a similar offense, committed about the same time.

Get one 50c box of Kleenex

Combination Offer for Pittsburgh

Limited Time Only

Get large 50-cent package of Kleenex Cleansing Tissues with 2 boxes of Kotex—for less than the value of Kotex alone!

THROUGH a special arrangement with the Kleenex Company, makers of Kleenex Cleansing Tissues, we are able to make the most unique offer in our history. You can buy for a few days only two 45-cent boxes of Kotex with one 50-cent box of Kleenex—value $1.40—all for 78 cents!

Go to your dealer's today. Don't delay. Dealers' stocks are limited and will not last long. This offer is made, not only to give the millions of Kotex users a remarkable Kotex value—but to enable women everywhere who may not be users of Kleenex Cleansing Tissues to try this important toilet accessory.

Once women do try it, the Kleenex Company has found, an overwhelming majority will accept no other way to remove cold cream. Kleenex Cleansing Tissues are used and recommended by many important stage and screen stars, and leading beauty shops everywhere.

Kotex—more than a "sanitary" pad

Kotex is utterly different from all other sanitary pads. There is no other "like" Kotex.

Thus Kotex has the amazing power of absorbing 16 times its weight in moisture. That's 5 times more, by actual test, than surgical cotton. Think what this means in protection! Think of the ease of mind on warm summer days to feel sure of your sanitary protection.

Quickly, easily disposable

You use Kotex, then dispose of it . . . simply and quickly. No laundry problem. No disposal worries. Think of the relief in that feature alone.

In summer women appreciate these advantages of Kotex: it is shaped to fit, under sheerest, tight-fitting summer frocks; it deodorizes thoroughly and absolutely. Keeps one dainty at all times. Banishes a summertime worry completely.

85% of hospitals use Kotex absorbent

Here's final, medical proof of Kotex' superiority: 85% of the country's leading hospitals use the identical material of which Kotex is made. They've tried everything. They consider Kotex best. They use it, not only for sanitary pads, but for the most serious surgical operations. Doctors insist on Kotex for their patients. Will you accept less?

You must act at once—

Dealer's stock strictly limited!

Because of the extremely liberal nature of this offer, your dealer has been allowed only a limited supply for this purpose. First come—first served. If you come late, do not blame your dealer. When his supply is exhausted, he cannot get any more. Act at once!

Accept this offer

Go today to any store in this city where Kotex is sold and take advantage of this opportunity. But do not delay. All dealers' stocks are limited. If you come late you cannot be supplied.

STAGE and screen stars declare Kleenex to be the only safe and sanitary way of removing cold cream. It is so soft, so absorbent, that it blots up all dirt and cosmetics along with the cream. The skin is left scrupulously clean, free of the germs that endanger beauty. Towels are spared the ruinous stains left by cosmetics.

Doctors are recommending Kleenex for handkerchief use, especially for colds and hay fever. You use each tissue but once — then throw it away. Cold germs are discarded, too. Thus you avoid reinfecting yourself from an unsanitary handkerchief.

Kleenex makes ideal handkerchiefs for children, and for everyday use.

Kleenex comes in a smart, modern box which makes an attractive addition to your bathroom or dressing table. It is cleverly designed to give you two sheets at a time, just as you use them.

CENTRAL LEAGUE TO OPEN SOCCER SEASON

BOOTERS BEGIN TITLE RACE TOMORROW

The Pittsburgh Central League will officially inaugurate its soccer season tomorrow afternoon when all eight clubs swing into action. The champions, Pierpoint Motors, will start in defense of their title by meeting Crafton Heights on the latters' grounds.

The Sons of St. George Club will hook up with the Pittsburgh Celtics, at Leslie Park. This game will give Lawrenceville fans a chance to take a peek at the newly-formed Wilkinsburg club.

Pittsburgh Rovers go to Clan Douglas, and, as yet, President Frank Mincher has not stated where this game will be played. The Clanmen used Swissvale last season, but for some unknown reason the permit was not granted this season. There is some talk of taking the game to Garfield Park.

The Union Switch and Signal team will meet the Mesta Machine eleven at Homestead Athletic Field.

Tomorrow night at Husher Field, Monessen Heidelberg will meet Dunlevy. This is a meeting between old rivals and should pack in the fans at the gate. On Sunday Dunlevy will meet Fitz-Henry. These are the teams playing in the Mon-Yough League.

Brodericks Clinch Minor Loop Title

Pete Lewandowski's hurling enabled the D. J. Brodericks to defeat Melrose, 6 to 5, last evening on the latter's field. This victory clinched the second-half championship of the Wagner Minor League for the Brodericks. Lewandowski fanned 10.

The Brodericks will meet the Sankey Club winner of the first half in a three-game series starting next week to decide the Minor League championship.

GRAYS OPEN SERIES

The Homestead Grays this evening open a five game series with the Baltimore Black Sox at Forbes Field. A doubleheader is billed and the entire series will be concluded with two games at Baltimore on Sunday.

FEARLESS DUKE DOG VICTOR

New Kensington held the spotlight in local greyhound racing last night, the Bridgeville track being ordered closed. A pair of long-shots came through at New Kensington when Killown Lass won the tenth to pay $17, and Fez came through in the seventh to return $16.60. The noted greyhound, Fearless Duke, won easily in the eighth event, in which he was the favorite.

Too Much ACID

Many people, two hours after eating, suffer indigestion as they call it. It is usually excess acid. Correct it with an alkali. The best way, the quick, harmless and efficient way, is Phillips' Milk of Magnesia. It has remained for 50 years the standard with physicians. One spoonful in water neutralizes many times its volume in stomach acids, and at once. The symptoms disappear in five minutes.

You will never use crude methods when you know this better method. And you will never suffer from excess acid when you prove out this easy relief. Please do that—for your own sake—now.

Be sure to get the genuine Phillips' Milk of Magnesia prescribed by physicians for 50 years in correcting excess acids. 25c and 50c a bottle—any drug store.

"Milk of Magnesia" has been the U. S. Registered Trade Mark of The Charles H. Phillips Chemical Company and its predecessor Charles H. Phillips since 1875.

SUTHERLAND ANNUALLY ADDING NAMES

A GLANCE BACKWARD over recent gridiron seasons discloses that the University of Pittsburgh Hall of Football Fame is growing at the rate of about three players per year. During the six years Dr. John Bain Sutherland has been head coach some 16 names have been added. In Pop Warner's preceding reign of nine years, more than 20 names were carved in the records. And in the pre-Warner days there were more than a dozen old-time stars who deserve a ranking with the moderns.

Eddie Baker

The late Joe Duff, who started a number of the Warner regime stars to fame, should be credited with a large contribution to the growth, for it was during his two years of coaching, 1913 and 1914, that Sutherland, Bob Peck, Claude Thornhill, Pat Herron, Andy Hastings, Jimmy DeHart, Chalky Williamson, Jim Morrow, Carl Hockensmith and R. K. Soppitt first flashed on the barred field. Warner, when he started here in 1915, took these men for a nucleus and built a team that was not defeated nor tied for a stretch of seasons.

AND WARNER, IN turn, left to his protege and successor, Dr. Sutherland, such finished or developing stars as Horse Chase, Uhlardt Hangartner, Carl Kifer and Spike Harding as a foundation upon which to build, and since he took charge of gridiron affairs at the local university in 1924 Jock has added his quota to keep up the annual average.

Even before Tex Mosse became coach and Pitt (then Western University of Pennsylvania) started to advance to the front ranks, there were outstanding stars such as Floyd Rose at quarterback and Joe Trees as tackle. Then, under Mosse, came Joe Thompson, Jud Schmidt, Ted Perry, Fanny Mehl and the Sanbury brothers, and under Jim Moorhead, who coached in 1907 and 1908, there followed to start or complete their careers the immortal Tex Richards, along with Homer Roe, Jack Turner, Doc Van Doren, Jack Lindsey and Tex Yielding.

DURING THE COACHING regime of the late Joe Thompson, from 1909 to 1912, inclusive, the "fighting colonel," who inherited Richards, Roe, Lindsey and Van Doren, developed the great Hube Wagner at end and Tillie Dewar, one of the best quarterbacks that Pitt ever had.

Josh Williams

Another star under Thompson was Karl Dallenbach, a lineman with few superiors anywhere. Thompson really produced the first of Pitt's great teams and handed down fine material to his successor, Duff, notably the illustrious Wagner and Polly Galvin, crack center.

AFTER DUFF CAME Warner from Carlisle in 1915, and he added to the stars Duff had bequeathed to him such luminaries as Tom Davies, George McLaren, Jack Sack, Tommy Holleran, Charley Bowser, Cliff Carlson, Hoot Flangan, Herb Stein, Lou Mervis, Harvey Harman, Harry Seidelson, Buck Templeton, Marsh Johnson, Frank Seidel, Jake Stahl, Pie Williams, Herb McCracken, Jakey Bohren, Tiny Hewitt, Katy Easterday, Skip Gougler and others. Pop's stars were well scattered over his nine years at the helm of Pitt football. Then, in 1924, came the present coach to develop further into stardom Chase, Hangartner and the rest to whom he had fallen heir, and to add such other notable products of his own as Tiny Linn, Gibby Welch, Andy Gustafson, Mike Getto, Jimmy Hagen, Bill Kern, Ray Montgomery, Joe Donchess, Toby Uansa, Tom Parkinson, Johnny Anderson, Andy Cutler, Alec Fox, Andy Guarino, Al DeMeolo and Allan Booth.*

WHO FROM THE present team will help Coach Sutherland keep up the average? The best bets are big Jim MacMurdo, at end; Ralph Daugherty, at center; Josh Williams, at halfback, and Captain Eddie Baker, at quarterback. Chuck Tully may, in his last year of football at Pitt, reach the heights.

Rip Collins, regular end in his sophomore year, has two seasons in which to establish himself in the select circle. Franklin Hood and Jimmy Clark, fullbacks; Hart Morris and Walter Milligan, guards; Jess Quatse, tackle; Eddie Hirschberg, end, and any number of sophomores in both the backfield and line are candidates.

ORDINARILY DAZZY VANCE insists on getting four days' rest between games whereas other regular pitchers are given only three, and declares that if sent back to the slab in a shorter time he can't show anything like his best form. Thoughts of world series dough, however, appear to help Vance recuperate more quickly.

Dazzy Vance

Though he had worked a full game against the Giants on Sunday, Dazzy faced the Cubs on Thursday after only three days' rest, and not only pitched his club to within a half a game of first place in the National League's thrilling pennant race by holding the Bruins to one run but also broke the season's major league strike-out record.

VANCE'S TOTAL OF 13 whiffs is the top mark of the year for one game. The previous record for 1930 was 12, made twice by Bill Hallahan, of the Cards, and once by Charley Root, of the Cubs. The best mark of Lefty Grove, of the A's, for the year, is 11, equaled by Earl Whitehill, and Vance's best previous performance was 10. Prior to yesterday's games, Vance had lost four out of five decisions to the Bruins this season and had not won two contests in succession since August 3 and 7. The return of their world series chance to life appears to have aroused the other Brooklyn pitchers as well as Vance, for they hung up the staff record of the season in holding the Chicago club to one run, Hack Wilson's forty-eighth homer, in three full games. Ray Phelps and Adolfo Luque each turned in a shutout before Vance's 2-to-1 victory.

BROOKLYN'S CLEAN SWEEP in the three-game series with the Cubs, completely changing the complexion of the pennant fight, marked one of baseball's queer form reversals, as prior to that series the Robins had beaten the Bruins only five times in 19 meetings. The sweep extended the Robins' string to seven straight wins in the September home drive that has put them back in the flag running again after they appeared to have been put hopelessly out of it by an August slump in which they lost 15 out of 18 consecutive games.

In contrast to the drive of the Robins, and the even more sensational rush of the Cardinals, who have lost only three of their last 21 games, the Cubs fell into one of their worst slumps of the season just when the situation called for their best work for the protection of their pennant lead. The McCarthys have lost eight of their last 11 games. The dropping of the final Brooklyn game marked their fourth straight defeat, this being only the second time this season they have lost four in a row. The Reds beat them in a double-header on July 6 and in single games on July 7 and 8.

WHILE GETTING A tryout with the Giants in the spring, Len Shires said he wanted to be like his older brother, Arthur the Great. He surely has succeeded in one respect, judging from reports of Tuesday's game (the sixth) in the play-off series between the Johnstown and Clarksburg clubs for the championship of the Middle Atlantic League. One of Shires' plays at second base for Clarksburg

CARDS, ROBINS WIN, GAIN

SINGER KAYO SPURS ON JIMMY

NEW YORK, Sept. 12.—(INS.)—Jimmy McLarnin wants to be welterweight champion.

The 140-pounder who knocked out Al Singer in the third round at the Yankee Stadium last night said in his dressing room, while Mayor Walker and other notables crowded around, that he intended to ask his manager, (Pop) Foster, to match him with Freeman, the new welter king.

"I intend to go after the welterweight title," said Jimmy, "I don't mind fighting bigger men and I think I have a chance against them."

Just then Singer entered and said to the boy who knocked him cold:

"You paralyzed me. I never was hit so hard in my life. You're a great fighter, Jimmy."

And as Al hung his head momentarily, McLarnin, in the finest way imaginable, said:

"You're a great little champion, Al. I'm sorry I had to beat you. You'll be a great champion for a long while and I'll always root for you to have lots of luck."

MAYOR WALKER PLEASED

Mayor Walker then said:

"Jimmy, you gave me a thrill; a real thrill."

"I'm happy about that, sir," said Jimmy, coloring to the roots of his hair.

And then Jimmy talked shop.

"Gee, I thought I had knocked him out that time I did the handspring. I always punctuate one of my victories with a cartwheel, for I thought Mr. McAvoy had counted 10. I shouldn't have forgotten I was so excited, but you know I love to win.

"When Al got up he almost clipped me before I could come out of the cartwheel. It was funny and not so funny if he had nailed me and knocked me out."

EARN $33,425 EACH

Singer and McLarnin each earned about $33,425 for their eight minutes of battling.

Some 27,000 spectators paid $152,000 gross, which, with taxes removed, made the net gate about $133,700.

Singer, who weighed 135½ pounds against 140 for his opponent, held his own in the first two rounds, outboxing and outhitting McLarnin in the first and being on the short end of a comparatively tame second round. A left hook spilled him in the third, and it was then that McLarnin, thinking he had scored a perfect hit, began turning cartwheels. Singer got up groggy at nine, and it was only a matter of going through the motions to spill him for keeps with another left.

CANZONERI, LOMSKI LOSE

CHICAGO, Sept. 12.—(AP.)—Billy Petrolle, the old Fargo Express, ripped a gaping hole in the lightweight championship situation last night by defeating Tony Canzoneri, of New York, challenger for the title, in a 10-round battle in the Chicago Stadium.

The battle was fought as a benefit for Patricia Harmon, the 3-year-old daughter of the late builder of the $7,000,000 Stadium, Paddy Harmon, who was penniless at the time of his recent tragic death. The contest drew approximately $46,000, with a profit of $10,000 going into a trust fund for the little girl.

Petrolle climaxed his sensational comeback to the ring warfare by decisively defeating his New York rival in six of the 10 rounds. He everlastingly tore into Canzoneri, ripping left hooks to the body and head, and had him pretty well damaged at the end of the engagement.

King Levinsky, a terrific hitting light-heavyweight, of Chicago, added to the surprise of the night by knocking out Leo Lomski, the Aberdeen (Wash.) Assassin, in the fifth round of their scheduled 10-rounder. Lomski, once regarded as challenger for the light-heavyweight championship, was knocked down 12 times. He hit the canvas six times in the first round, three in the second, and was again floored three times in the fifth.

BRUINS LEAD RIVALS BY HALF GAME

Associated Press.

St. Louis and Brooklyn again were triumphant yesterday in the National League race and placed themselves only a half game behind the leading Cubs. The Robins made a clean sweep of their three-game series with Chicago as Dazzy Vance turned in a third successive five-hit performance to give Brooklyn a 2-to-1 victory. The Cards, with Chick Hafey's first-inning home run as the deciding factor, again defeated the Giants, 5 to 4.

CUBS IN PHILLY

As the Cubs moved today to the safer regions of Philadelphia and the Giants and Cards remained in New York for a final clash, the race shaped up this way:

Club.	Won.	Lost.	Pct.	Games Behind.	Games to Play.
Chicago	80	59	.576	...	15
St. Louis	79	59	.572	½	16
Brooklyn	80	60	.571	½	14
New York	77	62	.554	3	15

If the leaders win or lose today their standing will read this way:

	Win	Lose
Chicago	.579	.571
St. Louis	.576	.568
Brooklyn	.575	.567
New York	.557	.559

Vance fanned 13 Cubs. Hack Wilson's forty-eighth home run of the season, a clout over the right field wall in the seventh inning, gave the Cubs their first run of the series. In the first inning Glenn Wright smashed the ball into the left field bleachers after Herman had walked to give the Robins a head start that Chicago never overcame. Guy Bush, who allowed Brooklyn only eight hits in seven innings, was the victim.

HAFEY GETS HOMER

After Adams had singled and Frisch had walked in the opening inning, Hafey, of the Cards, made a home run. The Giants overcame that lead in the fifth inning, and made another comeback in the seventh, but they failed in their third attempt after the Cards had scored their fifth run, leaving the bases filled when the game ended. Walker pitched for the Giants.

Pittsburgh's Pirates placed themselves 7½ games behind first place by winning a tight game from the Boston Braves, 5 to 2, while the humble Phillies made it a clean sweep against Cincinnati by slugging out a final 15 to 7 victory.

The Philadelphia Athletics, leaders of the American League, had a day of idleness and a half game was presented to them by their rivals from Washington and New York. The second place Senators dropped a second straight encounter to the St. Louis Browns as Walter Stewart kept their blows from doing serious damage while the Browns piled up four runs in the sixth inning.

YANKEES DROP TWO

New York's Yankees all but dropped out of the race as the Cleveland Indians turned on them after two beatings and hammered out a 9-to-5 victory, behind the steady pitching of Clint Brown. The best the Yankees can do now is to tie Philadelphia.

Ted Lyons, veteran Chicago hurler, went 12 innings in the remaining game to win his twenty-first victory of the season, defeating the Boston Red Sox, 4 to 3.

PANTHERS FIGHT FOR BERTHS

CAMP HAMILTON, WINDBER, Pa., Sept. 12.—Mike Milligan, Aliquippa's young summertime policeman, has answered the challenge of sophomore Francis Siegel and is playing a whale of a game at right guard for the Pitt Panthers in daily scrimmage.

Coach Jock Sutherland is glad to see the spirited fight for line positions to balance up the battle for backfield berths, as it is bringing out the best in the whole squad.

Tomorrow winds up the first two weeks of practice and while there are two positions still wide open, the line is beginning to take shape. Siegel has made the strongest bid for a position and if he fails to break in, there will be no sophomore among the forwards.

Hart Morris looks fairly certain of a guard position and Chuck Tully and Jess Quatse have the call at the tackles for the time being. At the ends are MacMurdo and Collins. And there never has been any doubt about Ralph Daugherty at center.

In the backfield, both the left half and fullback positions are much in doubt, with Bill Walinchus, the veteran, trying to keep sophomores Heller, Brown and Reider out of the halfback position, and John Luck, a sophomore, fighting against two veteran fullbacks, Jimmy Clark and Franklin Hood.

In the meantime the Freshmen are going to Pittsburgh tomorrow and that will give more work to the many candidates for Varsity positions as they will then scrimmage among themselves.

Parson Beats Par On Western Course

P. J. Persching equaled par of 42 on the Western miniature golf course during the past week and par was beaten by George Parson with a 38. Among the women players, Miss L. A. Bailey was low with a 51, and Mrs. Mamie Geyer turned in a 52. Low scorers play off each Monday for prizes.

Bucs Eager to Begin Giant Series Tomorrow

By CHARLES J. DOYLE,
Staff Correspondent.

BOSTON, Sept. 12.—Fascinated though they be by the great flag fight in their own circuit, the Pirates today fell to thinking about themselves long enough to come up with something interesting.

"We're only four and one-half games behind those Giants and we're all set to take them on tomorrow," exclaimed one of the exuberant Pittsburghers who still has visions of enough World Series cash to put a few leaves in the larder this winter.

And the Pirate spoke the truth. The Freebooters invade the Polo Grounds, three games being scheduled. A cleanup of the series, or even two out of three, would make things quite thrilling for the Buccos and they are going to mix with the Giants after the fashion of an "everything to gain and nothing to lose" team.

Managers Jewel Ens appears to think the Men of McGraw are just about out of the flag chase. The Giants booted any number of opportunities to get up with the leaders, their lamentable slab staff being unequal to the big task that fell upon it.

BUCS TRIP TRIBE

The collapse of the Chicago attack in the face of Uncle Robbie's right hand pitchers sent the prestige of the Bruins down further than it has been for some time, but there is a feeling that the Cubs will fight their way out of this jam just as they have out of others. Meantime, the stick of the Robins is running high while the Cardinals, playing the best ball in the National League for the past couple of weeks, have many suporters who expect them to climax their drive by winning the flag.

Defeating the Braves, 5 to 2, yesterday, the Pirates said a season's farewell to cultured Boston this afternoon.

BRAME BEATS BRAVES

Brame outsmarted the Braves yesterday as he pitched the Pirates to a 5-to-2 victory in the second game of the series. The Buccos were outhit, but Ervin was resourceful with runners on the sacks.

Wee Willie Sherdel made many of the Pittsburgh hitters look bad, but the Buccos picked up a couple of lucky tallies in the second round and were not headed off. Dick Bartell batted hard and timely.

W. & J. WELL FORTIFIED FOR GRID WARS

HEFTY SQUAD DELIGHTS COACHES

By JESS CARVER,
Staff Correspondent.

WASHINGTON, Pa., Sept. 12.—It will do no harm to hop on the W. & J. football bandwagon as the 1930 collegiate gridiron parade gets rollin and to stick on until the last touchdown is recorded and the last alibi accounted for.

Had the Presidents undergone a disastrous campaign last year I could employ the old "Phoenix rising from the ashes" simile to perfection in previewing the Red and Black season, but inasmuch as Wash-Jeff lost only two ball games last year, one of them to the strongest eleven in the East and held two other powerful foes even, we will have to have the Phoenix fluttering up from glowing embers and preparing to fan them into a blaze that will reawaken the flames of W. & J. football fire of yore. This may not all come true, but it surely sounds nice.

Whether it is due to the infectious, business-like and confident attitude of the coaching staff, Bill Amos, Pete Henry and Glen Wilde, or not, an air of determination and confidence pervades the local quarters. On paper, the team does not stack up as promising to be a great deal stronger than that of a season ago, but unless this guess goes all awry, the Presidents are set to go.

WEALTH OF BACKS

The Wash-Jeff coaches are fortunate in having a dozen and one backfield men, any one of whom may suddenly find himself and develope into a shining light. At present, all positions are open. Morry Rush had not reported as this article was composed, but he was due in to take his old halfback post. Stewie Wilson, the big fullback of a year ago, is on hand and in fine form, and facing a stubborn battle with Kaiser for the starting post. Kaiser has come along as a kicker and passer and will furnish Wilson with the stiffest of opposition—in fact, there is very little to choose between the men at this time.

Rush, if he goes like he can go, and has gone in the past, is about the only back certain of his position.

Johnny Butler is first choice for quarterback, where he performed last year. Port, a former Kiski star, and Shaffer, who prepped at Greensburg High, were to be groomed to understudy Butler, but have shown such promise and such dash and ambition that Butler is finding it all he can do to hold onto his job. Competition such as this never hurt any ball club.

It's a merry old battle for the other halfback position, and will be for Rush's post, too, if Morry should be the least bit lax in his work. Smith, Purjanic, Hart, Rometo, Armstrong (a speedy one), Zagray and Umberger, these seven are all hoping to hear the first whistle of the year in the starting backfield. Armstrong, fast and elusive, and Smith, another speed boy, both of whom have had some experience, appear to be first in line. Umberger, a big chap, may also see service at fullback.

As was pointed out before, these 13 backs all have a chance. Kaiser has been kicking and passing better than Wilson, which helps offset the latter's ability on the defense, where he leaves little to be desired.

STRONG AT ENDS

Wally Harris and McNeil should be able to handle the end posts and hold their own against any set of wingmen in the district. Harris weighs about 180 and McNeil the same. Both have been tested under fire, and found not wanting. Stuart, Gardner, Barkell, Irwin, Johnson and Corbett form a promising clique of reservists, Irwin leading the others in that he has had some varsity experience.

Capt. Walter Levine, a fine tackle, is the bulwark of the line and is certain to stay in there. He played a whale of a game a year ago, is big and strong and can give and take. In his case, it is more blessed to give than to receive.

Kelly is leading in the fight for the other tackle job, hard pressed by Symons, Sayenga, Burns, and possibly Trapuzzano, who is more fitted for a guard, fill out the tackle quota.

Cochrane, Demas, Saul Lipman, originally a center, Trapuzzano, Newby, Menegas and Thompson are guard candidates. Demas and Cochrane, veterans, are expected to get the call. Lipman, who alternated at center last year, has been used in the adjoining position some and looks o. k. His experience on the defense will make him a first line reservist, and a valuable one.

Rigney wins first shout at center, with Updegraff carefully groomed for a substitute. Hadley, a sophomore with 182 pounds of beef clinging to his frame, is another of those chaps who may come along with a zip and break into the limelight.

Wilson, when he's in there, will do most of the kicking. Being a southpaw, he fits into the forward passing attack very well. Butler can pass, and so can Smith. Kaiser, possibly, is the best punter on the squad.

NO LACK OF WEIGHT

A forward wall having for its ends McNeil and Harris; for its tackles Capt. Levine and Kelly; for its guards Cochrane and Demas and Rigney at center would average about 180 pounds. A backfield composed of Butler, Ruth, Smith and Wilson would average about 182. Butler and Wilson's better-than-195 pounds apiece keeping the figure high. That would be a team average of about 181, which is not bad at all. This lineup, understand, is not certain by any means; it merely presents the weight possibilities of the Prexy squad.

Graduate Manager Bill Theurer has adopted some nifty uniforms. The trousers are black, with jerseys of red linen and knitted black shoulders and arms. The numerals are white, and large enough to see from a dozen blocks away. Helmets will be either white or black, as the occasion demands.

Bethany comes here to open the season September 27. The following Saturday, Westminster signalizes its return to the local schedule. Wittenberg will be met in Springfield, O., the next week, and Temple entertains the Presidents in Philadelphia on October 18. On October 25, Lafayette will be played in the Public Auditorium in Atlantic City in an indoor night game, somewhat of an innovation. November 1 is open. Bucknell and W. & J. will clash in the Stadium in Pittsburgh on November 15. November 22, the locals are in Morgantown to meet the Mountaineers and the season closes with the annual classic with Carnegie Tech in Pittsburgh on November 29.

Wash.-Jeff is off Pitt's schedule for the season, which removes from the tri-state gridiron card one of its most mellow and tasty morsels. There is no real cause for alarm, however, for they'll be back on again next year.

Bill Amos is head coach and in full charge. Pete Henry has moved up from freshmen mentor to be Bill's assistant, and Glen (Woofty) Wild is handling the frosh.

TAGGART, PIAI SUSPENDED

PHILADELPHIA, Sept. 12.—(AP.)—The State Athletic Commission yesterday announced the indefinite suspension of Lew Moskowitz, boxer, of New York; Red Jaderberg, boxer, and Thomas Moore, second, both of Jamestown, N. Y.; Gerald Morgan, boxer, of Dennison, O.; Chuck Taggart, boxer, Butler, Pa.; K. O. Husk, boxer, Akron, O., and Johnny Piai, boxer, Greenville, Pa.

No reasons were given for the suspensions.

Nick Altrock Says:

ST. LOUIS, Sept. 12.—The way those Cubs are wobbling will cost Wrigley a lot of money this year. Nowadays the Chicago fans are taking aspirin instead of chewing gum. If they split the remaining games in two and called four and a half innings a full contest, those Cub pitchers might win the first half of a double-header, but that's all. The Giants have the best infield in the business, but I don't think they'll land. The trouble is that their opponents' baseshits all go into the outfield. Speaking of pitching, Grove of the A's., is sailing in high this year. When they face Lefty in a World Series, the National League will be lucky to get one loud foul tick.

MRS. CAMPBELL WINS WEST PENN TITLE

STANTON STAR COPS GOLF FINAL, 4-3

By VERN SWARTSFAGER.

Mrs Frank E Campbell's steady, unfaltering climb to the golfing heights that are bathed in the sunshine of links achievement was climaxed fittingly today when the Stanton Heights Golf Club's fair representative defeated Miss Betty Abernathy, of Oakmont, 4 and 3, in the 18-hole final of the annual title tournament of the Women's Golf Association of Western Pennsylvania at the Westworeland Country Club.

Mrs. Campbell, one of the most popular performers in local women's golf, emerged from comparative obscurity as a golfer only a few seasons ago. She fitted herself to rule as queen by winning a couple of Stanton Heights invitation tourneys, but never, until today, had she emerged victorious in a major competition.

Miss Abernathy, too, is regarded as a "comer" in local links circles. Each season she has grown more formidable as a stumbling block in the path of title aspirants, and it appears that it will be only a matter of time until the young Oakmonter achieves the heights that Mrs. Campbell gained today.

BETTY SETS EARLY PACE

Filled with confidence radiated by a beribboned horseshoe tied to her caddiebag, Betty started the title match with something of a bang by winning both the first and second holes from her Stanton Heights rival. The third hole was halved in 4s, but at the fourth Miss Abernathy started pressing her shots, and Mrs. Campbell started a great rally that was not checked until the contestants had rounded the turn and started home. Victories at the fourth and fifth holes enabled the new queen of the West Penn links to square the match, and after the sixth and seventh were halved in par, she annexed the eighth and ninth to stand 2 up at the turn.

LONG PUTT ENDS DUEL

Starting home, Mrs. Campbell added to her advantage by winning the tenth with a 5 to Betty's 6, but Miss Abernathy gave her supporters new hope when she took advantage of a topped second shot by the Stanton star and won the eleventh to stand 2 down. The winning of this hole, however, was Miss Abernathy's last victory gesture, for Mrs. Campbell did not yield another hole. A victory at the twelfth, a halve at the thirteenth and another win at the fourteenth left Mrs. Campbell dormie 4, and she ended the duel by getting down a long putt for a halve in 5 at the fifteenth. The cards:

Mrs. Campbell—
Out ..... 5x4 544 645—xx
Miss Abernathy—
Out ..... 454 654 656—45
Mrs Campbell—
In 565 645
Miss Abernathy—
In 656 655

One fine wood shot after another contributed much to Mrs. Campbell's victory, and persistent pressing, apparently the result of nervousness, contributed much to Miss Abernathy's downfall.

J. Denny St. Clair, Kiski star, will be unable to defend his state Sons of the American Revolution championship at the Wildwood Country Club on Monday, it has been learned, and so a new champion for that society is anticipated. An injury keeps Denny from fighting to retain the coveted Franklin Blackstone Low Gross Trophy.

Four flights, according to handicap, are to play Monday for the net and gross prizes, and putting and driving contest awards. A bridge party will be held for the women who attend, and Mrs. W. J. Askin, Jr., wife of the president of the state society, will be in charge of that part of the tourney.

The Samuel M. Parks, senior and junior, kept the Highland Country Club fathers' and sons' championship by defeating the Joseph R. Roystons, senior and junior, scoring a best ball of 76 against their opponents' 78.

The women's city championship, which was to have started at the Schenley Park municipal links on Monday of next week, has been postponed a day and will not open until Tuesday.

MY 50 YEARS IN BASEBALL

by CONNIE MACK, MANAGER OF WORLD CHAMPION PHILADELPHIA ATHLETICS

INSTALLMENT NO. 5.

Connie Mack

The busy little city of Meriden, Conn., was well pleased with the efforts of its representative ball team in 1884, which marked the first year of the Connecticut State League.

We all hustled and pleased Meriden fans with our whole-hearted efforts. We had a tense fight with Waterbury for the pennant, but had to be content with second place.

Waterbury had for its leading points pair Lovett and Con Daley, who became conspicuous in the major leagues afterward. The Connecticut State League was a feeding station for the fast set right from its infancy and continued to advance players to it as long as it existed.

My first year on the professional field was rosy. We drew up to all expectations and every player received his salary in full, which was by no means always the case at that time. In those days baseball was a risk and many a trusting young man left his home high in hopes after signing a contract calling for a good salary only to see the league split on the rocks after the July 4 doubleheader, and he often had to send for carfare to get back home, for salaries would not be paid.

PRESENTED WATCH

On the last day of the Meriden season, which ran nearly to October, I was presented a gold watch that was my most prized possession for many years. Unfortunately, it was stolen out of my locker in the clubhouse after I advanced to the National League. I would give 10 times its value to get it back.

In the Connecticut State League at the time there was no reserve clause in contracts and a player was free to sign when he pleased after finishing the term in his contract. In the last weeks of the league race, I received several offers for 1885, but eventually signed to play with the Hartford (Conn.) team of the same league at a salary of $125 a month, which was $35 more than Meriden paid me. I thought that was quite a promotion, and it certainly was.

The off-season following the 1884 race was the first in my baseball career that I did not work. The big shoe factory had closed down and there was no employment available except the rankest drudgery, so I decided to indulge myself in the luxury of a workless winter.

LOAFS THROUGH WINTER

I had full use of my money. As my father had prospered in his small way, there was no necessity for me to send anything regularly home. So out of my $90 a month at Meriden I was able to put enough aside to make a winter loaf possible.

Nevertheless, it was a quiet winter. There was no Great White Way in a New England town of 500 in the winter of 1884-85. I skated on Lake Lasnaway, attended our rural little affairs and played Whist. Once or twice that off-season I visited Boston, the Paris of every New Englander's eye.

This reminded me of an experience two or three years before, when I made my first trip to St. Botolph's town. I then was working in a shoe factory and playing for East Brookfield. For a long time I had been waiting for a chance to be a member of the small and exclusive set among the younger element of East Brookfield who could boast of having pushed his way through the thronged thoroughfares of this roaring metropolis located fully 50 long miles away. George M. Cohan was scrupulously correct in his geography when he called his East Brookfield play "Fifty Miles From Boston."

What quickened my desire to escape from the hinterland to see the magnificance of the great city was innocently caused by a traveling man, or "drummer," as he was more often called then. One came in East Brookfield a short time before who was my idea of Berry Wall of the day. He wore a checked suit of many horse-power rating, judging from the din it created, a high linen collar and a tie redder than many noses I have seen in my day.

BUYING A HAT

But the clean-up wallop of his sartorial display was a derby with a high crown. I never had seen one before. We had derbies in those days, but the crowns were low, very low, and almost could kiss the brim. Joe Weber and Lew Fields wore these dachshund derbies on the stage many years afterward, and they always were good for laughs on their entrance.

I wore a typical Joe Weber, but silently vowed that as soon as I reached Boston I would seek out a presentable looking hat shop and leave some Meriden money for a high crown derby that would elevate my social status in East Brookfield over night.

So to Boston. I rambled through the twisting thoroughfares, drinking in the sights and keeping a part of an eye open for the proper kind of hat shop. I spotted one that answered my qualifications, for that particular vintage of derby was posted on a stand in the window. I walked inside and a man with mutton-chop whiskers approached me washing his hands before him without soap or water. You know what I mean. I have seen such a type in plays since, but I saw him in real life 'then.

I made known my wants and Mutton Chops soon came back with an armfull. He had one that fitted and I was asked to look at the effect in a mirror. There I stood, a gangling of 6 feet 2 inches all the taller because of the high crown. My trousers ended about six inches above the shoes and I certainly looked like some character in a rube drama.

LOSES HIS NERVE

Reason finally overthrew style. I began to reflect that my appearance in front of the East Brookfield postoffice with such a daring derby, that accentuated my height, would draw the banter of the town wits. My sharp eyes, too, detected a smile over the face of Mutton Chops that he vainly tried to strangle. That was enough.

"I don't believe that suits," I averred with all the dignity I could muster, "and I wish you would show me something in a low crown."

I had a most delightful time in Boston and when I jumped off the train at East Brookfield the next evening my head was crowned with a new derby of the most distinctive Joe Weber model.

THOMAS UPSETS DOPE, DEFEATS DATTO

JOEY SURVIVES KNOCKDOWNS TO WIN

By HARRY KECK

He clinched after the bout [illegible] he had treated his right hand [illegible] the second round, but he showed no signs of distress during the bout [illegible] outlasted this contender.

DATTO DOWN AT START

Thomas, who scored 129 pounds against 127 for Datto, started off in a crouched manner in the opening [illegible] Leading off his first right [illegible] the head [illegible] stepped in and rolled [illegible] the center [illegible] the ring back [illegible] the ropes and then as they came together [illegible] again dropped Datto with another left. Datto got up with a cut and blood was trickling from a cut in his right [illegible]. He [illegible] land with some more lights on Thomas' [illegible] and they were [illegible] around his neck.

Early in the second round Datto cocked his right and sent it home to the jaw and Thomas went down to take a count of nine on one knee in middle. He fought back after getting up only to slip down and take a rest again without a count. He pecked away with lefts to the [illegible] to coolly measured him for another right and Thomas took a second count of nine, this time on both knees. He went down into the ropes for no count and then was sent sprawling with another right but got up again without a count and lasted through to the bell.

JOEY RALLIES TO WIN

It seemed that all Datto had to do then was to walk out and measure Thomas for a finishing punch in the third round but Thomas again took the play away from him by his smart boxing and Datto never again was in the fight until he staged a desperate rally in the last round, to carry that session with a series of left hooks as Thomas tired and beginning to weaken coasted home certain of the award.

Datto was bleeding from the nose in the fifth round and was a mark for Thomas cutting left hand at all times and he suffered a humiliating defeat for so highly-touted a boxer. It is obvious that he is very much overrated except in the matter of his

MALCO DEFEATS ROSE IN TUBE CITY GO

[illegible] Malco, flagged [illegible] was awarded the decision over Billy Rose of Cincinnati last night in the main bout of Jimmy McKain's first indoor boxing show of the season at the Palisades of McKeesport, taking the votes of both Judges Jock Simco and Freddie Lux of McKeesport while Referee Red Robinson thought that Rose had an edge over the [illegible] bout.

TENTH DECIDES ISSUE

It was Malco's aerial work in the [illegible] that swayed the [illegible] in his favor as the fighters were practically even [illegible] the first [illegible] got under way.

Malco started off fine and [illegible] the first two rounds by his [illegible] body pounding. However in the start of the third Rose came back and from then until the [illegible] kept a nasty left jab in Tommy's face and stepped away out in front. He displayed keen boxing ability and Malco found it anything but an easy task to land a solid blow.

In the sixth session, the Cincinnati fighter opened a cut under Malco's left eye. Tommy came back with the start of the seventh and landed damaging body blows that began to turn the tide of the battle.

After taking the hardest blow of the fight a right to the jaw early in the round Malco proceeded to punish Rose all around the ring landing hard in the midsection with both right and left. He rattled Rose in the seventh, eighth and tenth while the ninth was declared even. Both boys were plenty tired when the final bell rang. Malco weighed 143, while Rose came in one pound heavier.

BEATTY VICTOR

In the eight-round semi-final Allen Beatty, McKeesport Negro welter, won the referee's decision over Jimmy McGraw of Martins Ferry. Beatty scored a knockdown in the third round after landing a hard right to the jaw. The bout was the best of the evening as far as action was concerned and both boys kept swinging hard in every round. Beatty weighed 146½, and McGraw tipped the beam at 148.

Marty Gornick of McKeesport, whose first professional bout was fought a little more than a week ago won all the way from Sol Lippo, former Philadelphia lightweight, in the second bout of six rounds. Gornick floored Lippo with a hard left hook to the jaw early in the fifth round. He weighed 138, while Lippo scaled 134½.

MESTRO STOPPED

Paul Rinsko of Monessen, weighing 166, scored a technical knockout over Kaly Mestro of Wilmerding, weight 160, in the third round of the opener. Mestro was floored for a count of eight in the second and Referee Robinson stopped the uneven battle 45 seconds after the third session got under way, when Mestro dropped to the canvas from a hard right to the jaw.

A fair-sized crowd attended.

brought a rebuke from Manager Greasy Neale. The youngster talked back and when Neale walked in from his post in left field there followed a war of words that resulted in Shires being ordered out of the game.

But a little order like that will never stop a Shires. Len is said to have taken a seat in the grandstand and razzed Neale until Greasy went after him again, the outcome being a free-for-all fight that was not quelled until the police took a hand. Shires was back at his position in the final game on Wednesday but strangely as Brother Art probably would put it, that did not save Clarksburg from losing the game and the series.

Frank Shields

ACCORDING TO INFORMATION drifting in from the scene of the National singles tennis championship at Forest Hills, N. Y., a sport figure of international renown will enter the University of Pittsburgh this fall. He is none other than Frank Shields, strapping 19-year-old net star of New York, one of the foremost tennis players of the day. Word from the East is to the effect that unless he changes his mind the name of Francis X. Shields will be formally written into the roll of the freshman class at Pitt within a week or two. Even if he does not bring with him, in the event of his adhering to the present plan, the national tennis championship, in the competition for which he fought his way into the semi-final round by defeating Georges Mangin yesterday after losing the first two sets, Shields will carry here a record of many other notable achievements on the courts. This summer he even defeated the great Bill Tilden, who did not lose even a single set in the present tournament until Johnny Van Ryn took one from him yesterday, and on Wednesday Frank got into the headlines again by eliminating Wilmer Allison, conqueror of Henri Cochet. The report goes further that if Shields comes to Pitt he may be accompanied by another star of the nets in the person of Sidney Wood. In addition to his tennis fame, Shields is said to be a fine football prospect, playing end.

UNLESS it were a three-cornered tie, the National League's scorching pennant race could hardly be any closer than it is today, with only half a game, or five percentage points, between the first and third clubs. The Cubs are only half a game ahead of the Cards and Robins, only one point separates the latter two clubs and even the Giants in fourth place are still only three games from the top in spite of having lost two of their last three games with the Redbirds.

A shift in the schedule today may give the Cubs a chance to take a new toehold, as they go to Philadelphia to open a four-game series with the tailenders while the Cards journey in New York for one game more with the Giants, and the Robins take on the Reds, Cincinnati, which put the Cardinals in the fight by losing 19 out of 22 games to them this year, has broken even with Brooklyn in 18 games to date, and defeated the Robins in their last five encounters.

THE OLD FISTIC dope that a good big man is better than a good little man goes for the lighter classes more than for the heavier ones. A few pounds may not make much difference where a fight between big men is concerned, but such a margin counts heavily where the principals are little fellows. Jimmy McLarnin demonstrated that again in New York last night when he knocked out Al Singer, lightweight champion, in the third round.

It was hard to understand from the first why Singer ever made such a match. He had nothing to gain even in event of a victory, and it appeared improbable that he would be able to stand up for long against a foe at least as good as himself in boxing ability and hitting power and heavier into the bargain, a man who is generally conceded to be the real champion of his class even though another holds the title.

Air Industry, Over Hurdles, Will Prosper

By B. C. FORBES

THE AIRCRAFT industry is emerging from the woods. The coming year should see surviving companies on a sound basis.

More than three times as many passengers were carried by air last year as in 1928. This year's total will mark another very notable increase.

AVIATION HAS duplicated the performance of almost all new industries. Quite suddenly a new industry fires the imagination of the public. Companies are hurriedly formed, some by substantial interests, many by unscrupulous promoters. Capital is readily raised, not on actual results, but on rosy promises. Shares are boomed.

Mr. Forbes

Overproduction ensues. Myriads of irresponsible promotions get into trouble. Most of them disappear, leaving nothing but losses behind. Legitimate enterprises suffer severely because of overproduction and price cutting. Their shares sink.

Consolidations follow. The big companies become bigger. The stronger ones increase their grip on the industry. But even the best of them undergo trying times. The process of winnowing wheat from chaff continues, usually for quite a period.

Then the industry, having reached bedrock, starts to climb soundly.

AVIATION HAS almost completed this customary course. A new and better era is about ready to dawn.

F. G. COBURN, president of the Aviation Corporation, recognized authority, gives me a penetrating analysis of conditions and prospects.

"The aviation industry and the men in it," he declares, "have no reason to feel depressed. True, large inventories of new and used planes and engines hang over the market, but there are lots of planes in service wearing out and the surplus inventory is being absorbed. There will be an aircraft market perhaps much sooner than many anticipate.

"The demand for air accommodation was greater this spring than operators could meet. But the tariffs were so much reduced that the operators could not afford to continue, so they increased tariffs this summer. Still the public continued to use the planes. The tariffs will work their way higher. The operators must find the rate which the traveling public will pay and which will pay the operators. From that point there will be a steady decline in tariffs, through that economic pressure which works on all industries to increase quantity and quality concurrently with a reduction in cost to the user.

"The operators' next important problem is to find equipment that can be operated economically. None of the equipment now available is adequate in point of efficiency and economy. There exists a great need for larger, dependable engines.

"CONDITIONS ARE changing rapidly. One important influence is the McNary-Watres air mail bill, which enables the Postoffice Department to put air mail and first-class mail on passenger planes. In effect, this is a subsidy to help the operators over this period of development of traffic and of suitable equipment for handling it. The Postmaster General and the Department of Commerce are among the aviation industry's best friends.

"Many people thought that the automotive industry and the transportation industry would naturally turn to aviation. But the design and construction of aircraft are more like the design and construction of ships than of automotive equipment; the aircraft designer has to worry about the relationship between the center of gravity and the center of upward pressure, and about stability and airworthiness. Likewise, air commerce has problems similar to those of water-borne commerce. Air-borne commerce should be regulated by the Federal Government, not by the individual states.

"It is a question whether private capital can afford to own and develop airports. It is easier, however, to do business with the privately-owned airports because the business methods of the municipally-owned airports are unwieldy and sometimes clogged up by local politics.

"THE BOOM PERIOD is over, but the industry need not feel depressed. It has great problems to solve, but it knows those problems and is settling down to the task of solving them. The industry has a great future—and it has a fascination that will force the men that are in it to develop it."

Since I—coward—overcame my fears and went up, I am more than ever convinced that flying will rapidly enter much more freely into daily life in this country.

HOW'S BUSINESS?

ACTUAL FACTS ON CONDITIONS TODAY

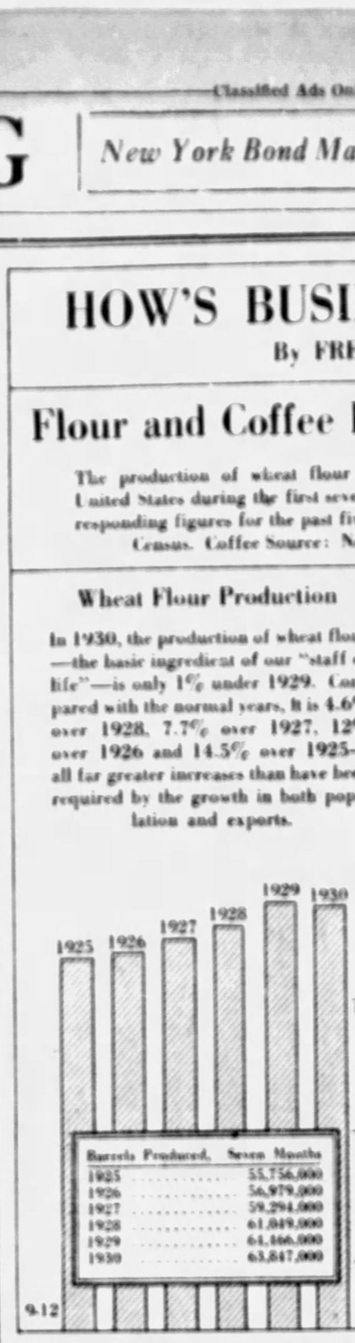
By FRELING FOSTER

Flour and Coffee Having Very Good Year

The production of wheat flour and the importation of coffee in the United States during the first seven months of 1930 are compared with the corresponding figures for the past five years. Flour Source: U. S. Bureau of the Census. Coffee Source: New York Coffee and Sugar Exchange.

Wheat Flour Production

In 1930, the production of wheat flour—the basic ingredient of our "staff of life"—is only 1% under 1929. Compared with the normal years, it is 4.6% over 1928, 7.7% over 1927, 12% over 1926 and 14.5% over 1925—all far greater increases than have been required by the growth in both population and exports.



Coffee Imports

The importation of coffee—another indispensible item of human consumption—seems to enjoy a constant growth far exceeding the increase in population. 1930 imports are 6.9% higher than 1929, and 13.1% higher than the five-year average from 1925 through 1929. This is, apparently, another "depression proof" industry.

MARKET TURNS HIGHER AFTER DECLINE

Bulls Rally Their Forces To Tilt Stocks Upward For Week-End Closing

NEW YORK, Sept. 12 (AP.)—Bulls rallied their forces to give the stock market an upward tilt at the end of the week today, as they have done for the last three weeks.

Professional operations for the advance ranged over the utilities and embraced a wide the merchandise, food and miscellaneous. Although participation which has been ceased but the stock market has been meager enough professionals believe that the market must close the week with an upward tendency of speculative confidence will weaken before Monday.

The market was inclined to sag for a time in the morning but the trend was turned by midday. American Water Works, American Power and Light, National Power and Light, Electric Power and Light, Consolidated Gas, Public Lighting, National Biscuit, Coca-Cola, United States Steel, Westinghouse Electric, McKeesport Tin Plate, Gillette, Grand Union, F. W. Woolworth, International Harvester, Montgomery Ward, Allied Chemical and Dye, Standard Brands and Kroger Grocery gained about 1 to 2 points. International Telephone, Curtiss Wright, Publishing, Vanadium, Auto Stroppers and Eastman advanced about 2 to 5. Higher rails were Interstate Rapid Transit, Business Machines and Western Union. Steel up 6 and more each case, however, dropped a few points and Sears Roebuck was under pressure.

BERGER RUMORED

Along with the move in the utilities was heard considerable gossip in brokerage circles about a big merger being arranged by the Electric Bond and Share interests. This old rumor has been brushed off and trotted out often that it doesn't make much impression any more, but still Wall street would not be surprised if the Bond and Share properties were eventually unified.

The merchandising shares were helped by the August report of Great Atlantic and Pacific showing a new high record, about 4½ per cent over August of 1929, and the statement of the management that all indices led it to look for continued improvement during the autumn and winter. Sears Roebuck's report for the ninth period of its 13-month calendar year, however, showed a drop of 14 per cent from last year. A considerable number of merchandising organizations however are reporting definite improvement and several shares having strong market sponsorship were advanced substantially.

NEWS INCONCLUSIVE

On the whole, the day's news was inconclusive against further improvement in steel scrap prices, price reductions in black and galvanized steel sheets were announced by Chicago jobbers. Balancing recent retail gasoline price cuts, was further firmness in wholesale gasoline at Chicago. In the non-ferrous metals, August copper statistics were again unsatisfactory showing further piling up of refiners stocks. Although large producers are still asking 11 cents a pound few sales over 10¾ cents have been made lately. Silver prices, however, were a little firmer.

Further heaviness of the wheat market was used as a basis for further selling of the farm implements, and Case broke several points during the morning momentarily unsettling the entire list.

Money continued plentiful as funds piled up in the banks in preparation for the September 15 settlements. Call money officially renewed at 2½ per cent, but was soon being offered outside at 1¾.

Kelly Springfield Hearing Delayed

Hearing before Vice Chancellor Fallon in Jersey City on the application of common stockholders for a receivership for the Kelly-Springfield Tire Company, scheduled for today, will not be held. The company is submitting additional data to the court, and a decision is likely to be announced either late this afternoon or tomorrow.

GRAIN MARKET

CHICAGO, Sept. 12.—Weakness of quotations at Liverpool forced Chicago wheat prices lower at the start of trading today. Liverpool prices were down sharply because Russia has renewed offers of cheap wheat. Prices here dropped to new lows for the season for the deferred deliveries on the break and the September delivery sold as low as 81c a bushel. Stop loss orders were uncovered on the way down. Buying against bids and on restoring orders checked the decline. General selling was on the corn with support lacking. Wheat broke sharply at the opening, initial sales being ⅛ to 1⅛ under yesterday's finish. Corn was also down at ½ to ⅝ lower than the final quotations yesterday.

At noon wheat was ⅛ to ¼c lower than the opening figures. Corn was ½ to 1⅛c down.

Stock Exchange Topics

Street Hears Eaton Group Seeking Control of Newton Steel

Chicago and North Western Railway will show earnings this year equal to about $4 a common share. This compares with net in 1929 after allowing for dividend requirements and participating provisions of preferred stock to $8.45 a common share. The road is in position now to take full advantage of any pick up in freight traffic having its maintenance of way outlay for the year well taken care of, its equipment in good shape and expenses generally thoroughly in hand.

August copper statistics coming to hand today were hailed with preliminary forecasts. Refined stocks instead of showing a small drop as had been expected in some quarters actually increased by 22,049 tons, setting a new peak for world stocks, but left stocks on the other hand were off about 8,000 tons, leaving a net increase in refined and blister stocks on hand of about 17,600 tons. August production in the United States increased by about 2,500 tons but smelter output was less by about 800 tons. Copper stocks took this discrepancy stocks and the actual metal market remained unchanged with prices virtually out of the market and custom smelters loading for 10¾, cents, the price quoted for some weeks past.

There is little question but that should the market discount the expected seasonal improvement to a further extent, American Can will rank with the leaders. It enjoys a high investment rating and over the last five years has paid out but 44 per cent of earnings in dividends. As the dominant enterprise in the canning industry it has enjoyed an uninterrupted record of growth with per share earnings of $8.02 in 1929, comparing with $6.86 in 1928 and $4.11 in 1927. Earnings in the current year are expected to approximate last year's showing despite the curtailment of crops caused by the drought. The company is expected to again declare an extra dividend of $1 per share, in addition to the regular $4 rate, which would bring a return of close to 4 per cent at present market valuations.

National Biscuit will undoubtedly continue to serve as pacemaker for the food group with the latter section in particular speculative favor at the moment. National Biscuit has recorded an impressive background of annual earnings betterment with 1929 profits of $21,422,357 comparing with $5,543,120 in 1920. The former figure is 20 per cent more than that of 1928 and 32 per cent above 1927 profits. The company has been especially liberal to stockholders with dividends ranging from 51 per cent of earnings to 84 per cent in 1929. The current dividends of $2.60 per share affords a yield of about 3½ per cent at prevailing levels.

Declining commodity prices this year eventually should be reflected in a better margin of profit by Woolworth, according to economists. The financial position of the company would permit it to acquire any distress merchandise which may come on the market. Such acquisitions often result in a larger profit margin when the goods finally are moved. The company's growth has been spectacular since 1912. In that year there were 643 stores, with working capital of $11,387,722, and net asset value of the common stock at $3,364,799. For 1929 Woolworth operated 1,825 stores, had working capital of $48,367,521 and net asset value of common stock was $157,630,000.

Radio Employment To Show Increase

WASHINGTON, Sept. 12.—It is expected that about 25,000 persons will be employed in the radio industry in Camden, N. J., by September 19, the date of the R. C. A. Victor radio celebration. There are about 18,000 employed at the present time.

General Electric, Westinghouse, Graybar, Victor and R. C. A. will turn out all radio equipment manufactured by them from Camden after September 19.

Sears, Roebuck & Co. Sales Decline 14%

CHICAGO, Sept. 12.—Sears, Roebuck and Company sales for the period August 14 to September 10 were $28,030,215, against $32,642,246 in the similar 1929 period, a decrease of 14.1 per cent.

Sales for nine months from January 2 to September 10 totaled $251,637,498, against $269,113,582 a year ago, a decrease of 6.5 per cent.

Auto Industry's Attitude More Optimistic

DETROIT, Sept. 12.—(AP.) For the first time since last spring, when it became definitely evident that the industrial depression was to be more than a passing wave of restraint, buying, leaders of the automobile industry are beginning to give out optimistic statements and supporting them with statistics seeming to justify their more hopeful tenor.

It is noteworthy that the increased retail demand reported by automobile executives is largely among the lower price classifications. Coincident with the increase in new car deliveries come reports that sales of used cars by dealers also have shown a slight increase in some sections. The increased distribution of used cars is cited as showing that the upward trend noted is not due entirely to price reductions recently announced.

Chief among the companies reporting improvement in retail distributing have been divisions of the General Motors Corporation, like Chevrolet and Oakland. Declaring that "inventories are practically depleted," W. A. Bires, vice president of the Oakland Motor Car Co., expressed the opinion that the business recession has been due largely to a "buyer's strike," and adds: "The tide evidently has turned and increased buying is bringing business back to normal."

New Models Presented

WITH ANNOUNCEMENT by the Packard Motor Car Company, of its new models, forecast some time ago with a price reduction on current production, there remains but one more new model in immediate prospect. When this is introduced it is probable that no more new models will come out until the national motor shows next January. So many new types have been brought out during the summer, however, that the automobile shows probably will present relatively few new models.

It is one of the characteristics of the motor car industry that it never stands still; it always presents or has in the making something new. One of the most recent innovations is the application of a Diesel motor to commercial truck and bus use. Sponsored by one of the industry's pioneers experiments have been conducted with a truck powered by a four-cylinder Diesel engine with results said to have been satisfactory in every respect. Using fuel oil costing four cents a gallon the truck has been driven with a load weighing 6,600 pounds from its factory in Michigan to New York at an average speed of 30 miles an hour and a total cost for fuel of less than two dollars. Plans for commercial development of the new motor have not been announced.

Diesel Engine Problems

ONE OG THE GREATEST difficulties automotive engineers have encountered in developing the Diesel principle to the point where it could be applied to other than stationary power plants has been that of reducing the engine's weight. The Diesel engine differs from the normal gasoline motor chiefly in the use of crude oil and the fact it requires no ignition system. The tremendous heat developed by compression causes the explosions in the combustion chamber.

The research laboratories of the automobile industry also are striving for lighter weight in the normal gasoline engine. One of the leading engineers in the industry predicts the development of a metal many times lighter and of greater strength than any now known to science. "Merely putting on a new shape of radiator cap or larger hub caps is not going to fool people any longer," he said. "There should be no reason why engineers today cannot build a motorcar that will weigh only two pounds for each horsepower developed."

MORE RESERVE CREDIT OUT

WASHINGTON, Sept. 12.—(AP.) The daily average volume of Federal Reserve Bank credit outstanding during the week ending September 10 as reported by the Federal Reserve banks was $1,029,000,000, an increase of $1,000,000 compared with the preceding week and a decrease of $406,000,000 compared with the corresponding week of 1929.

Combined resources and liabilities of the 12 Federal Reserve banks at the close of business yesterday were reported tonight by the Federal Reserve Board as follows:

New York Bank Rate Unchanged

NEW YORK, Sept. 12.—Following the meeting of New York Federal Reserve Bank directors no announcement was made regarding the rediscount rate, which is 5½ per cent.

DAILY TRUE STORY

"Jerrold Atkinson, M. D."

It looked good to him—Jerrold—that brand new brass sign on the door of the neat little house he had leased in Merewold.

"Now for a share of these wealthy people as patients," Jerrold mused, "and I'll soon be sitting pretty."

Merewold was an ideal exclusive colony.

There seemed to be no middle class. Either you lived above the station and were extremely wealthy or you lived below the station and were nobody at all, except a shifty tradesman or cobbler or who call for any sort of labor from laundress to furnace-tender.

The neat little white house with its large lawn and well-kept old-fashioned garden had belonged to Gen. Gravesend. It was the only house one could rent above the railroad station. Descendants of the old General kept the house as a sort of landmark but had long ago built a great mansion for themselves.

Now and then some of Merewold's richest people had rented the place while their own home was being redecorated or else some relative of the real lessee used it for a while.

They were extremely careful in Merewold not to mingle with any who had failed to arrive socially and one's bank account had much to do with gauging such an arrival.

Heretofore the doctors when needed had either been high-priced specialists from the city or else someone from the Merewold Hospital staff.

"I wonder if this doctor person believes he can dwell here and mingle with us as—er—one of us?" Prof. Hoddle queried as the new doctor was being discussed at the Merewold Forum which was just a ritz name for the local club.

"Has he any background?" Miss Dickson asked.

Miss Dickson was 60 and never wearied of explaining that her grandmother was a Lady Ffolliambe of England.

People Curious

"He is nice looking," Alicia Ingram offered.

"You haven't talked with him?" her aunt asked aghast.

"Oh, no, but I looked at him as he was puttering around the roses."

"If," said the Rev. Parmenter, "he could have come to us with some letters of introduction from—er—our city friends—if he could have been vouched for."

Jerrold Atkinson was busy sizing up the situation and figuring out how long he could live on a little under $10,000.

Both problems were puzzlers. There were no local lodges. The Merewold men who belonged to lodges belonged to them in the city.

There were no high-class stores to aid, no lawyers to get acquainted with on pretense of seeking advice—not a thing to help him get in, as it were.

All one season nothing occurred to give promise that Jerrold Atkinson, M. D., would ever get a patient or even a nod of acquaintance in Merewold.

Every day at a given hour he took his black case went out to his car and drove speedily out of the colony. Some days he went one way, some another. He drove rapidly and seemed very businesslike.

"It's an ancient ruse," Prof. Hoddle said. "Doctors have long practiced it. The chances are he has no patients at any place."

This was a safe bet.

When a stray lad from down below the station, who had loitered after delivering some goods, ran in front of Alicia Ingram's car and was bowled over, Alicia, in a panic, rushed him to Dr. Atkinson's.

The doctor patched up the youngster's leg where the fender cut him. He did a very businesslike job despite the fact that his thoughts were mostly on Alicia and her shiny black hair and her deep dark eyes. Dr. Atkinson had never had any use for skinny blondes or any other sort of blondes. This girl was just his type.

The boy was sent along home with a warning to never again run in front of cars.

Alicia was grateful, although she knew, and she knew that the doctor—having witnessed it—also knew that it was mostly her fault.

"If you will send me the bill, doctor," Alicia said, scribbling the address on her card, "I shall be quite grateful."

Jerrold bowed.

Offer Rejected

He sent her a bill. It was for $10.

Alicia was just a trifle surprised.

She had told her aunt about it. Her aunt lived with her for propriety's sake. It was Alicia who had the big fortune, but this haughty aunt had the faculty of giving one the impression that she was making a great sacrifice and doing Alicia an immense favor.

"Ten dollars to put some adhesive tape on a boy's knee, think of it," Alicia said, "and at that rate, his charges in an obstetrical case would be around ten thousand!"

"Really, Alicia, such reference—"

"Now be nice, Aunty—there are such things as obstetrical cases, you know!"

Aunty sighed.

A few days later Alicia said, "What do you think, that Dr. Jerrold indorsed my $10 check and sent it to the charity ward fund at the hospital!"

"I think it a crude attempt to obtain recognition in a circle he is not fitted for," she said, snippily.

Alicia stopped next day as Jerrold was fussing over some of his horse. She thanked him prettily for the donation.

"I am on that committee, Doctor, many thanks for your thoughtfulness," she said.

Are you indeed. How interesting, Miss Ingram," he answered as if not well aware of it all the time.

His offer to take charge of a few patients in this charity ward people from below the station was rather coldly received and turned down with formal thanks. The staff doctors didn't want him working his way into their little medical monarchy. When they went to attend Merewold patients it meant whopping big fees.

Dr. Atkinson knew Merewold and the Merewold snobs quite well by the end of the season without having met any of them socially and only Alicia Ingram occasionally.

Now and then she stopped to talk to him about his flower garden, but she never mentioned this to her austere aunt. When some friend mentioned that she saw her talking with that doctor person, Alicia murmured something about the doctor's donation to the hospital's charity ward.

Social Rivals

There was but one rift in Merewold and that never appeared to any except the few leaders socially. Mrs. Hoddle, wife of the retired professor whose millions came from an ancestor and not from his earnings, considered herself to be the real leader in Merewold. Prof. Hoddle's father had developed the place and had built the first notable mansion.

Mrs. Elias Ostrander owned the most imposing residence in Merewold and with the exception of Alicia Ingram who was too young to even care to be a dignified society leader, she owned the largest bank account.

For this reason she believed that she really was the social leader and arbiter.

The residents took no sides. They went to the receptions and teas of both ladies and both ladies went to the other places, but Mrs. Hoddle and Mrs. Ostrander were quiet stubborn rivals just the same.

If Mrs. Hoddle had a picture of her lawn fete in the city paper's rotogravure section, Mrs. Ostrander would promptly arrange some other affair as speedily as possible and see to it that her picture was used.

Alicia leaned a little toward Mrs. Ostrander, who was cheerful and lively.

One day it had been raining heavily. Mrs. Ostrander was giving a bridge that evening for the fund that was to help build an open-air auditorium in the private Merewold Fenway, wherein none save Merewold property owners might go without a pass.

"This will spoil a whole table," Mrs. Ostrander complained to Alicia, "and my sum to be turned into the fund won't equal Mrs. Hoddle's—it is devilishly unfortunate."

"Well," Alicia said, "I can suggest something."

She did, but Mrs. Ostrander hesitated.

"Your position is secure, go ahead," Alicia urged.

And that was how at 9 that evening Dr. Jarrold Atkinson received a telephone call.

"Please come up to Mrs. Ostrander's home at once, Doctor. It is a matter of first aid."

Dr. Atkinson arrived and was greeted by Mrs. Ostrander and Alicia, who introduced him.

"Don't be angry about this, Doctor," Alicia begged, and then she explained that the first aid needed was one bridge player to make up a table.

Snobs Surprised

Really, an unusual sort of call, but one cannot be rude to fair ladies in such distress," the doctor answered, inwardly rejoicing.

He played bridge as he had never done before. When he was Mrs. Ostrander's partner and Alicia played against him, she deliberately played a poor game to help the doctor and Mrs. Ostrander win.

During the conversation someone mentioned Sir Humphries Dunston, a noted young explorer recently knighted and whose sister had married a cousin of royalty.

"Odd coincidence, I had a letter from him last week. He will be over in a month and I am to take him over to the Explorers' Club to make an address," the doctor explained.

Merewold snobs stared at each other in amazement. This was quite different!

"But how—er—your entry to the Explorers' Club, doctor?" Prof. Hoddle asked. He was ever a doubting Thomas.

"They made me a member—because of a three-year trip as physician with Grinnell's expedition in the Gobi Desert," he explained.

He took Alicia home.

"You darling, to suggest that 'First Aid' call," he said as he embraced her.

"That's nothing, Jerrold—the brainy part was when I made Cousin Tom Ir[illegible] promise to get Donald Stark too drunk to keep his date here, so that I could have a reason for suggesting that Mrs. Ostrand[illegible] call you!"

It was an October wedding. Mrs. Hoddle, Mrs. Ostrander and all the other Merewold aristocrats declared that Alicia had really made a brilliant match.

THE SHOP GIRLS' CHAMPION

(Editor's Note—We are always glad to receive and print accounts of heroism, etc., which will inspire others to do likewise. The following account was sent us by Glen Studebaker, Chicago, Ill. His letter, dated Nov. 24, 1867, was unavoidably delayed by the dead letter office, but finally reached us yesterday.)

THE SHOP GIRL'S CHAMPION

(Subject of Illustration.)

Max Rosenberg is a gay drummer, who represents a house of dealers in silks, New York. Max was in Chicago a few days ago and visited the stores frequently. One of the saleslades is a Mrs. Maxine Rosenberg, whose dark eyes and bright smile haunted Max whenever he went to his hotel. He wrote a note to Mrs. Rosenberg, and dropped it near where she stood. She was induced by friends to open the note, which requested her to meet the writer at 6:20 that evening in front of the First National Bank. The male clerks in the same store persuaded the young woman to keep the appointment.

Rosenberg was highly elated at the sight of Mrs. Rosenberg, and thanked her for being so prompt. Just at this moment one of the clerks named Rosenberg, stepped up and asked Rosenberg if he was acquainted with the young lady whom he addressed, adding that he was her husband. Rosenberg declared that he knew her, and remarked the lack of family resemblance between his interviewer and the young lady. Rosenberg then turned to Mrs. Rosenberg and asked if she knew the man with whom they were conversing. On receiving a negative reply, Rosenberg at once threw off his coat, and, striking out from the shoulder, landed a good one from his left fist on Rosenberg's nose. Rosenberg picked himself up in such haste that he lost his baggage, a sample case containing $5,000 worth of goods, his cane, and hat, and beat a hasty retreat.

Detroit Election Has Lesson for Pittsburgh

The election of Judge Frank Murphy as mayor of Detroit in the election Tuesday that resulted from the recall of Mayor Charles Bowles should bring good cheer to the people of Pittsburgh, to the people of every American city. It is one of the most inspiring things that has occurred in years.

For Judge Murphy is almost unbelievably clean and upright, as well as able. And he violated all the rules of practical politics in his campaign. He refused to accept campaign contributions in excess of one dollar. He refused to promise jobs in return for political support. He refused to say unkind things about his opponents, confining himself strictly to the issues. When he was called upon to choose between alienating friends and doing violence to his conscience he unhesitatingly chose the former.

No wonder the professional politicians said he hadn't a chance to win. No wonder they are astounded by his victory.

Detroit's experience justifies the recall as a political instrument through which a misgoverned people may obtain relief. While Bowles was mayor, it was charged, Detroit was dominated by racketeers, and the spoils system was introduced into various city governments in defiance of the city charter. At last the people, righteously indignant, recalled him.

In the election Tuesday Bowles was a candidate, seeking vindication. The opposition was divided among four candidates. George Engel had the backing of the silk-stocking element, the News and the Free Press. The race was thought by many to lie between him and Bowles. Judge Murphy had the support of the Detroit Times, the Hearst paper.

Murphy fearlessly advocated the things that every intelligent person recognizes are necessary for efficient, economical municipal government, but which are unpopular nevertheless with professional politicians. He denounced the spoils system. Referring to the police department, he said:

"Appointment and promotion should be based solely on merit. Political influence or connections must be given no consideration whatsoever in determining a man's fitness for this supremely important work."

And there were many other things he said which apply, like the foregoing, just as aptly to the situation in Pittsburgh as to Detroit.

Judge Murphy's success proves two important things—that if the people of a great American city want a good mayor badly enough they can get one, and that it is not always necessary to compromise with principle to win a municipal election.

Pittsburgh can take heart!

Wholesale Destruction Of Roadside Signboards

No sorrow will be aroused, except, possibly, in the advertisers themselves, by the announcement of the Pennsylvania Department of Highways that its caretakers have just completed the destruction of 32,225 roadside signboards erected in violation of the law.

It is regrettable to note that the illegal signs were most plentiful in Western Pennsylvania, and correspondingly gratifying that this section has been most thoroughly rid of them.

The campaign was directed against signs on the highway right-of-way and those erected on abutting private property without definite permission.

The extent to which the abuse had grown can be judged from the fact that 6,427 illegal signs were removed from the highways in Erie County alone, while Armstrong and Butler Counties contributed between 1,000 and 2,000 each, and Beaver, Washington, Greene, Somerset, Crawford and Venango Counties between 500 and 1,000 each. Allegheny County is not mentioned in the report.

Pennsylvania's scenery will compare favorably with that of any state. Its highways are excellent. What a pity that the beauty that invites tourists should be marred by great roadside signs! Could anything be more exasperating than to have a splendid view shut off by an unsightly advertising board?

The Highways Department will receive public approval for its destruction of the illegal signs.

Chicken Hill's Unhappy Plight Calls for Relief

Citizens will be glad to learn that Councilman W. Y. English has promised to look into conditions on Chicken Hill.

Chicken Hill unquestionably needs some municipal improvements.

It is so high, so isolated, so steep that, according to the residents, the police will not bother to go there for a mere burglary. Nothing short of murder interests them. Fire apparatus cannot climb the hill. Physicians experience difficulty in reaching patients. The dead are brought down in wheelbarrows.

And now, to cap the climax, one of the two streets by which the hill could be approached has been closed, adding to the residents' difficulties.

Chicken Hill is not out in the wilderness somewhere. It is in Pittsburgh—in the West End—and as taxpayers of Pittsburgh its inhabitants are entitled to relief.

Pennsylvania's Forests Produce Too Little Wood

Lumber is being consumed in the United States at a faster rate than new wood is being produced; so it is a mathematical certainty that unless a change of policy is effected Americans will be face to face sooner or later with an acute shortage of this very important material, so extensively used in everything from the cradle to the coffin.

Dr. Joseph S. Illick, Pennsylvania's state forester, suggests something that can be done to stave off or prevent the lumber famine. He reports that studies made of tree growth show that the 13,000,000 acres of forest land in Pennsylvania are producing on the average less than one-tenth of the wood they are capable of yielding, and most of the wood produced is inferior in quality and low in value.

With improved forestry methods, prevention of forest fires, and effective combatting of blights, Pennsylvania's woodlands could be made in time to supply all the lumber requirements of the state. At present we are paying millions of dollars annually in freight charges alone for lumber brought in from the South and the Pacific Coast states. That money is worth saving.

"Bugs" Baer Says:

The Ambassador

Which reminds us that he should be in England.

Gen. Dawes, which title is really the ambassador in first person, singular, probably got his roving habit while vice president of these free and independent miniature golf courses.

"Bugs" Baer

"If the office seeks the man," thought Charley. "I'll give it a good hunt."

So while Mr. Coolidge was practicing journalism in the White House, the general went around blowing smoke in people's faces, dedicating structureless corner stones and whipping the hot plate for stuffed trout.

In a job like that they give you railroad fair by the yard, nobody cares where you are going, and, if there is a welcoming committee at your destination, it is always waiting for somebody else. There might be some pleasure in resigning if there was a chance of your being missed.

It was a job that didn't even rate a reprimand. That's how Charley got the wanderlust. He decided that the next job he got he would take his bicycle with him.

Being ambamador to England is quite important if you don't dress right. And Charley made it important.

He refused to wear short, silk pants because he knew that some smart American tourist would sell side-show tickets to him.

He simply puffed his pipe in the affirmative, shook hands with strangers, pumphandles and everything that isn't nailed down, and decided to look for the antediluvial man in Spain.

Searching for prehistoric man would have been a vacation if Charle, hadn't been in politics in America long before.

But he did have hopes of finding the Cro-magnon esplanade and digging up a more agreeable kind of diplomat.

But, after he had excavated his first spadeful of Spanish turf, he was ordered to replace his divots by the greens committee of the Siberian Peninsula.

So he didn't discover the ancient citizen, but evened up matters by talking with a French taxi driver.

That's almost the same thing. And when you drive in a Paris taxicab you are the mummy in the case.

His trip in the interests of science and research has aroused the admiration of the scientific intellectuals of Europe, who are always jealous of rivalry.

After adding up all that Ambassador Dawes discovered, they have made him their friend for life. He will be allowed to dedicate a miniature golf course in the Swiss lake dwellings and to make a speech in a rubber boat.

CHEMISTRY AND FUEL

By Archibald Henderson

The trend of civilization in the third decade of this century points to transportation as the coming industry of the future, transcending in importance every other form of human occupation. The astonishing growth of the automotive industry, man's increasing preoccupation with flight, the felt need in all departments of human endeavor for greater mobility and higher speed, all point conclusively in this direction. Mechanics, physics and chemistry are being intensively developed to keep pace with the rapidly growing need of individuals and groups, of corporations and of nations. Next after food production in importance come the pressing demands of transportation needs.

Physics is actively employed in determining the properties and constitution of the materials employed in vehicles of transport. Mechanics is constantly at work in the determination of new types of framework, new combinations of mechanism. Chemistry is working overtime in developing new types of fuel needed for all forms of vehicular traffic—locomotives, ships, motor cars, airplanes and dirigibles. Energy, power, speed—these constitute primary and vital needs of man as individual, as merchant, as agent of industry and instrument of commerce.

In his "The Future of Chemistry" Jones goes so far as to say: "It would very likely be possible to show that lack of mechanical transport, as well as disease, lay at the root of the troubles of all earlier civilization, as without it they were doomed to stagnation. Since we may expect still greater improvements in transport we may assume progressively higher integration, as transport is the keystone of social life and culture; food is that of population."

If this point of view, startling as it seems at first sight, be accepted, it is impossible to avoid the conclusion that fuel has become more impgrtant that food. The exhaustion of the world's supply of petrol is already in sight. It is appalling to realize that the oil supplies of the United States, the largest single producer, are rapidly nearing exhaustion. If the scientists are right, these supplies will be entirely exhausted within two or three decades.

In consequence, feverish efforts are being made in chemical laboratories all over the world to devise new forms of fuel which can be realized in virtually unlimited quantities at a low cost. Synthetic substitutes for petrol are edgerly being sought.

In the last resort, coal is the great natural resource upon which we must depend for the manufacture of new forms of fuel. All the fuels now being sought analyzed and experimented with are hydrogenous liquid products derived from coal. Fortunately, the world's coal supply is ample for the world's immediate need — the present estimate is about a hundred billion tons.

LISTEN, WORLD

By Elsie Robinson

"What is love?" she asks. And expects me to supply a reliable list of symptoms.

It can't be done. Love isn't a definite visitation like measles, pink-eye or hives . . . although its sufferers often act as if they had all three. Love has no set reactions—no regular program. It varies with each human being. It takes its quality and dimensions from each different character.

LOVE IS WHAT WE MAKE IT.

For love isn't something apart from us . . . it isn't something that happens TO us, as is generally supposed. It is something that we build within ourselves, out of our dreams and our hungers. Then, when the time is ripe, hang it on the other fellow!

That, of course, isn't the way love is supposed to happen. We have woven so many romantic theories about love, we have been so dazed by its ecstasies and despairs that we have entirely obscured the truth. But the truth is that love is home brew. We are not the helpless victims of a little pink god. We make our own love patterns, we select our own lovers, in the sealed and secret laboratories of our own spirits.

We make these patterns and selections to fit our own needs. Each heart knows its own needs. Each heart seeks its own expression and compensation for its loneliness, its vanity, its fear, its dream of beauty. Out of that need we build our picture of the Ideal Companion. Then, some day we find, or think we have found, the living answer to our dream. And we promptly proceed to load our desire and delight on that other mortal . . . who probably goes bow-legged under the strain.

That's how love comes. Not like an epidemic—or a thunder bolt over which we have no control. But as the inevitable result of our own hidden processes . . .

And our love, when we finally give it, will be all of a piece with the rest of our natures. Which means that there are as many kinds of love as there are kinds of men. When you say "I love you" you do not mean what I mean when I say "I love you." For you love according to your need and capacity. And I love according to my need and capacity. And no two of us have the same need or capacity.

What is love? IT IS THE ANSWER TO OURSELVES. It is partly, of course, a physical answer . . . but it is also, to a much greater extent, a mental and spiritual answer. It is the clamor of the heart, reaching out for fulfillment and completion.

How great is love? As great as you are. If, in the other departments of your life, you are intelligent, refined, good natured, generous, fair, orderly, useful then your love will reflect all these qualities. But if you're silly and selfish and sour, your love will be as mean and stunted as the rest of your nature.

Expect no miracles of love! LIKE WATER IT CAN RISE NO HIGHER THAN ITS SOURCE. YOU ARE THE SOURCE OF YOUR LOVE.

Worst Story I Have Heard Today

By WILL ROGERS.

The returned tourists tell all kinds of silly stories about Americans in Paris. Every tourist says he behaved himself fine, but all the other Americans acted terrible right before the polite Frenchmen. Well, they tell about one American that ordered oyster stew in a swell Paris restaurant, and he found a pearl in the first oyster. He swore and put the pearl on the plate beside him. The next oyster had a pearl in it, too, and it happened that every one of the 24 oysters in that big bowl had a pearl in it, and by the time the American had got to the last one he was swearing so loud that the boss come around and started talking nice to him in French.

"I don't know what you're talking about," says the American, "but if I'd a knowed you was running a jewelry store here, I'd gone somewhere else to eat! Take your jewelry, and I'll go out and get a ham sandwich!" And he throwed the pearls in the manager's face and run out without paying.

The Rhyming Optimist

By ALINE MICHAELIS.

Pan's Flute

Because I roved the forest through
On many a silver night
When all the trees were etched in black
Against the moon-rays white,
Because I danced upon the grass
To Pan's compelling flute,
I can not ever quite forget,
Old voices are not mute.
So now, upon a moonlit night
When down the lane I go,
My steps are often strangely light,
I twirl an eager toe;
And through insistent chorouses
Cicadas', crickets', frogs',
I listen till I catch the notes
Of Pan, through winds and fogs.
In ages past I wandered down
The moon-drenched forest aisles,
And nevermore shall I be free
From Pan's alluring wiles.
When Earth was young I knew the spell
Of piping, sweet and shrill.
And sometimes, on a moon-drenched night,
I feel its power still.

THE SCIENCE OF LIFE

By H. G. WELLS

In Collaboration With

Prof. Julian Huxley and George P. Wells.

The germ-plasm is like a garden, and Natural Selection in many respects like its gardener. Weeds are always cropping up in it, and threatening to swamp the cultivated plants. Selection, as well as sometimes helping in the creation of new types of flowers or fruit, is forever busy with the humbler task of weeding.

But there are gardeners and gardeners; some have not the time or energy for weeding of a professional standard: others may even prefer an untidy garden. Thus, dropping our metaphor, sheltered conditions often allow variations to persist which more rigorous selection would eliminate.

H. G. Wells

It is commonly believed that this applies particularly to human heredity. Modern civilization is said to be lightening the severity of the selective process upon our race. It is also commonly believed by the same people—but usually at different hours of the day—that modern civilization is more exacting upon nerves and health than any previous state of society. These fine issues we shall discuss later.

Section 3. Natural Selection Under Changing Conditions.

But now passing from the consideration of natural selection as a species-conserving and species-regulating influence, let us look at it in operation as a fosterer of variations and so as adapting species to new conditions. Here is a case we take from J. B. S. Haldane's admirable Possible Worlds.

"The assertion is still sometimes made that no one has ever seen natural selection at work in the production of new characters. It is therefore, perhaps worth giving in some detail a case recently described by Harrison.

"About 1800 a large woods in the Cleveland district of Yorkshire containing pine and birch was divided into two by a stretch of heath. In 1885 the pines in one division were replaced by birches, while in the other the birches were almost entirely ousted by pines. In consequence the moth oporabia autumnata, which inhabited both woods, has been placed in two different environments. In both woods a light and a dark variety occur, but in the pine wood over 96 per cent are dark, in the birch wood only 15 per cent.

"This is not due to the direct effect of the environment, for the dark pine-wood race became no lighter after feeding the caterpillars on birch trees in captivity for three generations, nor can the light form be darkened by placing this variety on pines. The reason for the difference was discovered on collecting the wings of moths found lying about in the pine wood, whose owners had been eaten by owls, bats and night-jars.

"Although there were more than 25 dark living moths to each light one a majority of the wings found were light-colored.

"The whiter moths, which show up against the dark pines, are being exterminated, and in a few more years natural selection will have done its work and the pine wood will be inhabited entirely by dark-colored insects."

There is a simple and pretty instance of the role of natural selection in bringing about adaptation. Another, equally simple, is known from agricultural practice. Various strains of cereals imported into Scandinavia in the course of a few years changed their flowering and seeding period in adaptation to the shorter Summers of their new home.

This was for long supposed to be due to an inheritance of acquired characters. But careful experiment at the famous research station of Svalof showed that it was a simple effect of selection. As wheat is normally self-fertilizing, a wheat field consists of a mixture of pure lines. The imported seeds belonged to a number of pure lines, differing in the rapidity of their maturing.

The rigorous selection of their new northern environment weeded out all save the most rapidly maturing, and so the average of the stock was changed. There is here no actual record of new mutation in the same direction; but any that occurred would have been seized upon by selection and fixed.

Of course, these are small changes, but then, if we are to produce larger ones we must either alter the time-dimension of our experiments and observations, or do something to accelerate the process.

NEW YORK DAY BY DAY

By O. O. McIntyre

NEW YORK, Sept. 12.—Thoughts while strolling: Gentle ladies in black who sit quietly feeding pigeons in library park. B. A. Rolfe plays tunes I like. Those out-doorsey men with springy walks. Nobody wears a sport shirt like John Barrymore. Or a dinner suit like Jack Buchanan.

Arthur McKeogh, a Troy, N. Y., boy, who made good in the city. Clouds like torn wool tipped with fluffs of pink. Wonder what would happen to Lillian Gish in a windstorm? Buses to the right, autos to the left and trolleys in front—but here I go like a cutter in the wind. And I made it!

Splotched geometrical canvases galleries kid us is art, the teases! Never heard anyone use acerbity in conversation. And Rupert Hughes is the only person I ever heard use deracinate. I could follow those fascinating Albino twins all day. Turn over collars with square corners again.

John W. Thomason, Jr., the writing, fighting marine. And he sketches, too. A new 5 and 10 I have not prowled through. Fred and Betsy Drake. The hat makers better do something about the bare-headed business. Howard Acton and Julius Tannen look alike. Wish I could run across yellow tomato preserves.

Moneta, who runs the Italian cafe in Mulberry street. Where judges and lawyers g[illegible]. And who looks like an E. Phi[illegible] Oppenheim count. People from South Africa interest me. But I'm surprised when they don't carry spears. Whatever became of hand-painted coal vases?

Timid tenement tots—alliteration without a struggle—who drag kindling wagons across town. The eagle-like gaze of Max Steur, the criminal lawyer. Those alert, freshly shaven Mannies with mama complexes but quick on a speakeasy draw. Flora Zabelle. Raymond Hitchcock's widow.

Never knew a man to pass an open coal hole without peering down. Ask somebody: "What is a spiral stairway?" They'll do it every time. Benny Leonard grows chubby, too. The Caledonia on 26th street where O. Henry lived. In Europe they would buy the site and erect a monument.

The latest, as of September 18, in speakeasy cocktails, comes from the East 50's, called "The Number"—meanings it makes you numb.

* * *

The new Waldorf, whose rivet-ing across the way still has me nose-thumbing it in spare time, will feature "boudoir baths"—baths 25 feet square, equipped like a miniature gymnasium.

* * *

A Sixth avenue bird store has—or had—a bright freckle-faced pea-shooter who arrived early the other morning. Deciding, as the front door was locked, it would be innocent diversion to give the birds freedom of the store, he did. Someone opened the door in midst of the fun and 200 birds winged out and upward. A window card heralds: "Boy wanted."

* * *

A frequent day dream is buying a dog shop and giving each dog a swell home away from auction block stuffiness. I inquired the cost of all dogs in a shop on Forty-eighth street, was told it totaled $14,320, waved to an imaginary acquaintance outside and hippety hopped to greet him.

I am an occasional patron of an Armenian restaurant on Washington street—reveling in native dishes. The other night passing the kitchen I peeked in for a glimpse of the cook, expecting a figure in a fez with perhaps a rug over his arm. Instead I saw a fat American Negress with a red bandana around her neck perspiring over an old-fashioned stove. I don't believe now there is a Dorothy Parker.

In the same cafe I met a gentleman whose hobby for 50 years is tracing the birthplace of Columbus. He is not certain it is Milan or Genoa and won't give up.

"You often," writes R. S. Dodge City, "talk about shrill winds around the Flatiron building. Come to Kansas this fall and catch at the tails of our playful tornadoes."

ONCE OVERS

By J. J. Mundy

Aren't you too fearful?

To fear to do things because of possibility of failure or injury is to show a decidedly weak streak in your makeup.

Fear has possibly retarded all your undertakings throughout your life.

As a driver you seek to avoid traffic—it makes you so nervous, with the result that lack of experience tells at a crucial moment.

All your life you have sought the easiest way.

You have been relieved of much worry during the years, but now troublesome thoughts come because you have not been as successful as you have wished.

But you have favored yourself for so many years that you haven't the sort of nerve that it takes to carry things to a successful issue.

At last a full sense of your timorous disposition has sunk in and you feel completely at sea as to which way to turn.

You realize that you are incompetent and know the reason.

You have lost confidence in yourself.

When you have these doubts and wonder whether or not you are right, that is the time to work harder and fear less.
